Selectman Quigley starts a blog

Wants to generate discussion on issues

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Karen Quigley, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, has started an online blog.

A blog (the word is a blend of web and log) is a type of website where individuals, or a group, make regular entries on a particular subject.

For Quigley, the subject matter centers on what is going on at Town Hall.

"It's one selectmen's view on the issues and challenges facing Cohasset," Quigley wrote in her blog's description. "The Quigley Reports," which is the name of the blog, is an effort to reach a different segment of the population and be a forum for discussion on town business.

"(The idea for a blog) stems from the fact that I believe it is important the executive officers of the town keep in touch with the people," Quigley said.

So far, Quigley has made nine entries on the blog varying in topic from the Bear Hill water tank access and cell antenna issue to Treat's Pond to upcoming selectmen's agendas.

"There's a whole age category that lives electronically," Quigley said. With the blog she hopes to have a medium that appeals and is accessible to those who are attached at the hip to an iPhone or Blackberry.

"I think it's a good way to get out my opinion – not the Selectmen's – on certain issues," Quigley said. "You can log on quickly, take a look, and see what's happening."

But more than a way to disseminate information and opinions, Quigley is eager to have discussions on the issues on the blog and gather feedback from residents. With each blog entry there is space for readers to leave comments under a real name, or a pen name.

"By doing this I hope to get input from people I wouldn't normally cross paths with," Quigley said. Some comments have been left on the blog website and Quigley said she has been getting e-mail comments as well.

"I'm just as happy if people disagree with me as if they agree with me," Quigley said. "It's when you have those differing viewpoints that I can reach the best decision."

In addition to posting her thoughts about ongoing issues in the town, Quigley is also posting the Selectmen's agenda and conducting informal polls. The first two polls concern what the townspeople are looking for in a new town manager.

While there are many other online media out there (i.e. Facebook, twitter) Quigley said the blog format was most familiar to her.

Quigley said she did not know of any other town officials in Cohasset, or outside of Cohasset, using a blog to help get the word out on town issues.

"This is a way to bring town government into the 21st century," Quigley said.

In phone calls this week, the other Selectmen were supportive of Quigley's efforts.

"If she wants to put her thought out there like that then I think it's within her right," Selectman Paul Carlson said.

Selectman Fred Koed felt similarly.

"I'm sure my colleague, Selectman Quigley will say some things I agree with, and some I disagree with. Those Cohasset men whose photographs line a wall in the Town Hall auditorium gave their lives so that Karen Quigley, and all of us, have the right to say what we want, when we want to," Koed said in an e-mail. "I would never question anyone's right to free speech, any more than I would question the sacrifice of those men that gave us those rights."

Quigley's blog can be found at http://thequigleyreports.blogspot.com.

Policy discussion

School Committee to enforce public comment rules

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

School Committee chairman Helene Lieb is going to be using her gavel more often. When discussion from the public or the school committee veers off track, the gavel is going to come down.

At Wednesday night's School Committee meeting, policy, at it relates to public comment and the creation of the agenda, was discussed.

The review of the committee's existing public comment policy was in part a result of a September meeting where some felt discussion veered off course into a personal attack.

"We're still going to have public comment, but it has to be polite, respectful and constructive. There can be nothing personal or (about) personnel," Lieb said. "We have to zip our lip when we start naming people."

In reviewing the current policy Lieb found some of the committee's policy did not align with the revised Open Meeting Law. The Open Meeting Law, now under the Attorney General's Office, governs town business and ensures the town's business is public.

The current policy states speakers will be allowed three minutes to present their material. The chairman may extend the time limit, if necessary. It calls for written comments longer than three minutes to be presented to the committee before or after the meeting for the committee members' review and consideration.

School Committee member Jeanne Astino said all written comments once read are part of the public record.

Paul Schubert, school committee member, suggested the committee consult with Town Counsel when revising the policy because of the revised Open Meeting Law was brand new to all of them.

Schubert hesitated to make the policy any more specific because clear-cut rules already exist through Robert's Rules or the Open Meeting Law.

"We don't necessarily need to reinvent (the rules)," Schubert said.

The committee also discussed how the agenda is determined. According to the stated policy, the superintendent, conferring with the chair, will arrange the order of the items on the agenda.

Lieb said she would like to review the agenda in total before it gets sent out to the rest of the School Committee members.

In addition, a meeting protocol will be drafted and voted on and will eventually appear on every School Committee agenda. The Board of Selectmen has a written protocol on their agenda.

Superintendent Denise Walsh said the language for the "meeting protocol" should be consistent with the School Committee's policy.

The committee did not take any action on the policy, but referred the discussion to the policy sub-committee. The discussion will return to the committee as a whole at a later date.

Parent Jodi Tolman of Forest Circle asked what the proper procedure would be if a member of the community has an issue with a member of the administration.

Walsh said the proper channel is to go to the person's immediate supervisor after trying to address it with that person. For instance, if a parent has an issue with an assistant principal, the principal would be the next step. If the issue is with the superintendent the School Committee is her supervisor.

Lieb said she would rather the issue try to be resolved with the superintendent directly, rather than brought to the School Committee.

"When I have an issue with Dr. Walsh I give her that respect to go to her one on one," Lieb said.

The policy sub-committee will also review policies on bullying prevention, social networking websites, and electronic messaging by school committee members.

BRIEFLY

Applications for interim position

Selectmen Chairman Karen Quigley said the town has received as many as 12 applications for interim town manager. The town is seeking a professional interim town manager to fill the gap until a permanent town manager is found. Current town manager Bill Griffin is leaving Cohasset and the public sector at the end of October for a job managing a private community in Dartmouth, Mass..

The interim will fill the role for about six months, depending on when the permanent town manager is able to come on board. One of the primary criteria for the interim manager will be budget savvy.

The Selectmen intend to narrow down the candidates at their meeting on Wednesday, Oct. 13 and interview the finalists (in open session) on Monday, Oct. 20. The Selectmen aim to have someone on board as close to Griffin's departure date (Oct. 30) as possible. The deadline to submit an application for interim town manager is today, Friday, Oct. 8.

Permanent Town Manager position

The Board of Selectmen approved the language to be included in the advertisement for the permanent town manager position.

"(The town of Cohasset) seeks a highly motivated proven manager to serve as its town manager," the advertisement will read. The advertisement describes the role and responsibilities of the town manager.

"Candidate must possess 5-10 years municipal government management experience or equivalent other experience, advanced relevant degree desired, familiarity with Massachusetts' Open Meeting Law and analytical, participatory, and interpersonal skills," the advertisement reads.

Jennie Curley completes special project

Girl scouting part of family tradition

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

There are some things that we do as kids that stick with us our whole lives.

For Cohasset High senior and several other local women girl scouting is one of them.

Eighteen-year-old Jennie Curley is well on her way to officially receiving her Girl Scout Gold Award, the highest achievement in the organization.

Her final project was about looking back at how girl scouts influenced women's lives. The gold award is the capstone in a long involvement with scouting that started in kindergarten as a Daisy scout.

The Gold Award is the highest possible achievement in the organization, similar to the Boy Scouts' Eagle Scout recognition.

The criteria for a Gold Award project is very specific. The project must show leadership, longevity and impact on the community. The project is more than a good service project — it encompasses organizational, leadership, and networking skills.

To achieve a Gold Award, two badges — one in leadership, the other in career related activity — must be earned, and then a project involving 65 hours of volunteer service must be completed.

Jennie decided to seek her gold award in part because she knew it would make her mother proud and she wanted to do it for herself, "I wanted to show how much I've grown through girl scouts," Jennie said.

Originally she intended to focus her project on her grandmother, the late state representative Mary Jeanette Murray, and how girl scouts influenced her life. But when she presented her project outline to the Eastern Massachusetts Girl Scout Council they asked her to seek out other girl scouts, interview them, and find out how their involvement in scouting shaped their lives.

With the help of the Historical Society she was able to find five other former girl scouts to speak about scouting.

"It got me out of my comfort zone," Jennie said. At first, she was nervous sitting down and talking with women she had never met before, but soon realized how easy it was.

"They told me things about their scouting years and it was really interesting," Jennie said. "I'm definitely not as quiet as I was."

Among her interviews were Cohasset residents Louise Smullen, Anna Abbruzzese, Alison Callahan, and Elizabeth Richardson. On a Sunday in September she made a presentation at the Historical Society headquarters on her project. She created a booklet and poster board with photos, artifacts, and narrative. She had two historical Girl Scout uniforms as well, including one that was her grandmother's.

At the heart of the project is her grandmother who always supported scouting and her local community as a resident and as a state representative for 24 years.

"She did a lot for the community and taught me that if you put your heart into something you can make a difference," Jennie said.

Over the years, girl scouting changed for Jennie and her troop.

"My mom (Lillian Curley) was the leader and we did a lot of fun stuff," Jennie said.

Early involvement in the girl scouts was marked with trips, bonding, and discovery. As a troop they went on trips to the New England Aquarium, weekend camping trips, and a sleepover at the Children's Museum.

As time went on and the troop got smaller, the focus turned to community service. In recent years, the troop has led both toy and coat drives.

While many young girls leave scouting after elementary school Jennie said her experience with girl scouting has all been fun.

"In fifth grade you don't realize how much fun you can have. (As you get older) you're not doing it because you have to, it becomes something that you want to do," Jennie said.

There were six girls, in Jennie's grade and the grade above, who stuck with girl scouts throughout high school. They met about once every two weeks for dinner and to talk.

"The girls that stick with it all the way they become like your family," Jennie said.

Jennie Curley, a senior at Cohasset High, recently completed her Girl Scout Gold Award project. Her project was all about how involvement in Girl Scouts has influenced Cohasset women.

Girl Scout Jennie Curley gathered many scouting artifacts, such as her grandmother's old letters written from girl scout camp.

Jennie Curley, 18, interviewed six women on their experiences in Girl Scouts for her Gold Award project. Her project and various artifacts will be donated to the Historical Society.

Independent movie sets up shop in town coastal town in Maine.

Over the next three weeks the movie will be filmed in various locations in Cohasset, Hingham and Scituate. The bulk of production will take place at the Weir River Farm in Hingham (on Turkey Hill).

Around noontime on Monday evidence of a movie production could be found in scaffolding about 20-feet high with a camera set-up on top. A scene was being shot where two of the movie's characters were walking across the breezeway between the main Red Lion Inn building and the barn. The movement was being shot from multiple angles. A trailer truck was parked on South Main Street with all sorts of moviemaking equipment and various members of the production crew could be seen around the Red Lion Inn.

"It's basically a construction site that moves everyday – and we have to feed everyone, find parking and interface with local police, fire departments, and businesses," Cook said of the on-location production. He had been at the Red Lion since 3a.m. on Monday.

Passersby showed some interest in the moviemaking on Monday. Cook said people were "all smiles" as they came to see what was going on at the Red Lion. He said the top three questions he gets asked are: what's going on here, who's starring in the movie, and can I be an extra.

At the Red Lion, the barn was being turned into a yoga studio for a scene and other scenes were being shot in The Cave (the inn's basement bar), the saloon, the inn's lobby, and one of the hotel's rooms.

Making a movie is slow going; on average a day of filming yields about a minute of film. This being a smaller scale film it may be a faster production schedule with an output of three or four minutes a day, Cook said.

The movie is being shot around the South Shore throughout the month of October. Other local landmarks will make their debut in the movie: Scituate's Egypt Country Store, Fitt's Mill, Bullman Marine and Hingham's Bathing Beach and Weir River Farm.

"We couldn't have made this film without the support of the towns and the generosity of various vendors," Cook said.

Cohasset's quaintness has drawn moviemakers before. The 1987 movie "Witches of Eastwick" starring Jack Nicholson, Cher, Susan Sarandon and Michelle Pfeiffer, prominently featured

Used cars

The Mobil Mart, located at the corner of Route 3A and Sohier Street, sought a license to sell used cars on its property at the Selectmen's meeting on Monday night.

Jamal Soufan, manager at Cohasset Mobil Mart, requested a license to sell up to five used cars. Soufan said with the recession sales at the station have gone down and they hoped selling used cars would provide some supplemental income.

The Selectmen approved the license in a unanimous vote.

Technical difficulties

The Selectmen's office received several phone calls during their Monday night meeting because viewers at home could not hear the meeting. Jennifer Oram, administrative assistant for office, believed the lack of sound is a Comcast problem. She intended to call Comcast on Tuesday to see if there was a solution.

Although viewers at home could not hear them, the Selectmen did apologize for the technical difficulties.

Water and sewer deferrals

Town Meeting voters will be asked to consider instituting a deferral opportunity for water and sewer usage charges. In order to be eligible for the deferrals residents must first qualify for property tax deferrals.

"It's piggy backing what's already in place," said Deputy Assessor Mary Quill. Quill said 17 residents are currently qualified for the property tax deferral program.

The Board of Selectmen voted 4 to 0 in favor of recommending approval of the articles to town meeting.

Cohasset Triathlon all set for 2011

Holly Madden of Scituate completes the 2010 Cohasset Triathlon in 1:13:32. The fifth annual triathlon is set for Sunday, June 26, 2011 when 850 athletes will compete, starting at 8a.m.

Fire Chief Bob Silvia said a 7a.m. start created logistical problems in getting the medical area set up and in place. The later start allowed the safety officials to determine weather conditions and if they were safe for the swim portion of the race.

The race previously began at 8a.m., but was moved to a 9a.m. start in 2010. The later start caused problems throughout the course with church services and lengthened the impact of the triathlon on the day.

Quigley said she had received some comments about the inability to get out of the driveway due to competitors making their way on bikes from the Music Circus parking lot to Sandy Beach before the race.

"There's no race going on; the priority at that time should be residents," Quigley said. "In full disclosure, residents should know that starting at 5:30a.m. the roads (from the Music Circus to Sandy Beach) will be impaired."

Police Chief Mark DeLuca agreed and said more details could be placed on that route before the race to help smooth things out.

At a September meeting of the Board of Selectmen both Quigley and Selectmen Paul Carlson came with concerns generated from residents about the impact of the race on regular Sunday activity.

Quigley said she had been approached by many declaring their support for the triathlon following that September discussion and made clear "shutting down the triathlon is not the intent of the board."

Then there were more issues to be addressed.

Carlson said there was an issue with the beach being available to people who want to enjoy it on a Sunday afternoon.

The triathlon has permission from the Sandy Beach Association to use the beach for the race. This past year, the race was cleared out of the beach parking area by about 1p.m.

"That's a good portion of the beach day," Carlson said. Burnett said he would work hard to have the beach accessible by noontime.

Quigley said setting a time limit to complete each section of the course might want to be something to consider.

Burnett said that was not something he would be in favor of, "we're open to elite athletes to those who have never even done a 5K. It would break my heart to not let someone who is just trying to finish, finish the race."

Other efforts, such as the hour earlier start time and changing the swim wave configuration, should make a difference, said Chief Silvia.

"If we make this a shorter window maybe it not going to impact the town as much. I've been there when those last people cross the finish line and they have big grins on their faces. They didn't care they were the last ones; they just wanted to finish," Silvia said.

DeLuca said because the race is a "sprint triathlon" with short segments of each event (swim, bike, run) sweeping the course would cause more chaos than just letting the competitors finish.

The issue of church services – and parishioners ability to attend them – is a recurring concern of the Selectmen. Selectmen vice chair Ted Carr asked for a plan from the triathlon organizers and the police department on how to better handle the intersections where there are churches. DeLuca said he would get the plan to the Selectmen for review by early November and would meet with the affected churches (St. Anthony's, St. Stephen's, Second Congregation and First Parish) in the meantime.

After more than 30 minutes of discussion, the board voted to approve the triathlon. Burnett and public safety officials will likely be back in November to review the plan around the church intersections.

"This event is once a year – and it's a great event. We have a great town and we should share it with other people outside of this town. It's a showcase for the town…it seems like (the organizers) are open to suggestions," said Selectman Fred Koed. "Let's try these changes and see if there is improvement. If we keep trying to change it, it's going to complicate rather than help it."

Triathlon to give back to Cohasset non-profits

Race director Bill Burnett said he planned to form a Cohasset Triathlon grant organization. A to-be-formed board would accept grant applications from Cohasset-based organizations and non-profits. A designated amount of money from the triathlon will go to the cause selected by the board. The details are still being worked out, Burnett said.

The triathlon also raises money for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation.

Mousing around at the library

At the end of Next Chapter's first basic skills workshop at the library, all nine participants were smiling. No one stormed out in angst and no one had a melt down as instructor Gayle Walsh softly reminded students to be "gentle with your mice."

Although enrollment was limited to the six library laptops, three participants brought their own laptops and followed along with the rest of the class. After Gayle's brief introduction, students logged on to a common site, then clicked and scrolled and mousercized throughout the class.

"We're fortunate to have received grants from both the Social Service League of Cohasset and the MA Board of Library Commissioners to insure our lifelong learners will acquire new skills they want and need," said Gayle Walsh.

All participants brought different levels of expectations to the workshop.

"Fantastic, great, exactly what I wanted," said Pat Doyle.

"I'm here because I want to improve my rudimentary skills and develop an understanding of the technology behind the machine," added Marilyn Hobson.

Although the next two basic classes on using email and the internet are currently filled, interested participants should phone the library (781-383-1348) and ask to be waitlisted as cancellations do occur. The library plans periodically to offer all three classes throughout the year as long as interest is keen.

Lecture Series to start at Glastonbury Abbey

Glastonbury Abbey's Lecture Series Listening to Other Voices: Be Not Afraid: Do Justice, Act Kindly," will be presented at 7:15 p.m., on Thursday, Oct. 14. James Carroll will present a lecture titled "Be Not Afraid": Words that Ended the Cold War in Peace.

In 1979 in Krakow, Poland, Pope John Paul II used those three small words in addressing the nuclear standoff. Carroll will consider how grassroots movements for democracy, reform and peace on both sides of the Iron Curtain ended the nuclear standoff in non-violence. He will tell how that effort and success is an example to follow today in grassroots movements for reform, peace and change, all of which are essential to the Catholic Church and the world. Best-selling, award-winning author of 10 novels, a memoir and numerous non-fiction books, Carroll is a Boston Globe columnist, regular contributor to The Daily Beast and the Distinguished Scholar in Residence at Suffolk University. His latest book, "Practicing Catholic" (2009) looks at what it means to be a Catholic today and argues for ongoing reform in the church.

Lectures are free – donations welcome. The program will take place in the Conference Center at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham. No reservations, limited seating – first-come, first-served. For information, visit the Web site at glastonburyabbey.org.

OPINION

Hollywood here

For a few weeks, part of Cohasset and surrounding towns are going to be home to a movie. The independent Hollywood film "Sunny Side Up" is not on the scale of "Witches of Eastwick" and "Housesitter" – but it is exciting to know that Cohasset is still "on the map" when it comes to films and star attraction.

We recall back in the mid-1990s an independent film had Vikings charging up the rocky coast off Jerusalem Road. We are not sure if the film ever made it to the theaters – but it did provide some excitement!

The town common was host to a Disney movie for a day or two back in 2001 and earlier, the common was also the centerpiece of a Maxwell House coffee commercial, as we recall.

Some readers may not be aware that Humphrey Bogart spent the summer of 1934 in Cohasset where he acted on the Town Hall stage as part of the South Shore Players. He was married to Mary Phillips, who was more famous at that time than her husband. Then Bogie was the former husband of Helen Menken, another noted actress of the time.

Also on hand that summer was stage and movie actor, Broderick Crawford, who was the son of Vaudeville performers, and later became a well known television actor when he starred as Chief Dan Mathews in "Highway Patrol," a police drama in the 1950s.

Anyway, the trio – Bogie, Crawford and Miss Phillips – were stopped on Fearing Road in Hingham on an August night that summer for drunken driving and disturbing the peace.

Crawford, the driver, was sentenced to 15 days in jail for drunken driving; Phillips and Bogie were each charged with disturbing the peace and were fined.

The Boston Herald Traveler reported: "The first act roused the residents deep in sleep. The second act brought them to their bedroom windows. The climax came quickly. Telephones buzzed. The police were called. Not that the wrathy residents didn't appreciate fine acting. The ability of the actors was unquestioned. But as one of them allowed 'We wish they'd done it in pantomime.'

"The hilarious and impromptu playlet ended with the arrival of the Hingham police. The last act was played in the Hingham court today, with Judge Daniel Shea directing the production and the Hingham cops taking over the starring roles."

When the Music Circus featured musical productions – such as "Annie Get Your Gun" – it was not unusual to bump into stars. We recall when Tab Hunter's arrival caused a sensation with teen girls. On a personal note, we got Anita Bryant's autograph at Minot Beach and got Jerry Lewis' autograph at Gates in North Scituate!

Did you know that Zsa Zsa Gabor had a pink phone in her room at the old Cliff Hotel in Minot?

Last Friday night — who should walk into the Satuit Tavern on Jericho Road — but John Slattery (Roger Sterling in the popular TV drama, "Mad Men"). We initially thought he might have a role in the independent movie being filmed here but as it turns out he has a sister who lives in Scituate.

Sewer work reaches milestone

COMMENTARY

JOHN BECK

Last week the betterment notice for the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue and North Cohasset sewer project was mailed to each property owner in the new sewer district. This is a significant milestone for the project and a good time to summarize its status. All of the work associated with installing the collection system and modifying the Wastewater Treatment Plant (WWTP) is finished. The only remaining work to be done, and most obviously so, is the paving. The town has a contract with a "consortium paver" and is on a schedule to finish the paving before winter. Well over a hundred residences have hooked on to their new sewer, and the number of applicants for hookup continues to grow. Everyone must be hooked up by the end of 2012. Although the final numbers will not be available until all the paving is complete and reconciliation with contractors is finished, it is quite likely that the final project cost will be more than a million dollars under the amount authorized by Town Meeting.

The Sewer Commission also thought it timely to negotiate a new operations contract for the WWTP and will shortly be recommending a contract with a new operator.

The Sewer Commission also thought it timely to negotiate a new operations contract for the WWTP and will shortly be recommending a contract with a new operator. The commission considered the option of operating the plant and collection system with full time town employees and found no savings possible. Cohasset is simply too small for that option to yield any benefit. The financial and technical terms of the new contract are quite favorable to the users compared with the current one. This new contract, the completion of the project and the expanded user base have allowed us to conservatively project a long term budget for the sewer department that will not require an increase in rates for at least the next five years. This five-year budget was reviewed with the town's Budget Committee last week. Our last increase was in 2007 and we are looking forward to completing an eight-year span without the need for an increase in rates for sewage treatment in Cohasset.

I have always believed in transparency when it involves spending other people's money, particularly when it comes to the allocation of costs and determining how we pay our bills. One of the fundamental tenets of state law in setting rates is that they should be "fair and equitable." I have extended that philosophy to the day-to-day decisions associated with allocating all costs, whether for the sewer project or other expenditures involved in running the department. Many of those decisions are not black and white and require careful and thoughtful judgment. That's why we have people in charge and not computers. Those judgments have always been based on the fair and equitable philosophy. Our doors are open, as are our books, and we welcome all inquiries.

John Beck is Chairman, Cohasset Board of Sewer Commissioners.

Financial assistance with betterments, septic systems

For those with failing septic systems — or getting ready to tie into town sewer — financial assistance may be on the way. A state-run betterment program is available and will be up for a Town Meeting vote at the Nov. 15 Special Town Meeting. The program allows communities to loan out money for sewer improvements so the expense can be paid back over time (with interest).

Selectmen voted 4 to 0 this week to recommend the article's approval at Town Meeting (Selectman Leland Jenkins was absent).

The loans can be used for the repair, replacement or upgrade of a failed on-site system, or to connect to town sewer. On-site sewage disposal systems options include conventional septic systems (Title 5), innovative/alternative systems and connections to an existing sewer, if available.

The vote would allow the town to borrow the money, but the program is not designed to burden the town with more taxes.

The Community Septic Management Program is a state-run program. It is provided to towns through a state revolving fund loan at zero percent interest. Through an application process, the town then re-loans the money out to homeowners at an advantageous interest rate to be determined. The homeowners then pay back the loan over 20 years. The loan is transferable if the property is sold.

A Town Meeting vote is necessary to enter into the betterment program. The vote would allow the town to borrow the money, but the program is not designed to burden the town with more taxes. The homeowner receiving the betterment loans undertakes the primary repayment obligation. A municipal lien is placed on a property if the participating homeowner defaults.

The Board of Health would run the program, but the state provides a $15,000 grant to start-up the program. Board of Health officials said other municipalities contract out to a consultant to administer the program. Pembroke and Hanson have been part of the program for several years.

Sohier Street first in line for paving

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Flash, flash, big paving news — Last week we spoke at great length about paving and the sequence that we intend to follow when we start paving. However, we had limited information from the paving contractor regarding his start date. This week that has changed. The paving contractor now has tentative plans to start grinding the surface of Sohier Street on Tuesday, Oct. 12th with structure adjustment and paving to follow. We intend to reconfirm this on this Friday in the event that the recent rains have moved the date out.

After the road is ground, if necessary, a layer of asphalt will be placed to level out the road so that the drainage can be better managed. However, we don't expect that Sohier will need much leveling, if any at all. After leveling, the structures in the road will be raised to the final paving level. Then the final coat of asphalt will be laid. From Sohier Street the work will proceed to Pond Street from the High School to Route 3A, and to Beechwood Street from Norman Todd Road to Route 3A.

Next in line for paving work will be Jerusalem Road from Rust Way to Atlantic Aveue and from North Main Street to Bow Street at the base of the Jerusalem Road hill. As soon as these roads get scheduled, we'll let you know. So, it looks like we'll be seeing paving machinery in Town quite soon.

Meetinghouse Pond — By the time you read this article on Friday, there should be security fencing around the Meetinghouse Pond work area on the Common. Since the Farmers Market will still be around for a bit longer, please be careful, especially with your children, when in the vicinity of the construction site. The whole pond will be dismantled and rebuilt from the ground up (no pun intended). By the time this project is completed a brand new pond should be on the Common including new pond walkways with handicap access. We wonder if the ducks and cormorants will take notice the pond improvements when the project is completed.

Welcome to the party

FOR THE RECORD

GREGORY MATHIS

You certainly don't need me to tell you the two-party political system is flawed.

At the national level, Republicans and Democrats are creating such gridlock in the political process that our nation's capitol is grinding to a halt on many levels. Voters – and those who don't vote but still like to complain – are rightfully fed up with business as usual from our political leaders.

At the state level, Massachusetts has been void of a true two-party system for a long time and that is a source of frustration for many as well. While we don't have a true two-party system in terms of equal representation in the Legislature, we do have an interesting power struggle between a Democratic governor and a Democratic-controlled House and Senate.

Incumbents in Massachusetts and across the nation will certainly get the message during the upcoming election that change is wanted and needed.

Voters — and those who don't vote but still like to complain — are rightfully fed up with business as usual from our political leaders.

The question then becomes, which candidates will/can bring about the kind of change needed? Do we just oust all the incumbents and put new people in office? Do we vote in Republicans to balance the power at the state level and rebel against the policies and politics of President Obama and Governor Patrick? Are non-party candidates the answer?

Non-party candidates, which we mostly refer to as Independents, will be on the Nov. 2 ballot in droves. Most of the statewide, and many of the more local races, have Independent candidates on the ballot. Since they don't take part in the State Primary – you may be learning about many of them the day you go to vote. By not going through the primary – which only the Republican and Democratic party must – many don't have the exposure or name recognition going into the general election.

While the participation is welcome it seems a little cluttered this year with all the non-party candidates joining the party.

It's difficult to pinpoint exactly what an Independent brings to the table. Many of the Independents are former stalwarts in the Democratic party, including gubernatorial candidate Tim Cahill. If they walk like a Democrat, and talk like a Democrat, what makes them Independent? That's a question we'll be asking as we go through the process.

And really, is it a good system to make the Republicans and Democrats slug it out during a primary, then let in whoever else can get enough signatures on the ballot? Seems like there should be a primary for all non-party candidates to have one name on the ballot. Either that, or let everyone who gets the required signatures on the ballot.

With that said, we'll be doing our best over this month to try to explain the various races and the candidates involved. That will include stories, questions for the candidates, profiles and more leading up to the Nov. 2 election, then providing results that matter to you in a timely fashion on our Wicked Local websites the night of the election.

HEALTH NOTES

What you need to know about flu shots

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Flu clinics — The Cohasset Board of Health has two flu clinics scheduled. The clinics will be held on Tuesday, October 12th and Tuesday, Oct. 19th at Town Hall in the auditorium located at 41 Highland Avenue. Hours are 10AM -12 PM.

Remember the drill:

- The flu clinic is open to all citizens of Cohasset over 9 years of age, pregnant women, adults with chronic conditions and senior citizens.
- Wear a short sleeve shirt.
- Seniors, please bring Medicare part B and/or Senior Health Insurance cards.
- If you have any questions, please call Mary Goodwin RN at 781.383.2210.
- For more information call Tara Tradd 383-4116
- Also, remember the simple steps of personal proteection you can take: Wash your hands, cough into your elbow, stay home when you're sick.

The differences between Seasonal and H1N1

- Seasonal flu and H1N1 are caused by different flu viruses.
- Seasonal flu occurs every year, most often during the winter and early spring.
- Because H1N1 is a new virus, our bodies have no resistance to it. Thus many people may become ill.
- Pandemic flu, like H1N1 flu, occurs once every 30 years or so.
- Seasonal flu most severely affects people 65 years and older.
- H1N1 is being seen more often in children and young adults between 5 and 24 years old.
- A vaccine is available every year to help prevent seasonal flu.

Some people should not get a flu shot. Those sick with a fever at the time the shot is available, people with certain allergies and with certain medical conditions. Those who had Guillain-Barré syndrome within six weeks of a previous dose of flu vaccine should talk with their doctor before getting the flu shot.

Can pregnant women get flu vaccine during their pregnancy? Yes, it is safe to give seasonal and H1N1 vaccines to pregnant women anytime during pregnancy.

Flu vaccine doesn't work right away: It takes about two weeks after vaccination for antibodies to develop in the body and provide protection. In the meantime, you are still at risk for getting the flu. That's why it's better to get vaccinated early in the fall, before the flu season really gets under way. Results of testing the H1N1 vaccine suggest that the body develops a similar response to H1N1 vaccine in the same amount of time.

Other vaccines available: Pneumonia is a serious complication of the flu. The best way to prevent one common kind of pneumonia is to be vaccinated against it. The vaccine is called pneumococcal vaccine. People who should get this vaccine include:

- Children ages 2-24 months old
- Adults age 65 years and older
- People ages 2-64 years old who have serious health problems or weakened immune systems, or are smokers or have asthma

Talk with your doctor about whether you or your family members should get this vaccine.

For more information on influenza go to www.mass.gov/dph/flu

Given the media publicity about Flu and its pervasive nature this year, vaccination is one of the most important — and nearly painless — things one can do in order to remain healthy. Why worry; get a free flu-shot and be safe.

For more information call: Tara Tradd, 781 - 383-4116

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Beware of your strengths

PUSHING THE EDGE

GLENN MANGURIAN

When faced with a difficult situation we are likely to revert to the strengths that have served us well in the past. Like and overused muscle, these strengths often get employed like a knee jerk reaction

There are several best selling books out that focus on developing and using your strengths. These include "Now, Discover Your Strengths" by Marcus Buckingham and Donald O. Clifton.

Strengths are good things.

I've always been a believer that we should put more time into developing our strengths than working on our weakness. Leaders are people who have distinguished themselves through their strengths. Of course, we all have weaknesses. But, if we are preoccupied with eliminating our weaknesses, we have a long road ahead of us. Now, that doesn't mean we should ignore our weaknesses. Rather, we should work to have our weaknesses not get in the way of our ambition and our ability to create results.

Be Aware of Your Strengths

We need to be acutely aware of both our strengths and weaknesses. I am going to state something that may be counter-intuitive:

We are more likely to get into trouble by misusing their strengths than by stumbling from a weakness.

When faced with a difficult situation we are likely to revert to the strengths that have served us well in the past. Like and overused muscle, these strengths often get employed like a knee jerk reaction. In many cases this works for us. But, occasionally, we misuse a strength. That is, the strength has no relevance to the difficult situation but we employ it anyway out of instinct. Before we are aware of it, the situation we are trying to improve has gotten worse. Unaware of what is actually happening we might instinctively respond by drawing on the same strength again only to dig deeper hole. Look behind the story of one of your career failures and I suspect you will find a misused strength.

Beware of Your Strengths

When the going gets tough, be aware of your instinctive response. Now, don't get me wrong, I'm not saying to avoid your strengths. Rather, examine each situation carefully and make conscious decisions on what actions are relevant and appropriate.

Pushing the Edge of Your Thinking

- Do you know what strengths distinguish you?
- How has that strength served your success in the past?
- Can you remember a situation when you employed the strength out of instinct and found yourself in trouble?
- Why did that happen? What might you have done differently?
- How do we teach our children to develop strengths and use them in appropriate situations?

Administrators point to successes

Schools are 'stable and strong'

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"During this time of transition to new educational challenges facing the Cohasset Public Schools, we wish to assure the school community that our schools are stable and strong."

— Letter from the administrative council

There are a lot of good things going on at the Cohasset Public Schools.

School administrators provided a positive outlook on the school's current state in a letter written to the School Committee and read at their Wednesday's meeting.

"During this time of transition to new educational challenges facing the Cohasset Public Schools, we wish to assure the school community that our schools are stable and strong," the letter states.

Jennifer deChiara, principal of Deer Hill School, said there had been a lot of talk at meetings and in the Mariner about the schools recently that raised questions as to what is going on in the school district.

"We are concerned about the impact on families wondering about the breadth and depth of what is going on in the schools," deChiara said.

The letter, which was read by Osgood principal Janet Sheehan, enumerates the programs and successes that are helping students achieve set expectations. Accomplishments named included incorporating technology into the classroom through the STEM and language labs, increased participation in Advanced Placement classes, curriculum renewal, and the development of yearly budgets that have sustained programming, staffing and created new, educationally innovative programs and reporting tools.

"We also acknowledge that in spite of these successes, our schools and all of us in the school community can and need to do better and strive for more," the letter states.

The letter goes on to recognize the accomplishments are the results of the collaborative effort of faculty and staff, community groups, school councils and other partnerships.

"We also recognize that our district has moved forward and accomplished the above thanks to the effective leadership of Superintendent Dr. Denise Walsh and the support of our School Committee over the years," Sheehan read.

Although the letter is not signed by individuals the members of the administrative council were given at the meeting. The Administrative Council includes all three school principals (Joel Antolini, Jennifer deChiara, Janet Sheehan), assistant principals (Mike Gill and Kerri Sandler), business manager David DeGennaro, curriculum coordinator Nancy Mrzyglod, technology director Ken Cisneros, student services director Denise Messina and athletic director Ron Ford.

The School Committee thanked the administrators for their presentation and continued work for the schools.

"That's wonderful to hear," said school committee member Linda Snowdale.

West Corner Bridge celebration Wednesday

This press release is from the Town of Hull

Completion of the West Corner Bridge reconstruction is the culmination of a decade-long collaboration between citizen groups, non-profit organizations, three town governments and the state and federal governments. Enlargement of the bridge's culvert and tide gates is the cornerstone of the ecological restoration of Straits Pond, which is part of the Weir River Area of Critical Environmental Concern, and is the largest tidal restoration project in the Commonwealth to date. The bridge is located at the junction of the three towns and is one of only three transportation routes into the Town of Hull.

A public event to celebrate completion of the project will be held at the West Corner Bridge on Wednesday, Oct. 13th at 3 pm.

Increased tidal exchange between Straits Pond and the Weir River estuary will improve water quality and habitat value in the critically impaired 94-acre pond and promote growth of salt marsh vegetation along the edge of the pond. These resources provide valuable nursery and feeding habitat for a variety of recreationally and commercially valuable fisheries. Improved water quality will also reduce nuisance algal blooms in the pond and seasonal infestations of midges that have been a serious quality-of-life issue for area residents for decades.

Numerous municipal, state, federal, and non-profit organizations contributed to the nearly $2.8 million bridge reconstruction and ecological restoration project.

Grass-roots involvement and leadership also played a significant role in the success of the project. Water quality and habitat monitoring was performed by the Straits Pond and Weir River Watershed Associations and the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research with funding and technical assistance from the Massachusetts Office of Coastal Zone Management (CZM), the Division of Ecological Restoration (DER), the Massachusetts Bays Program, and the Gulf of Maine Council on the Environment.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

Beacon Hill Roll Call this week examines the voting records of local representatives on Democratic Gov. Deval Patrick's vetoes of items in the state budgets in 2009 and 2010. The House in 2009 and 2010 voted on 39 of Patrick's budget vetoes that would have reduced state spending and made other changes in the versions of budgets approved by the Legislature.

A two-thirds vote is required to override a gubernatorial veto. The 157-person membership of the House includes 142 Democrats and only 15 Republicans. The governor needed the support of 53 representatives to sustain a veto when all 157 representatives voted - and fewer votes if some members were absent.

The House on a 70-64 vote sustained only one of the governor's vetoes. That vote was quickly reversed when the House reconsidered its action and then easily overrode the veto on a subsequent 128-27 vote. In the end, the House overrode all 39 vetoes, including seven that were overridden on unanimous votes.

Ironically, it was mostly GOP members who voted with the Democratic governor to sustain the vetoes. The three Republican members who voted with the governor to sustain the most vetoes were Reps. Brad Hill (R-Ipswich), Robert Hargraves (R-Groton) and Daniel Webster (R-Pembroke). All three supported the governor 28 out of 39 times.

The vetoes had only occasional and sporadic support from the chamber's 142 Democrats. Only 83 Democrats voted with Patrick to sustain any vetoes and 32 of those supported the governor on only one veto. In the meantime, 59 Democrats never sided even once with the governor.

The Democrat who gave Patrick the most support was Rep. Jennifer Callahan (D-Sutton), who voted with the governor 18 times. Rounding out the top five Democrats who supported Patrick the most are Reps. Thomas Stanley (D-Waltham), 15 times; Christopher Fallon (D-Malden) and John Rogers (D-Norwood), 13 times each; and Denis Guyer (D-Dalton), 12 times.

PERCENTAGE OF TIMES LOCAL REPRESENTATIVES SUPPORTED GOV. PATRICK'S VETOES

Here is how local representatives fared in their support of Gov. Patrick on the budget vetoes.

The percentage next to the representative's name represents the percentage of times he or she supported Patrick's vetoes.

The number in parentheses represents the number of times he or she supported Patrick's vetoes.

Three bills were given initial approval by the House back in May. Under House rules, the measures were then sent to the Bills in Third Reading Committee, which corrects any grammatical errors, duplication and constitutional problems with legislation prior to it going back to the House for another vote.

Some supporters of these bills complain that the committee is a burial ground for many bills that are simply held there and never released.

Defenders of the process say the committee has many bills to review and that it takes time to do the job properly.

QUESTION 1

Sales tax on alcoholic beverages

Question 1 calls for repealing the 6.25 percent sales tax on alcoholic beverages, effective Jan. 1, 2011.

A yes vote would repeal the tax; a no vote would leave it the way it is.

Editor's note: The Nov. 2 State Election ballot will have ballot questions on three matters this year: the sales tax on alcoholic beverages, comprehensive permits for moderate- or low-income housing (commonly known as Chapter 40B) and sales and use tax rates. Over the next three weeks, we will present columns written by people for and against each of these ballot questions.

Sales tax on alcohol hurts small businesses, consumers

By John Harrington

Yes

Last year, the Massachusetts Legislature passed the first sales tax on beer, wine and liquor, hiking it from zero to 6.25 percent. For most consumers, that's a big increase, and the predictable has happened — business is down. As the owner of a Massachusetts package store, I urge you to vote yes on Question 1 Nov. 2 because the sales tax on alcohol is hurting small businesses and our consumers.

All 1,600 package stores in Massachusetts are small businesses. Since no individual can own more than three licenses, the stores tend to be family run and part of their community. These businesses are hurting. Consumers are price-conscious; they're cutting back on purchases, buying less and cheaper brands.

Since the passage, New Hampshire has reaped the benefits of the tax. Their sales have increased 5 percent. My regular customers are less frequent. They make the emergency stop to buy a bottle of wine for dinner, but they drive the extra 10 minutes into New Hampshire to make bulk purchases, where it's tax-free.

Along the southern border, there has been a decrease in sales. Previously, Rhode Islanders came to Fall River and Attleboro to buy alcohol because at the time they saved on sales tax in Massachusetts. However, they no longer do so, and we are feeling that decline.

I have owned my shop for 63 years, and I have never seen business so bad. I cut my hours to compensate for the lost revenue. Some owners are forced to make layoffs. In this economy, now is not the time to increase the number of unemployed.

On behalf of package stores across the Commonwealth, please join me and small business owners to repeal the alcohol sales tax by voting yes on Question 1. Now is not the time to be taxing our community.

Tax supports health programs, state can't afford repeal

By Vic DiGravio

No

Question 1 on the ballot Nov. 2 asks voters to create a special tax exemption for alcohol at retail stores — and slash $110 million in funding for prevention and treatment programs from a budget already facing a $2 billion deficit. It's a reckless fiscal and public health policy measure that should be voted down.

If approved, Question 1 would change the state's sales tax law to carve out an exemption for alcohol sold at retail stores. The only items exempt from the state's sales tax are necessities like food, clothing and prescription medicines. Alcohol is not a necessity and doesn't deserve a tax break.

Forty-five other states (all the states that have a sales tax) apply it to alcohol. The Massachusetts alcohol tax is in the mainstream.

All proceeds from the tax go to addiction prevention, treatment and recovery services. It will bring in about $110 million to support vital health programs.

So who's behind Question 1? The liquor industry, which raised hundreds of thousands of dollars to put the question on the ballot. They will spend millions in advertising to convince voters to "send a message" to Beacon Hill.

Proponents say residents will flock to New Hampshire and buy tax-free alcohol. Aside from the dubious wisdom of spending time and gas money on a trip to New Hampshire to buy alcohol — which in nearly all cases would cost more money — data from the Massachusetts Department of Revenue show that alcohol sales have not changed much in the past year, and were actually up 4 percent in July and August.

The alcohol sales tax, paid only by those who purchase alcohol, goes directly to a fund for treatment of addiction. We can't afford to repeal this tax. That is why people should vote no on Question 1 on Nov. 2.

Cohasset Day success

EDC handing event over to separate entity

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A little more than three years ago Cohasset Day was just a pie in the sky idea by a couple of Cohasset residents. They pictured the town coming together, sharing food, checking out antique cars and the village shops and dancing in the village.

Three years later there has been three such events. Each year Cohasset Day seems to grow, bringing out families and visitors to the village and the common.

On Monday night, the Economic Development Committee reported on September's Cohasset Day and their other ongoing initiatives.

Tim Chamberlain, chair of the EDC, said Cohasset Day ended the year in the black for the third year in a row.

"We were able to promote business in town while raising money for our community's needs," Chamberlain said.

Donations of $1000 were made to Cohasset Elder Affairs, Cohasset Food Pantry and Cohasset Chamber of Commerce initiatives. The committee also keeps a $4000 reserve for next year's event.

"We were able to promote business in town while raising money for our community's needs."

— Tim Chamberlain, Economic Development Committee

Starting next year the organization and planning of Cohasset Day will be moved out of the EDC and to a separate Cohasset Day committee, which will become a non-profit organization. Some members of the EDC will serve on that committee to ensure a smooth transition.

Chamberlain noted the increased participation in the number of non-profit groups that got involved and had tables at Cohasset Day this year. More than 20 local groups took part and raised awareness of the work they do in the community, he said.

The highlights of the event included the fashion show, classic car show and live music.

"The bottom line is with the help of over 40 volunteers we raised money for causes that are community-based, brought people to the village and the stores – those are the things that make this event special," Chamberlain said. Cohasset Day 2011 will likely be held on Sunday, Sept. 18.

In other initiatives, the EDC is building a database of commercial vacancies in Cohasset to market on two real estate websites. The goal is to fill vacant space, particularly in the village and on Route 3A, and fill it with businesses that can be successful in Cohasset.

The EDC said they are also supporting the town's effort to get a state public works grant to improve the village as well as Pilgrim Bank's restoration and move to the former Cohasset Hardware building.

Briefly

New EDC member

The Board of Selectmen appointed a new member to the Economic Development Committee on Monday night.

Lydia Everett has been a Cohasset resident for 11 years and volunteers with the Cohasset Day planning this past year.

Everett brings an expertise in marketing to the committee, a trait they had been looking for in a new member.

"Cohasset is the jewel of the South Shore and there is an enormous opportunity to capitalize on that," Everett said.

TV studio update

Selectman Paul Carlson, who also serves on the Cable Advisory Committee, said the process is underway to turn a space at the high school into the town's television studio.

The committee has been looking for more than a year for a suitable and affordable space for the studio. Initially a space in the town hall auditorium was targeted, but the construction bids were significantly over budget.

In September, the cable committee inked a lease agreement with the School Committee to use a space off of the library at the high school.

Carlson said a design consultant was currently working on plans on how to build out the space and expected an RFP for construction to go out mid-October.

"By the end of December we hope to be up and running," Carlson said.

The town's camera equipment is to be updated as well. Carlson said since the Selectmen's Office microphones have been fluky at best that portion of the project would be moved up in the construction calendar.

The new studio will have an electronics room, control room with a glass panel connecting to studio space.

OCTOBER IS BREAST CANCER AWARENESS MONTH

Dominic Zazzarino, a very reputable breast cancer surgeon, works there.

"And we just hired a very reputable breast cancer surgeon, Elizabeth Tito," Koomey said.

While both hospitals have their own specialties, both concentrate on what is called a "multi-disciplinary approach" for treating breast cancer, and other forms of cancer, as well. The multi-disciplinary approach means that a team of doctors in different areas of expertise all cooperate and consult with each other to treat a given patient.

"If we know that a patient is coming in to be seen for breast cancer, a team of doctors will have looked at that patient's information before they even get here," Friend said. "You don't get treatment here until all specialists are familiar with the case."

Friend added that a given team of doctors would include a radiation oncologist, a medical oncologist, a pulmonologist (in cases of lung cancer) and a surgical oncologist.

"All these people come together and look at all the factors on a given patient," Friend said. "When the patient finally comes in, all these doctors already have an idea on how to treat this person."

"Here, people can get treated in one fell swoop," Koomey said of Jordan's breast center, adding the multi-disciplinary approach there works the same way it does at South Shore Hospital.

"We have state-of-the-art breast imaging here," Koomey said, stressing the hospital boasts the latest in technology for breast care, including the "most up-to-date radiation treatment techniques."

Koomey also explained that breast MRIs and digital mammography machines really help in the way of early detection. Both are considered to be new forms of technology in the way of breast health.

A technologist works on a dedicated breast MRI system, comma, one of several new technologies available at the Jordan Hospital Breast Center.

"Early detection is the key to beating breast cancer," he said. "By taking the multi-disciplinary approach, patients really feel like they are involved with the process of being treated. They don't feel like they're being left out in the cold."

Koomey added that Jordan Hospital now offers something called "Beat Cancer Boot Camp," where cancer survivors get together and exercise to build strength, stamina and mental health.

Friend said at South Shore Hospital, the multi-disciplinary approach helps quell some of the patient's fears about being treated.

"Cancer is an experience of one person, and people have different reactions to being told that they have the disease," Friend said.

She added that while the hospital offers teams of doctors, it also offers help in the way of therapy in terms of talking to people about the disease. In addition, the hospital offers different forms of holistic treatments like reiki and yoga to compliment their regular treatments.

Friend added that in the past year, a "patient council" has been developed at the hospital where patients can meet with doctors to talk about their treatments.

"Patients identify the areas where we can do better," Friend said. "We're improving continuously on everything we do. But overall, I think people have been really satisfied with the treatment they get here. People are very happy that all these doctors can be found in one place. And they're also happy that they don't have to go into Boston."

Friend added another new feature at the cancer center is its "second opinion clinics," where highly specialized doctors come in to give cancer patients second opinions.

Koomey said breast cancer is much more treatable now than it was 10 years ago.

"We understand how things work better now, so we can target tumors more pointedly," he said.

Friend said at South Shore Hospital, there is a device called the linear accelerator that helps target breast cancer tumors directly, without harming any of the tissue near the tumor.

To use the device, a patient's information is plugged into a computer, which maps out the given tumor and surrounding area. By isolating the tumor, a stream of radiation can treat it without hurting any of the surrounding organs. Friend said the linear accelerator helps lessen the side effects of radiation treatment.

"It used to be that you treated the whole area where the tumor was," Friend said. "Now, it can be pinpointed."

She added she agrees that breast cancer is much more treatable now than it was 10 years ago.

"These days, people are living with breast cancer and other forms of cancer," Friend said. "We have had a lot of success stories here in the past year. The bottom line is that right now, there are 14 million cancer survivors in the United States. By 2020, that number will grow to 20 million. In terms of breast cancer, we expect the numbers of survivors to keep growing. It's an exciting time we live in."

Bra campaign boosts cancer awareness

By Stacey Gallotta
SGALLOTT@CNC.COM

"It brings tears to your eyes to read some of the things. For every bra, there's a woman behind it."
Johnna Masala, Athena Home Novelties distributor

Imagine 169,000 bras linked together in a small costal New England community, spanning more than 100 miles in length. Some bear written messages, others are tattered and worn; still others show little signs of wear. Like the women who they once belonged to, they range in size, color and shape. Each is a different age and tells a unique story.

It's not the latest work by the acclaimed installation artist Christo; it's a Rhode Island company's unique attempt to raise awareness about breast cancer, a disease one out of every nine women will be diagnosed with in their lifetime.

Employees of Athena's Home Novelties, an adult novelty chain based in Woonsocket, came up with the idea of linking thousands of donated bras together at a staff meeting back in January.

"They said, 'Oh my god. That would be the perfect way to visualize it (breast cancer)!,'" said Norton resident Johnna Masala, an Athena's distributor.

Not only were the employees going to make a visual statement by connecting bras to one another, they decided they were going to create the world's largest-scale visualization of breast cancer on record by linking together 169,000 bras.

According to the Guinness Book of World Records, the world record for the longest bra chain was set in Bundaberg, Australia in 2009 when 166,000 bras were linked together.

Soon after coming up with the idea, Athena's employees began collecting bras, many decorated and bearing personal stories of struggle and survival. The company encouraged bra personalization, as it gave individuals a visual way to honor breast cancer victims and survivors. Some of the bras were hung inside the company's Woonsocket office as a precursor to the anticipated October event.

The company's campaign for breast cancer awareness grew from there, and was dubbed Athena's Cup.

Since January, Athena's Cup supporters have been collecting bras and monetary donations nonstop in the hope they would meet their set goal of 169,000 bras and $500,000 by Oct. 10. To date, Athena's Cup has collected more than 60,000 bras and has raised more than $40,000, Masala said.

Masala has been collecting bras in the southeastern sector of Massachusetts for her company's cause on her days off from her day job as a nanny. After turning to Facebook and other social networking sites to get the word out about her company's cause, Masala said she is now picking up hundreds of bras at a time on her designated "bra run" days.

Raising awareness about breast cancer is something Masala takes to heart, as her connection to breast cancer is personal. Masala's grandmother, now well into her eighties, was diagnosed with breast cancer at 62. Masala, 42, said she has had a few breast cancer scares herself.

Despite being almost 110,000 short of their set goal, Masala said supporters of the project will continue to collect bras until they have 169,000.

Volunteers and company officials are currently looking into strategies with broader reach to help them achieve their goal more quickly.

The company has already contacted the Ellen DeGeneres Show, and according to Masala, representatives from the daytime television talk show have contacted the Athena s marketing department.

Volunteers hope to eventually link the bras together in Newport, R.I., at a location that has yet to be determined.

Masala said the company plans to distribute the bras that are in good condition and still wearable to battered women's shelters across the country after the chain is completed.

The monetary donations will be split between the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation and the Gloria Gemma Breast Cancer Resource Foundation.

According to Masala, the visual display will hopefully give broader attention and awareness to a disease that has affected more than 2.5 million in the United States, according to the most recent statistics released by the American Cancer Society.

Anyone wishing to donate bras or make a $5 donation to Athena's Cup may contact Johnna Masala at athenashrjohnna@aol.com or on her Facebook page, Athena's by Johnna. Donated bras may also be sent to Athena's Home Novelties, 640 Winter Street, Woonsocket, R.I. 02895. Drop boxes are also located at Reflections Hair Salon, 112 Park St., North Attleboro, Mass. and at the Rice Complex Playground in Wrentham. Home Instead SENIOR CARE

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

MAKING A CHOICE

Selecting a home health care agency is a critical decision. In determining which agency to use, a number of factors should be considered. Is the agency licensed by your state? How many years has the agency been serving the community? Ask if the agency holds any accreditations, such as from Medicare. Obtain any printed materials outlining the agency's services and costs. How many hours per day per week are agency caregivers available? How is the "master plan" for the patient's care developed and individualized, and how often is it reviewed and modified? Ask about the agency's hiring and training procedures. In the end, the goal is to select the home health agency that best meets the family's needs.

We feel confident that you won't be able to find an agency that is better able to address your needs. Our compassionate caregivers are thoroughly screened and checked to make sure that they provide the best quality care for your loved one. We offer a flexible range of services, from occasional overnight respite visits to full-time, live-in care. You don't have to do this alone. Call 781-878-2994 to learn more about what we can do for you. Our address is: 145 Washington Street, Suite 11. in-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

P.S. Find out how a home health agency ensures patient confidentiality.

To you, it's about finding a trusted partner. To us, it's personal.

FOOTBALL

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset football team had everything in its favor when they traveled to Carver this weekend to face the 0-3 Crusaders.

Cohasset was 3-0, had more players and more experience.

It paid off in the second half when the Skippers outgunned Carver 28-0 in what turned into a 35-6 win that improved Cohasset to 4-0 heading into a showdown against 4-0 East Bridgewater Friday night.

East Bridgewater comes into the game with a lot of weapons.

"They have three skill kids," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "Casey DeAndrade has 11 touchdowns already. He's already scored five or six different ways. He's had an interception return, a fumble return. He's done it all. If we started a fantasy league draft, people would pick him."

In East Bridgewater's 30-0 win over Hull on Saturday, DeAndrade scored on a 71-yard interception return and a 43-yard return. The week before he had a 50-yard touchdown run and ran a kickoff back 90 yards for a touchdown.

Quarterback Tim O'Brien is another threat for the Vikings.

Against North Quincy he had two touchdown passes and scored three on the ground.

Jared Contrey, who is also an outstanding basketball and baseball player is also a threat.

"They're 4-0, we're 4-0," Afanasiw said. "They put up a lot of points. Their offense is similar to Holliston. They run a spread. They use the shotgun and always have at least three receivers on the field."

FIELD HOCKEY

Streak extended

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset field hockey team kept their unbeaten streak intact through the midpoint of the season by the narrowest of margins. Monday, Cohasset battled Harwich to the final seconds and beyond before finishing with an electrifying 4-4 tie.

Usually ties aren't classified as electrifying, but this time was a bit of an exception, as Cohasset scored the tying goal on a corner after time had expired.

"It was an unbelievable game," Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano said. "We started off strong and scored first. They came back and went up 2-1. We tied it 2-2, but they scored twice and with eight minutes left they were up 4-2."

Cohasset cut the lead to 4-3 within the last eight minutes and then the fireworks.

"I heard my team manager say there were three minutes left, then one minute," Giuliano said. "Then Amber Silvia took the ball near midfield, dodged everyone and went right by them. Olivia Murphy took a shot and the goalie pushed it out. They called a corner before time was up. A corner is always played out. It goes until the other team has possession. On the corner we passed out to Kayla Orner (who had three assists) and she made a perfect pass to Kelsey Erler. Kelsey

BOYS SOCCER

A little down time

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

For the next week, the Cohasset boys soccer team will be getting some well earned rest and some extra practice time as they prepare for the second half of the season.

The Skippers head into the stretch run with a 6-2-1 record that puts them right in the thick of the league battle.

After two 1-0 losses last week, to Norwell and Scituate, Cohasset responded with a 4-0 victory over Carver on Tuesday.

"It was a wet game down there," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. They started off in our faces pretty quick, but we recovered. We finished up on a high note."

Four Cohasset players scored, including two who notched their first career goals.

Andrew Whitney had his first goal and Tucker Oddleifson had his first," Willis said. "Drew Cobin had a goal and an assist and Jonah Adkins scored one from the outside."

Willis is happy about where his team is.

"I'm very pleased," he said. "We're playing better than we have all year, and in the second half of the season we don't play a first-place team."

Norwell currently holds that spot, by a hair over Cohasset. The Clippers edged Cohasset by one Cohasset has weapons of their own.

Quarterback Jeff Cavanaro has been excellent and the Skippers are expecting running back Thomas Flibotte to rejoin the offense after missing the last two games with a knee injury.

Defensively, Billy Mack and Kimani Hale-Sadm have been outstanding.

"Two people stand out," Afanasiw said when asked about unsung heroes. "They're not big kids. Billy is 5-9, 170 and Kimani is 5-7, 175. They've been up against bigger kids every game. Against Hingham they were giving up 100 pounds. They're quick, strong and in phenomenal condition. They pressure the offense. They do a great job.

"Jake Kissick and Sean Mckenna are right behind them. They haven't missed a lot of tackles."

In the Carver game, Cohasset got two touchdowns from Jack Carrier, including a 45-yard touchdown pass from Cavanaro that gave Cohasset an early 7-0 lead.

In the Carver game, Cohasset got two touchdowns from Jack Carrier, including a 45-yard touchdown pass from Cavanaro that gave Cohasset an early 7-0 lead.

Kyle Livingstone also scored twice and had a two-point conversion run, all in the third quarter.

"It wasn't the start we anticipated," Afanasiw said of the Carver game. "Carver came out with a unique defensive alignment. It was only 7-6 at the half."

Cohasset closed the scoring with an 87-yard interception return by Dean McNary.

fired and hit the backboard."

Erler had three goals, all with assists from Orner.

Giuliano said Harwich's coach felt the shot was too high, but it hit wood and was perfectly legal, giving Cohasset a huge tie.

"I couldn't believe the game was over," Giuliano said. "It was wonderful. We beat them 1-0 the first time we played them, and scored four goals this time. Even in a down year for them, scoring four goals is an accomplishment. Harwich is a good team. They're well coached. They had 20 corners. That's how they scored three goals. Harwich is a formidable opponent. Scoring four goals against them is like a victory."

Giuliano has really enjoyed being around this team.

"They're wonderful," she said. "They do everything I ask every day."

The Cape Cod Times, by the way, said the corner turned a victory into a tie.

The win improved Cohasset to 7-0-2 (5-0-2 South Shore League).

The four goals were the first goals Cohasset has allowed all season.

Cohasset played Norwell in a makeup game yesterday that could be big in the South Shore League.

Norwell and Cohasset are both in a battle for the league lead.

"It's a big game," Giuliano said on Tuesday night. "It's the first time we play them this season. They're always a good team. We'll see what happens."

Before the Harwich game, Beth Gilman, who runs the Youth Field Hockey program in town, held a pep rally for the team.

She'll also be hosting a Youth Field Hockey jamboree Oct. 24, where the varsity players will be helping out.

On the JV side, the Cohasset JV team beat Harwich 2-0 on Monday.

goal last week, and the teams tied earlier in the season.

In the big picture, Willis has been extremely happy with the way his team has played the type of soccer he wants them to play.

"We have a few guys dominating the ball," he said. "Three guys in the middle, Mike Monaco, Jonah Adkins and Drew Cobin have dominated possession. Anders Goetz has come back and has also helped out. Those kids allow us to control the play. They posses the ball and that allows us to set up our defense and do what we do best."

Willis also praised Nick Brown for helping Cobin and Adkins.

"Those guys are passing so well," Willis said. "That allows us to do so many things."

At the midpoint, the South Shore League is still anyone's game.

"In the league we've only lost to Norwell," Willis said. "And we still haven't played East Bridgewater. We have them twice. Anything can happen. There were a lot of teams in the middle of the league standings we beat by one goal that are going to be coming back looking for payback. It's the same with Norwell."

Cohasset is off until Oct. 14 when they host Hull. They also host East Bridgewater Oct. 18.

Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings Week Four

We're now four weeks through the 2010 fall season and have nearly hit the halfway point. For the second straight week, we have a number of moves. The top teams on both the boys' and girls' sides remain the same. Two teams fall off the chart, while another two jump up two spots. There are also a couple bubble teams that nearly cracked the top six, and if they remain consistent this week, you're going to see some big changes. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Oct. 3. Note that games played Monday, Oct. 4, when the poll is released online, will affect next week's rankings.

BOYS

1. Hingham – Not much has changed here as the Harbormen remained unbeaten after picking up a couple of shutouts last week, including a 1-0 non-league win over a tough Falmouth side. Hingham remained atop the Patriot League Keenan Division despite some top performances by other teams in their division.

2. Weymouth – The Wildcats jump up two spots after posting shutout victories over both St. John's Prep and Braintree last week, as well as a hard-fought 3-2 win over Brookline, which put them in a tie for first place in the Bay State Carey division.

3. Hanover – After another solid week in the Fisher Division, the Indians remained in first place and have scored a Patriot League best average of 3.7 goals per game. They slide down a spot only due to Weymouth's torrid tear last week.

4. Norwell – By beating Cohasset, 1-0, last week, the Clippers moved into sole possession of first place in the South Shore League. The Clippers, who remained unbeaten both in and out of the league, jump up two spots and knock Cohasset off the chart.

5. Duxbury – A heavily depleted Duxbury squad that lost nearly two dozen seniors to graduation has started to pick up the pace, and scoring a couple of wins last week moved the team into the top six for the first time this season.

6. Marshfield – The Rams finally snapped out of their recent slide and posted a 3-0 win over Plymouth South to end the week. This came after a 1-0 loss to Falmouth. Despite getting back on track with their win over South, the Rams fall three spots, and they can thank (or not thank) Weymouth, Duxbury, and Norwell for that.

On the bubble: Braintree, Silver Lake, Scituate, and Cohasset.

Week two rankings: 1. Hingham, 2. Hanover, 3. Marshfield 4. Weymouth, 5. Cohasset, 6. Norwell

GIRLS

1. Marshfield – This team is pretty much unstoppable. The Lady Rams faced their toughest competition of the season last week – Plymouth South – and came away with a 1-0 win, which kept the team unbeaten (8-0) and in first place in the Atlantic Coast League.

2. Plymouth South – A loss and a tie did little to move Plymouth South out of the number two spot, a position this team has held for pretty much the entire season. South's loss came against Marshfield, and the girls' 1-1 draw came against Hingham.

3. Duxbury – The Lady Dragons put themselves back into a winning rhythm after a recent slide. The Duxbury girls picked up a 4-0 win over Scituate, last week's No. 4 team, and a 3-2 victory over Hanover that pushed Duxbury's record to 5-2.

4. Norwell – After a stretch in which the Lady Clippers went 1-2-1, the girls finally got back on track. They rebounded with a commanding, 7-1, win over Abington, and even though Abington is one of the weaker teams in the South Shore League, the win kept Norwell in first place in the conference.

5. Weymouth – The Lady Wildcats remain in the number five slot. They began the week with a 2-1 win over a bottom-of-the-table Brookline team and then lost, 5-0, to Whitman-Hanson, the No. 1 team in the state.

6. Hanover – After an up-and-down start to the season, the Lady Indians put on quite a show last week, going 1-1-1, which included two teams that own first place in their respective conferences. The Hanover girls tied South Shore League leaders Norwell, 1-1, then beat Randolph, 5-0, before nearly pulling off an upset in a 3-2 loss to first-place Duxbury.

On the bubble: Plymouth North, Carver, Silver Lake, and Scituate

Week three rankings: 1. Marshfield, 2. Plymouth South, 3. Duxbury, 4. Scituate, 5. Weymouth, 6. Norwell

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@cnc.com.

SOUTH SHORE CROSS COUNTRY POLL

This Week's High 5 (Week 6):

Steve Sollowin (Weymouth)- Realizing that he would get his due at some point, I've tried to keep Sollowin out of these pages until he did something truly special, even as he has been skewering the Bay State Conference in duals. I can wait no longer. Sollowin's 15:47 win on Saturday at Wrentham's McIntyre Invitational was a lesson in patience, as he refused to pull away from the pack, including Peabody's Nick Christiansen and Newton South's David Melly, until about 1 mile to go in the race. Sollowin seems to have a lot left in the tank, and will need it to compete with the likes of Shrewsbury's John Murray for a state title in November.

Jake Reynolds (Scituate)- The freshman gave Scituate something to smile about on Saturday, taking 8th in 11:05 in the freshman boys 3K race at Wrentham. As rare as it is to have a freshman boy crack his team's top 7, Reynolds could just be Scituate's top dog before season's end. He was joined by impressive top 10 local freshman in both DI (Weymouth's Matt Murphy) and DII (Pembroke's Johnny Valeri, and Christian and Billy Stafford, and Norwell's Gabe Sylvester).

Mary Scanlan (Pembroke)- Scanlan, a star 800 runner for the Titans, primarily uses XC to get into shape for the winter and spring. Coach Greg Zopatti's minilmalist approach is paying off for Scanlan, as she cruised to 16th place in the DII race this weekend at Wrentham, running a personal best 20:20 in the process behind teammates Heather Connick and Chelsea Savage. Pembroke is looking very solid for a trip to All States out of Division IV, but will need to tighten their 4th and 5th runners up to this very formidable pack.

Morgan Fitzgibbon (Weymouth)- A cross country team is only as good as its fifth runner, and this team just got A LOT better thanks to Fitzgibbon's 30th place romp at the McIntyre Invitational Large Schools DI race. The week started rather inauspiciously for Morgan, who was dismissed from school for tonsillitis on the day of the team's 23-32 win over BSC rival Wellesley, but things perked up on Saturday. Sitting around 50th place with a mile to go, Fitzgibbon used her incredible track speed to overtake nearly twenty runners en route to a 30th place 20:28 finish. With stars Bridget Jaklitsch and Molly Barker resting, Morgan played the role of 3rd behind Jill Corcoran (7th, 19:27) and Julie Tevenan (22nd, 20:12), but all five should be ready to roll come November.

Vanessa Lyle (Norwell)- The sophomore raced to 52nd place on Saturday with a solid time of 21:40, giving Chuck Martin's squad a solid front-runner to lead a pack of Sarah Perfeteo, Catherine Stack, Margaret Hayes, and Morgan Gallagher to a 10th place finish in the DII race. Norwell's group is just tight enough that, given the expected improvement throughout the year, they look solid for a trip to Gardner coming out of Division V. Martin knows the importance if a tight pack though, as his girls did just that a year ago to make All States at Northfield.

Boys Top 5 (Week 6):

(Last week's ranking in parentheses)

1. Pembroke (1)
2. Weymouth (2)
3. Duxbury (3)
4. Marshfield (4)
5. Hingham (5)/ Norwell (NR)

Girls Top 5 (Week 6):

(Last week's ranking in parentheses)

1. Weymouth (1)
2. Pembroke (3)
3. Notre Dame (2)
4. Hingham (4)
5. Marshfield (5)

Meet to Watch (Week 6):

Scituate/ Whitman-Hanson @ Duxbury (Tuesday, October 5th)- Duxbury's 5K course will host a solid matchup for both genders, as Whitman-Hanson's undefeated girls team looks to keep it that way, after narrowly averting an upset to Pembroke 28-28 on the tiebreaking 6th runner. The individual title will be up for grabs, as Scituate's Katie Sheehan battles the fabulous Baker twins from WH, and Dragon star Lauren Bittnch. On the boys side, WH will have its hands full with Duxbury trying to give Panther Coach Kevin Black his 2nd loss of the season, something unheard of in the annals of South Shore XC competition.

Mike Miller is the long-time running coach at Weymouth High School and lives for the sport.

43 CHS students earn AP Scholar Awards

Editor's note: last week the College Board left a couple of students off the list. This is the revised list.

Forty-three students at Cohasset High School last year have earned AP Scholar Awards in recognition of their exceptional achievement on AP Exams.

The College Board's Advanced Placement Program (AP) provides willing and academically prepared students with the opportunity to take rigorous college-level courses while still in high school, and to earn college credit, advanced placement, or both for successful performance on the AP Exams. About 18 percent of the 1.8 million students worldwide who took AP Exams performed at a sufficiently high level to also earn an AP Scholar Award.

The College Board recognizes several levels of achievement based on students' performance on AP Exams.

At Cohasset High School:

Ten students qualified for the AP Scholar with Distinction Award by earning an average score of at least 3.5 on all AP Exams taken, and scores of 3 or higher on five or more of these exams. These students are Melissa Campedelli, Paige Collins, Christine Coner, Elizabeth Crawford, Tyler Durant, Cameron Lucitt, Terrence MacCormack, Ian Porter, Megan Richardson, Dominique Rioux.

Twelve students qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor Award by earning an average score of at least 3.25 on all AP Exams taken, and scores of 3 or higher on four or more of these exams. These students are Jamie Canavan, William Choi, Margaux Donze, Isabelle Franklin, Samuel Green, Christopher Hayes, Ashley Howard, Austin Meyers, Jay Michael Monaco, Lucy Noble, Graham Stevenson, Emily Toomey.

Twenty-one students qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP Exams with scores of 3 or higher. The AP Scholars are Madeline Altholtz, Emily Bertovich, Logan Breslow, Hannah Burgess, Andrew Burnett, Caroline Collins, Meaghan Costello, William Craven, Natalie Dignam, Patrick Dunn, James Earle, Andrew Fewsmith, Michael Filby, Rachel Fredey, Meredith Kelly, Jennifer Magruder, Charlotte Malone, Sarah Mavilia, Kevin O'Connell, Johanna Regan, William Wise.

Through more than 30 different college-level courses and exams, AP provides willing and academically prepared students with the opportunity to earn college credit or advanced placement and stand out in the college admissions process. Each exam is developed by a committee of college and university faculty and AP teachers, ensuring that our exams are aligned with the same high standards expected by college faculty at some of the nation's leading liberal arts and research institutions. More than 3,800 colleges and universities annually receive AP scores. Most four-year colleges in the United States provide credit and/or advanced placement for qualifying exam scores. Research consistently shows that AP students who score a 3 or higher on AP Exams (based on a scale from 1 to 5, with 5 being the highest) typically experience greater academic success in college and have higher college graduation rates than students who do not participate in AP.

The College Board is a not-for-profit membership organization whose mission is to connect students to college success and opportunity.

Cohasset students receive Johns Hopkins Talent Awards

Three students at Cohasset Middle School reporting scores in the Johns Hopkins University Talent Search have been recognized for their performance at a special academic awards ceremonies. These students took the January 2010 SAT I. Students participating in the Talent Search in grades two through six take the SCAT and students in grades seven and eight take the SAT.

For their scores of 550 or better for either mathematics or critical reading on the SAT Adam Benson, seventh grade, and Derek Benson, eighth grade earned High Honors Certificates.

Katherine Zeven, sixth grade, earned Exceptional Talent Certificates for each of her scores of 800 for mathematics and 730 for critical reading on the SAT. Her score also qualified Katherine for the 2010 Talent Search Top in Country Award for Mathematics that is given to the highest scoring student, or students in the event of a tie, in the country. Those scores also placed Katherine among the top 28 in the country for combined results with respect to seventh and eighth grade students. Even though Katherine was a sixth grade student, she was allowed by Johns Hopkins to take the SAT instead of the SCAT.

Johns Hopkins Talent Search is sponsored by the Center for Talented Youth at Johns Hopkins University. Since 1979, CTY has sought the most academically able elementary and middle school students each year and encouraged their enrollment in CTY's annual talent search. In 2009-2010, more than 57,000 students from 50 states and Washington, D.C., as well as almost 120 countries participated in the Talent Search. CTY sponsors a number of summer courses for students and also provides distance education opportunities for students with qualifying scores.

UMASS BOSTON

Public Higher Ed, UMass Making Headlines

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

When the economy first slid into recession two years ago, we heard a lot about how prospective college students and their parents were taking a second look at public universities to save on the costs of higher education. As chancellor of the University of Massachusetts Boston, I'm always happy to learn that more people are considering enrolling here, but I'm particularly pleased to see news that recognizes not only the value but also the worth of a public education.

For example, a recent article in the Wall Street Journal reported that U.S. employers are more inclined to hire public university graduates than private college and even Ivy League graduates. In a survey of nearly 500 large companies, nonprofits, and government agencies, the Journal reported, 19 of the top 25 schools preferred by recruiters are state universities. Of course, we at UMass Boston are always proud to contribute our own graduates to the pool of sought-after public higher education alumni.

Closer to home, we made headlines across Boston and the Commonwealth for earning a spot on The Times of London list of the world's top 200 universities. The University of Massachusetts system was ranked 56th, the best public university in New England and behind only Harvard, MIT, and Tufts in the state. I'm proud that the work done by our tremendously talented faculty, staff, and students system-wide has been recognized and honored in this way.

Our programs and services bear out our accolades. This university community is committed to excellence and has much to offer, from the most innovative degree programs – such as our PhD in green chemistry, the first in the world – to our newest school, University College, which will offer broad educational options for professional and lifelong learners, to our College of Nursing and Health Sciences, which is well known for its outstanding curricula and for being the leading provider of nurses in the state.

It's no wonder that the world is taking notice. Indeed, enrollment at our university is higher than it's ever been, with over 15,400 undergraduate and graduate students enrolled this fall.

I invite you to also take notice and explore Boston's only public research university at our Open House on Saturday, October 16; check-in begins at 8:30 a.m. You'll get the chance to chat with faculty, staff, and students on our oceanfront campus, attend helpful workshops, learn about our academic programs and student organizations, check out nearby housing options, and take a guided tour.

To register for Open House 2010, visit us online at www.umb.edu or call us at 617-287-6000. I hope we'll see you there.

Helping students find their voices

CONSERVATORY NOTES

EILEEN PUZO

Music sets my soul on fire. For me, there is no better feeling than to feel the base of live music vibrating in my bones. Like the person who needs to run each day to be complete, I must have my music. It makes me feel alive.

My parents fostered a love of the arts in their children and we were fortunate to have South Shore Conservatory in our own backyard. My siblings and I all took part in early childhood education at the Conservatory and played the piano, but our arts education did not stop there. One sister took flute, one took electric guitar and my brother took audio engineering and recording, while I took drums and voice. Being in a community that cherished the arts has had a profound effect on me.

As a child, I was shy – quite shy. Around the age of 9, I learned that I could sing, but had no intention of letting anyone else in on my secret. For years, I would retreat to my room and give concerts to my mirror, convinced that no one else could hear me. Should someone walk in, or say something to indicate that they had heard me, I would be mortified. So, when my mother said that she had signed me up for voice lessons at the Conservatory, I was stunned. How could a shy kid like me go into a lesson armed with nothing but my vocal cords? Where was the safety net? As is often the case, my mother knew best.

Voice lessons at the Conservatory were wonderful. Not only did I learn better technique and develop as a singer, I became more confident and poised as a person. I learned tricks to help accept compliments, no matter how awkward they made me feel. The more comfortable I became as a performer, the more I was willing to sing publicly. My world expanded rapidly. In high school, I used my arts education and talents to perform in multiple choirs and all of the drama club's productions. By senior year, I was elected president of each of these groups and had performed for thousands of people. For someone who is innately shy, these were essential steps along a path of personal growth.

Throughout college, I continued singing, but after graduation, something was missing. There was no music in my life for the first time in 20 years. I met with leaders in the Boston arts world, telling them my story and enlisting career advice. By June, I had committed to an internship at South Shore Conservatory. By September 2009, I was hired as a development associate for the Conservatory.

Here, I raise awareness of the Conservatory because I know how life changing our work is. I am one of tens of thousands of students that the Conservatory has served over 40 years. Not every one of us will go on to have a career in the arts. In fact, few will. But each of us – whether a schoolteacher, a bank executive or a secret singer – will carry with us the spark of life and creativity that we have gained from a quality arts education. It is truly transformational.

The Conservatory is offering three opportunities over the next month for everyone to experience the wonder of live performance, and join in our 40th anniversary celebration. On Oct. 24, come hear performances from each of our departments in 'S Wonderful! 'S Marvelous! 'S Music! in Hingham. Join us on Nov. 3 at the Duxbury Performing Arts Center, when students, faculty and friends will perform the premiere of "Music Is...," written by John Kramer for the Conservatory's anniversary. And on Nov. 6, bring the whole family to the Conservatory to see the family friendly opera "Hansel & Gretel" here in Hingham. For more information, please visit www.sscmusic.org.

Discover the Woods Day draws a crowd

Over 100 people visited Holly Hill Farm on Jerusalem Road this past Sunday for the 3rd Annual Discover the Woods Day. Over 50 runners participated in the 5k-trail run early in the morning. There were many experienced runners in the group this year, some from as far away as the north shore. The top male finishers were John Gillis from Manchester, Joe Buckley and Al Stephan, both from Cohasset. Top finishers among the women were Nicole Christoforo, Jennifer Casey, and Brianne Simpson. All three women live locally work at Lululemon in Hingham. Later in the morning was the 1-mile fun run/walk and a good time was had by all.

15 students from Cohasset High School woke up very yearly to help out with registration, race set up, and timing. Their help was an important contribution to the overall success of the race. Thank you to CHS students Stephanie Brierley, Joe Buckley, Tim Cavanaro, Chris Cohen, Alexandros Deligiannidis, Melinda Dignam, Andrew Fewsmith, Harry Helbrock, Matthew MacCormack, Caitlin Mavilia, Sarah Naughton, Sean Naughton, Chrissy Secatore, Ellie Tedeschi and Eric Weinstein.

The races and walks were designed to bring people to the farm to discover the beauty of the 130 acres of woodland paths, streams, bridges and ponds, on the farm property. Frankie May Sullivan, the five-year-old granddaughter of Holly Hill Farm owner Jean White, was truly honoring the spirit of the race when she stopped mid-run to collect some beautiful acorns that were on the trail. Local fern expert Julianne Mehegan of Hingham, naturalist Steve Ivas of Norwell, and environmentalist Meg Moore led 3 guided nature walks later in the morning. Overall, the day was a big success for the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the non-profit educational center based at Holly Hill Farm that uses the farm, including the beautiful woods, as an outdoor classroom to teach children and adults about the importance of sustainable agriculture and preservation of the land.

Frankie May Sullivan is followed by Nadia and Cleo Belber; the man in the background is Education Director Jon Belber cheering his daughters on.

Alan Kearney's rendering of "The Tour," a proposed sports bar and grille at the South Shore Country Club next door in Hingham that would include two golf simulators.

New pub with golf simulators could be a hit at SS Country Club

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

South Shore Country Club in Hingham offers golf in the spring, summer, fall, and into the winter months, weather permitting.

Now avid golfers, and even those who have never tried their hand at golf, can have a golf experience even on the most blustery winter day with the addition of two golf simulators.

SSCC Management Committee member William Friend presented a plan to the Hingham Selectmen this week to convert a storage area into a sports bar and grille named "The Tour," in which guests will be able to operate two golf simulator amusement games and partake of food and beverages including liquor, subject to approval by state alcoholic beverages licensing authorities.

This new endeavor is in partnership with Raffael's, the Club's restaurant, wedding, and banquet facility, which will run the food and beverage operation in the sports bar.

"This will provide an additional recreational opportunity at the Club and will allow members and the public to play golf year-round," Friend said. "The simulators are very entertaining, and people get hooked on playing them!"

Hingham Selectmen granted approval to amend the town's lease with SSCC accordingly. The targeted completion date is on or about Thanksgiving weekend. The equipment provider is Evergreen Golf.

"The simulators can tell golfers what's wrong with their swing and can gauge how far they hit the ball," Friend said. "And you don't lose your golf ball!"

Interim Hingham Town Administrator Ted Alexiades quipped, "The greens are easier to maintain, too!"

The state-of-the-art simulators are designed to create a realistic and accurate indoor golf experience. They reproduce well-known courses on which golfers may play an 18-hole round individually, as part of a foursome, or potentially as part of a league.

Golfers will also be able to take part in special events such as long-drive contests and tournaments as well as take lessons throughout the winter to stay on top of their game.

Nearly 50 different golf course choices will be offered, including St. Andrews in Scotland, Pebble Beach in California and Spyglass in Florida in addition to large-screen televisions. Players select a course from a pre-loaded menu.

More than 70 Club members responded favorably to a letter they received gauging interest in adding this feature. One member suggested reproducing the SSCC course, which is under consideration.

"The simulators recreate the golf experience at different golf courses. It's like watching a round on TV but it's your own ball you're hitting!" Friend said. "Golfers can pay a different course each week."

The 20- to 25-foot screen displays each hole. Golfers use their own balls and clubs while cameras focus on how the ball is hit. Golfers see their balls flying through the air and landing.

Hingham architect Al Kearney and his son play golf, and Kearney donated his time to draw up the architectural rendering, which is currently on display in the Pro Shop.

The charge is less that the cost of an actual round of golf at SSCC — $32 per hour for a round during peak hours and $28 during non-peak times. "This is a good activity for a rainy day, too," Friend said, noting the recent stretch of inclement weather. A round takes about 2 to 2-1/2 hours on the simulators, he noted.

SSCC General Manager Jay McGrail is enthusiastic about the plan. "There really isn't anything like this around here," he said. "The new room and the simulators will give local golfers an opportunity to continue golfing in a controlled environment throughout the winter. Our golf pros will also be available, allowing golfers to get a jump on the season with a steady dose of lessons."

McGrail is confident golfers will appreciate this asset. "I think people will be amazed to learn just how accurate these new simulators are," he said. "If you slice a ball you'll see it slice and if you draw the ball you'll see it draw back into the fairway."

Hingham Selectmen Chairman Bruce Rabuffo, who admitted that he prefers skiing to golf but is very enthusiastic about adding this feature, said the simulator would offer "a great experience. This is the ultimate in video games, if you will, with instant feedback."

Halloween party at South Shore Country Club

The South Shore Country Club and Hingham Recreation Department will be hosting their annual Halloween Extravaganza Friday, Oct. 22, from 4 to 7 p.m. The event will take place at the South Shore Country Club located at 274 South St. Hingham.

Jam packed with Halloween fun for all ages, the party kicks off at 4 p.m. and will feature: DJ costume party, arts and crafts, hayrides, games, pumpkin painting, complimentary popcorn and mulled cider.

There will also be ceremonial T-shirts raffled off throughout the day and given as prizes.

Throughout the afternoon and evening, Halloween spirit looms throughout the course as children and adults can enjoy hayride adventures with surprises around each corner.

The party will feature: DJ costume party, arts and crafts, hayrides, games, pumpkin painting, complimentary popcorn and mulled cider.

For those interested in a playful, less spooky adventure hayrides begin at 4 p.m. and run until 5:30 p.m. For the not so faint of heart, the haunted hayrides begin at 5:30 p.m. and end at closing.

Pets in costume are also welcome and encouraged to come enjoy the fun.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF OCT. 18, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Some flashes of Aries ire might erupt as you confront an unusually bewildering situation. But you should be able to keep your temper under control as you work through it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That marriage 'twixt the arts and practicality that Taureans excel at once again highlights your enjoyment of much of the week. However, you need to watch any sudden urge to splurge.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Even with all the plusses apparently outweighing the minuses, you still might want to defer an important decision to make sure you have all the facts you need.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) One or two problems might threaten to derail otherwise smoothly running situations at work or at home. But a few well-placed words should help get things back on track quickly.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This could be a good time for all you Leos and Leonas in the spotlight to open your generous Lion's hearts and share the glory with those who helped you accomplish so much along the way.

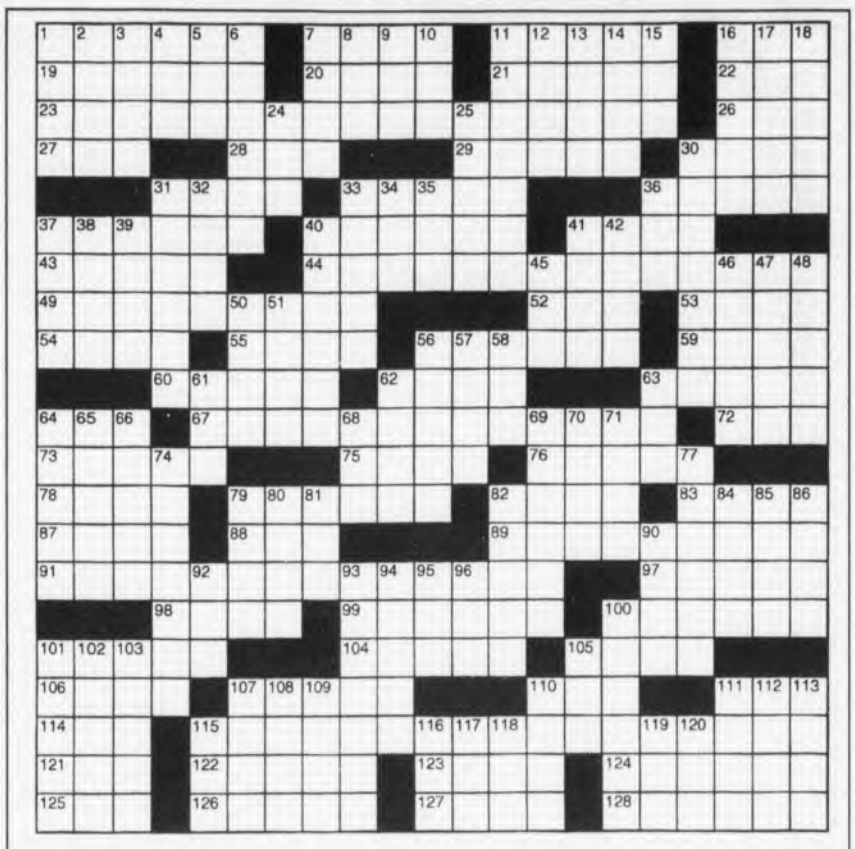
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might want to get advice from someone who's been there and knows these situations better than you do, before investing time or money (or both) in a questionable matter.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Be careful how you handle a workplace matter that seems out of place in the schedule you've prepared. Before you act, one way or another, find out who set it up and why.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your entertainment aspect is strong this week. Besides providing a wonderful break from everyday obligations, sharing fun times brings you closer to those you care for.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Having a weekend fun fest? Your friend or relative who's down in the emotional dumps could perk up if you find a way to include him or her in your plans.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) If you're in one of those "the Goat knows best" periods, you might want to ease up and try listening to what others have to say. You could learn something.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) That new challenge is getting closer, and you should be out there now showing facts and figures to potential allies to help persuade them to rally to your support. Good luck.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Getting a head start on holiday plans could help free up some time later to spend on other projects. Meanwhile, a colleague has some ideas that you might find worth discussing.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Cappella Clausura is an ensemble of soloists and period instruments whose goal is to research and bring to light works written by women from the 8th century to the present day

Cappella Clausura to present 'A Chantar!' at First Parish

Cappella Clausura, a professional early music ensemble specializing in Baroque works composed by women, will perform at First Parish Cohasset, on the green at North Main Street, at 4 p.m., on Sunday, Oct. 17. Admission is $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

This program will feature songs of love by medieval women trouvères and trobairitz, juxtaposed against recently transcribed Byzantine chant by 9th century Greek nun Kassia. In addition to Cappella Clausura's singers, this program will also feature lute, harp, recorder, vielle and percussion.

Cappella Clausura is an ensemble of soloists and period instruments whose goal is to research and bring to light works written by women from the 8th century to the present day. The intention is to dispel the false notion that there are not now nor have there ever been gifted women composers. While they perform music by all women composers, and champion living composers, they concentrate on repertoire by women in the cloister – clausura – during the Italian Baroque period. During this time, women were allowed to express themselves spiritually and artistically, and to publish their own music. History has been blind and deaf to these works; Cappella Clausura brings vision and voice to them. More information about Cappella Clausura can be found at ww.clausura.org.

For more information about the concert, call Allegra Martin at 617-872-0461. For more information about the ensemble, their scholarship and history, call LeClair at 857-919-4218.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Locke Langdon Tousley

COHASSET – Locke Langdon Tousley, 91, of Cohasset died at home Sunday, October 3, 2010.

Locke was married for 66 years to Richard C. Tousley. A native of Seattle, Washington, she drove for the Navy during World War II where she met her husband. After the war, she moved to Massachusetts, and ultimately Cohasset where she lived for more than 50 years. Locke was a true extrovert. She had an uncanny knack for relating to others and making them feel at ease. Her neighbor, Charlie Barlow, said it best, "Locke always says the right thing." Her whimsy was another special trade mark. Quick with the mischievous wink and full-bodied laugh, Locke approached life with style, compassion and a twinkle in her eye.

Locke was a very active volunteer who touched others with her contagious optimism, ability to laugh at herself and capacity for finding humor in difficult situations. An avid reader, she worked at Cohasset's Paul Pratt Memorial Library where her upbeat attitude and sunny disposition warmly welcomed other library patrons. She expressed her concern for those in need by volunteering at the Sea Chest Consignment Shop, Rosie's Place, and the Florence Crittenton League. She was an active member of the First Parish Unitarian Church and her ladies bridge clubs, and loved spending the remains of the day over cocktails and good conversation with her family.

There was peace, joy, grace and wisdom in the way Locke spent her last months and final days – surrounded by friends, family and her wonderful caretakers. She will be sorely missed by all who knew her for her warmth, friendship, caring and infectious laugh.

She taught French at Derby Academy in Hingham and Special Education in the Franklin, Hull and Cohasset public schools.

Mimi loved art and music, nature (especially birds), skiing, hiking, sailing and was an advocate of always having fun.

She was an active volunteer in many organizations, including the Fogg Museum, the Museum of Fine Arts and the Boston Harbor Islands.

She was a friend of Webb Park and a generous donor to many non-profit organizations.

She is survived by her son, Benjamin Blake III and daughter-in-law Josette of Boston, daughters, Barbara Porter of Jacksonville, Fla., Rosamond (Robin) Blake of Brattleboro, Vt., Leslie Jordan and son-in-law Michael Johnson of Denver, and Betsy Shepler and son-in-law Rob of Mayhill, N.M. Lily up close!

Lily Tomlin appears at The Zeiterion Performing Arts Center

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Lily Tomlin

With six Emmys, two Tonys, a Grammy, and an Academy Award nomination to her credit, it is no secret that Lily Tomlin enjoys significant success in almost every entertainment medium.

Tomlin joined NBC-TVs "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In" in 1969, where her characters – including Ernestine, the unflappable telephone operator, and Edith Ann, the bratty five year-old – quickly became indelible. When "Laugh-In" went off the air in 1973, Tomlin went on to co-write, with partner Jane Wagner, and star in six television specials. Tomlin made her feature film debut in 1975 in Robert Altman's "Nashville," earning an Oscar nomination for her portrayal of a gospel singer with two deaf children, and launching a film career that includes "The Late Show" (1977), "9 to 5" (1980), "The Incredible Shrinking Woman" (1981), "All of Me" (1984), and 2006's "A Prairie Home Companion."

The Detroit-born Tomlin earned her first Tony Award for her 1977 Broadway debut in "Appearing Nitely," which was written and directed by Wagner. In 1985, Wagner's critically acclaimed play "The Search for Signs of Intelligent Life in the Universe" won Tomlin her second Tony. Wagner and Tomin aren't just in business together, of course, they've been a couple for almost 40 years.

Wherever her long career takes her, however, the legendary performer always finds time for her comedy act, which she will be doing on Saturday when she opens the season at New Bedford's Zeiterion Performing Arts Center. Last weekend from her home in Los Angeles, Tomlin took a telephone call from Town Commons to talk about everything from comedy to politics.

Town Commons: With everything else, how do you find time to go on the road?

Lily Tomlin: I've never stopped doing stand-up, one-nighters and maybe two nights here or there. From the time I landed "Laugh-In," I had an act. If I hadn't kept busy when that show ended, I probably would have ended up on "Match Game." Except when I was making a movie, or doing the one-woman shows, I was always doing my act. These days, I do between 30 and 50 dates a year, depending on what else I'm doing. My act is much looser than doing a play or an evening of theater. I'll probably do 10 or 12 of my characters. There will no fourth wall either so when I'm at the Zeiterion, I will be able to talk about New Bedford and local topics, too.

TC: In the documentary "Joan Rivers – A Piece of Work," Rivers describes you as brilliant. How did that feel, and who would you describe that way?

LT: I haven't seen the film yet, but a couple of people have told me about it. Joanie is a good friend. We have known each other for years. I can still remember when Joanie first hit it big. She was given a few nights a week to headline at the Upstairs at the Downstairs club in New York. That was the great cabaret singer Mabel Mercer's room for a long time and I loved Mabel Mercer. In the 1960s, I was going all the time to see Mabel at the Bon Soir in Greenwich Village. She didn't really have her voice anymore, but was a great actress. She would sit still, in a nice lace dress, and perform all these great numbers while, every once in a while, putting her hand up in the air to great effect. Mabel could make you cry and just as easily make you laugh. She was magical and very affecting all at once. She was just divine. I even got to open for her in the downstairs room at Upstairs at the Downstairs and ended up driving her to the club each night. It was the late 1960s, and I had an old Firebird. I was living in Yonkers and I would drive to Rockland County to pick Mabel up. I'll never forget one day when she said to me in her wonderful British accent, "Lily, I would like to get a Tide commercial. If I could I get a Tide commercial, then I could buy myself a fur coat." I wanted nothing more at that moment than to get that elegant woman a Tide commercial.

TC: You've been a regular on television shows including "Murphy Brown" and "The West Wing," and done memorable guest spots on "Desperate Housewives" and "Damages." You've said that if you like a show you're not afraid to pursue a role on it. Have you got your eye on something right now?

LT: I was offered a part on "Brothers and Sisters" which I wish I'd been able to do, but my schedule just didn't give me enough time to prepare for the role. I really regret that, too, because I would have loved to work with Sally Field. I like "The Big Bang Theory," and "Modern Family" and the new Atlantic City show, "Boardwalk Empire" on HBO. Mostly, I just like to be involved with good quality shows. I remember going after Chris Carter about using me on "The X-Files," too, but he resisted at first, saying he didn't like to use celebrities because he thought familiar faces were distracting. Finally, in the third or fourth season, he wrote a terrific episode for Ed Asner and me. It doesn't always work out that way. Many years ago, I tried to get on "The Lawrence Welk Show," as Bobbi Jeanine, the cocktail lounge organist, but I couldn't make that happen. That was unfortunate, too, because I thought Bobbi Jeanine would have done beautifully on that show.

TC: When you were on "Laugh-In" you famously declined to be photographed with guest star John Wayne whose politics were decidedly to the right of yours. What about today – would someone like Sarah Palin be able to get her picture taken with you?

LT: In those days, we were so political about the Vietnam War, especially those of us against the war. I just couldn't bring myself to have anything to do with John Wayne. In retrospect, as a mature person, I regret those times. I wish I'd been more outgoing with them and found out what they were thinking and why they were thinking it, and then maybe tried to see if I could influence them. Every act was political then. I'm not so righteous now as I was as a young person. I had a close call with Karl Rove, though, in a Dallas hotel lobby not too long ago. I looked up from a conversation I was having with a friend and I saw Karl Rove approaching. It was a bad time in the Iraq War and I could not believe the man George W. Bush called the architect of his 2004 re-election was headed right for me. It turned out, Rove knew my friend and was coming over to say hello. They chatted for a bit and then my friend said, "Karl, of course, you know Lily Tomlin." Rove was very expansive and said some nice things, but all I could manage was "How do you do?" I couldn't say what I was really thinking.

TC: What about Ernestine, do you think she would ever join the Tea Party?

LT: I'm not sure about that. Ernestine couldn't stay with the telephone company, of course, after deregulation. She hates competition of any kind. She just wants to be in control. She was working for a health insurance company, where she able to deny health care to everyone, but she may be doing something different by the time we get to New Bedford.

TC: Does Ernestine's enduring popularity ever surprise you?

LT: Not really. I used to say that Ernestine was like Bette Davis, because so many people impersonated her. I still feel like Ernestine probably really does exist somewhere and I am just one of the people who imitates her.

Three to interview for interim manager

Selectmen receive 19 applications

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The days are numbered for Town Manager Bill Griffin and that means as of Oct. 29 the town of Cohasset will be without a Town Manager.

On Wednesday night, the Board of Selectmen met to whittle down the candidates for the interim Town Manager position. Selectmen hope to have someone in the interim position by Nov. 1.

The town received 18 applications from individuals and one application from a management company based in Arizona.

"Overall I thought this was a very qualified group of candidates, a very impressive group with diverse backgrounds," said Ted Carr, selectmen vice chair.

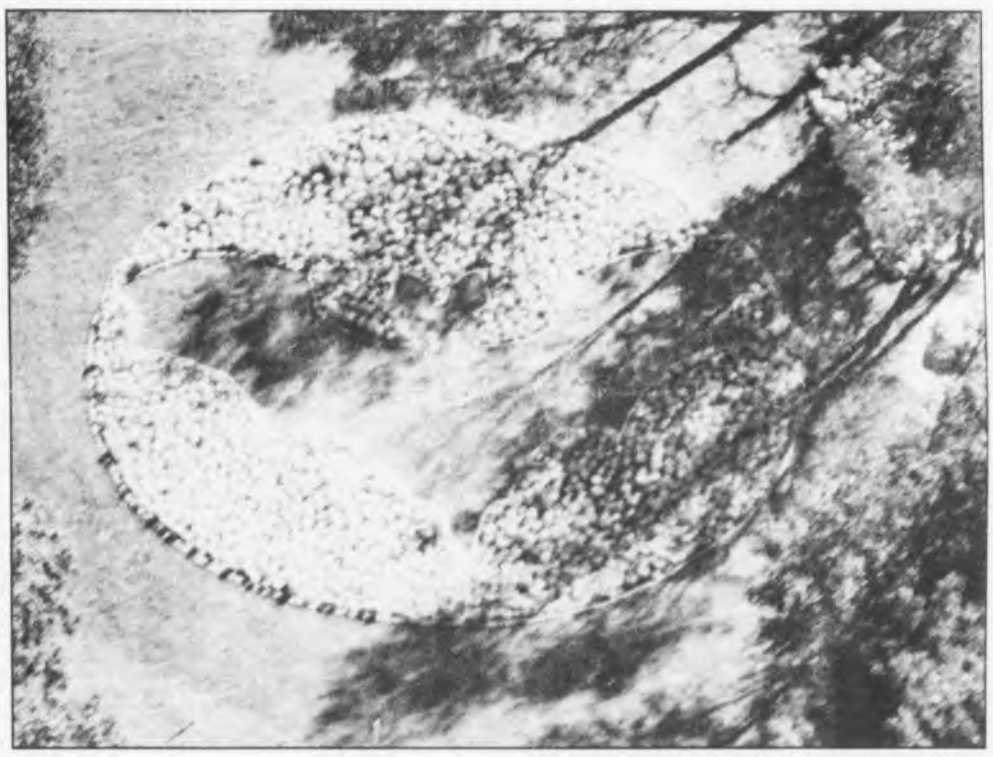
If an interview is accepted, the Selectmen will meet with Stephen Lombard, Jeff Ritter and Richard Robinson at an open meeting on Wednesday, Oct. 20.

The interim will fill the role for about six months, depending on when the permanent town manager is able to come on board. One of the primary criteria for the interim manager previously discussed by the Selectmen is budget savvy. The interim will have the responsibility to put together the fiscal 2012 budget.

The Selectmen came to the meeting with their top three candidates from the lot. One of the candidates, Stephen Lombard, was on all five selectmen's lists.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said he had experience with regional dispatch, implementing a new IT program for the budget and plenty of management and finance experience, all experience that will help him navigate the next few months in Cohasset.

"He has an incredibly serious career behind him," Carr said.



Selectman Paul Carlson said Lombard met his criteria "with flying colors." Carlson evaluated at the applications based on three criteria: serious town manager experience, serious interim town manager experience, and strong budget experience.

Next up was Jeff Ritter, who has 15 years of Town Manager experience and had completed three interim town manager gigs.

"He didn't stress his budget expertise, but for me he was the second most impressive candidate," Carlson said.

Committee creates timeline for process

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The search for a chief executive officer of the Cohasset Schools is underway.

On Tuesday night, the School Committee held an organizational meeting with their search consultant to set the stage and timeline (see sidebar) for the superintendent search.

The search consultants from NESDEC, a private, non-profit educational organization, set forth a multi-faceted and aggressive search process. If the timeline stays true to plan a new superintendent could be on board by May 1.

Not only is this search important to members of the school community (parents, students, teachers), but also to all taxpayers. The superintendent is typically the highest paid employee in the municipality.

'You can beat this disease'

Women share stories of fighting breast cancer

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

Hearing the words, "You have breast cancer," can change one's life in an instant. From shock, to fear, to anger, there are a wide range of emotions and thoughts converging all at once when those words are said and heard for the first time.

"The scariest part about breast cancer is the initial diagnosis," said Risa Graziano, a breast cancer survivor who lives in Marshfield. "You get the diagnosis, and the doctors give you about a billion pieces of information that you're supposed to process all at once. And you're automatically assuming that you're going to die. Also, you find yourself reading all these horror stories on the Internet, which is something you should never do. Do not consult the Internet – you will drive yourself crazy."

While there are still far too many instances where the story doesn't end "happily ever after," there are more and more instances of survival of breast cancer, with new technologies and treatments available to allow breast cancer survivors a chance to share their stories with others.

"There are so many forms of cancer that are curable, or manageable these days," said breast cancer survivor Pattie Majenski, of Hanson. "But you really need to be your own advocate. When I was being treated, I'd have my days where I'd say to myself, 'I will never feel normal happiness again.' I was afraid my life was over. But that is not the case for anyone anymore. You can beat this disease, and you can go on with your life."

The Mariner caught up with Terri Raymond, who is the new Latin teacher at Cohasset High School.

Name: Theresa Maria Gulinello Raymond.

Occupation: Latin teacher, pastoral musician.

Best day of your life: At this stage of my life, I feel truly blessed. Every day is a gift.

Best vacation: Anywhere I can spend time with my grandchildren, usually the Maine coast.

Favorite season: Winter- I love the cold.

Favorite junk food or meal: Sadly, I am a candy junkie. I love it. I also love any and all Italian food. We have a family recipe called polpettone, with Genoa salami and provolone — heaven.

Best book (or magazine): Too many to choose from. I read all the time. I just finished "The Help" and "Little Bee." Both were very moving and thought provoking.

Best movie (or actor): I love old classic films — Cary Grant, Tracy and Hepburn, Nick and Nora.

Best TV show: I don't watch; I'm too busy reading or playing music!

Best music, group, or artist: The Beatles, of course. I'm a child of the sixties.

Pet peeve: A general breakdown of civility in public discourse and on the airwaves.

Fun fact: I play 12 string guitar in a classic rock band with my husband, cousin and brother-in-law.

Goal: To visit Catania in Sicily and see where my grandparents are from and meet some of my cousins.

Person you'd most like to meet: I wouldn't mind sitting down with Paul McCartney.

Biggest worry: What the world will be like for my grandchildren, nieces and nephews.

Best part of Cohasset: The ocean, of course, but also the welcoming friendliness of my colleagues.

Home Instead SENIOR CARE
by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison
SAFE AND SECURE
When making the decision to "age in place," seniors may discover at some point that they require assistance with everyday chores. A home health aide can be an invaluable asset to the senior in helping to maintain a clean, orderly and healthy physical environment. While providing companionship, the aide may also assist the senior by making beds and changing the linens. Washing and folding clothes, towels and sheets and putting laundry away are chores the senior may no longer be able to do easily. Keeping the kitchen and bathroom tidy also helps keep the personal environment sanitary. Clutter control and taking out the trash and recyclables also help ensure a safe, comfortable haven for the senior client.
In addition a clutter-free home can be a boon for your loved one's mental health as well as their physical health. Preventing falls is important, as is maintaining a cheerful mindset, which can be difficult in a messy and chaotic home. Our caregivers can take care of small chores like these which make such a big difference in your parent's quality of life. Give us a call 781-878-2994 today to learn more our wide range of services and how we can help in your situation. Our address is 145 Washington Street, Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.
P.S. Keeping hallways and floors clear helps alleviate clutter that could pose a fall risk.
To you, it's about finding a trusted partner. To us, it's personal.

POLICE BEAT

Grandmother foils attempted 'Grandparent Scam'

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 76-year-old Cohasset grandmother asked some pointed questions that deterred the perpetrators of what is now the infamous "Grandparent Scam."

Police said the woman, who lives on Atlantic Avenue, got a call last week from a man claiming to be her oldest grandson. The woman, who has one grandson, started asking specific questions and the caller – who said he was in jail in Ireland and needed her to wire money immediately – eventually hung up.

A short time later she received another call from a man claiming to be the grandson's lawyer. She asked him for his phone number; he provided one before disconnecting the call.

Cohasset Police continue to warn senior citizens to be aware of the telephone scam that is preying on grandparents nationwide.

The scam works like this: the grandparent receives a distressed phone call from who, they believe, is their grandchild. The supposed grandchild typically explains that they are traveling and have been arrested or involved in an auto accident and need the grandparent to wire money to post bail or pay for damages — usually amounting to a few thousand dollars.

It is believed that scammers are most likely calling random numbers until they happen to reach a senior citizen. The scammers' basic tactic is to pose as a grandchild and let the unsuspecting grandparent fill in the blanks.

Police are advising seniors to confirm the status of the individual by calling them directly or verifying the story with other family members before taking any further action.

Police also advise that any request to wire money through Western Union or MoneyGram should be seen as a "red flag" and an immediate tip-off that the call may be part of a scam. Funds sent via wire transfer are hard to track once received by scammers and are usually not recoverable by law enforcement or banking officials.

In June, a sharp 80-year-old Cohasset grandfather, who has 12 grandchildren, got a call that turned out to be part of the same scam. The granddad — when he got a call from a male voice saying he was his grandson, was in trouble in Spain and wanted money wired to him via Western Union — became suspicious. He asked the caller if he was grandson Matt and the caller said he was. Then the grandfather asked for the caller's date of birth. The caller then swore at him and hung up the phone, police said.

In April 2009, a Cohasset grandmother fell victim to a scam before the news of the scam came out in the Mariner. She reported the incident to police later after reading about the scam in the paper. And said she had sent $4,000 to the caller, whom she thought was her grandson who said he was in trouble. The woman later made contact with her real grandson and confirmed that he was not involved.

A year ago, a 72-year-old Cohasset grandmother almost lost nearly $3,000 in the "grandparent scam." She received a phone call from a man, who said he was in Canada and claimed to be her grandson. The caller said he was in trouble and was crying. Before she could question him further another man took the phone who said he was a police officer. He explained that her grandson was not in trouble but his friends were and $2700 was needed right away to pay for the bond.

The Cohasset woman drove to Stop & Shop and completed a cash transaction to have the money wired to Canada. After leaving Stop & Shop, she drove to the police station to report the incident. The officer handling the matter recognized the scam right away and called Stop & Shop, which was able to stop the transaction. Police said a senior citizen in Scituate fell victim to one of these scams and wired $2,500 to Canada from a local supermarket.

Contractor issue

A 93-year-old Cohasset woman notified a friend, who is a local carpenter, after she felt a contractor was overcharging her for some repair work on her chimney, police said. The contractor wanted $5,800.

The friend, a 78-year-old Hingham man, stopped by to check the work and a heated argument with the contractor ensued; police were called.

The responding officer went up a ladder to view the work on the chimney and agreed that it did not appear the contractor – a 22-year-old man from Farmingdale, N.Y. – did the repointing on the chimney as he was supposed to. The contractor ended up leaving without being paid, police said. No charges were filed; the female homeowner just wanted him off the property.

In custody

A 58-year-old man from Niantic, Conn., who is wanted on a warrant for not showing up to court on a drunken driving charge in Cohasset back in 1998, has been incarcerated at the Corrigan Correctional Institution in Connecticut on separate charges, police said. The institution notified Cohasset Police after running a computer check on the man that revealed the warrant. He has to finish up his time in jail there before he will face the Cohasset charge, police said.

MV crash

At 10:35 a.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 6), several 911 callers reported a motor vehicle crash at the lights in front of Stop & Shop. Police said a 19-year-old Cohasset man in a 1999 Ford pickup truck was exiting upper King Street on the green light when he was hit by a 2007 Toyota Corolla, operated by a 25-year-old Scituate woman. Police said witnesses reported the Corolla that was headed south on Route 3A ran the red light and hit the driver's side door of the pickup. Both vehicles were towed. The Scituate woman, who was cited for a red light violation, was transported to the hospital with minor injuries, police said.

Gray van

A Cohasset woman reported that a gray school van was driving erratically last Wednesday (Oct. 6) at about 3:04 p.m. near Beechwood and King streets. Further investigation revealed the van was out of the South Shore Educational Collaborative in Hingham, police aid. Police contacted the collaborative and made them aware of the complaint. The collaborative has several bus routes in Cohasset.

Damage

The location manager of the movie being filmed by the Red Lion Inn reported last Wednesday (Oct. 6) that an air conditioning unit appeared to be damaged. He did not know if the unit had been vandalized and just wanted the matter logged, police said.

Harassment

The ex-girlfriend of a 37-year-old Cohasset man reported to police last week that her ex-boyfriend has been continuing to call her leaving her raunchy messages. The woman, who lives in Maine, asked police to ask him to knock it off, police said. Police said they spoke to him and the calls have stopped.

Dog complaint

A Woodland Drive caller reported to police last Thursday that there was an ongoing problem with a woman who walks four dogs. Police said the caller did not think she could handle four dogs at a time. The Animal Control Officer was notified and will follow-up, police said.

Strange man

The Cohasset mother of an 11-year-old girl reported to police that there has been a man lurking around Government Island who appears to be homeless and that made her daughter feel uncomfortable. The man was described as having a long, gray ponytail, 3/4-length coat, and a backpack. She reported the man had been observed before in the area and may have set up a tent in the woods. Police checked the area and could not locate him.

Vandalism

A 54-year-old Cohasset Ledgewood Farms Drive man reported on Saturday (Oct. 9) that someone had let the air out of a tire on his 1996 Toyota 4Runner. He had heard someone in his driveway at around 5 a.m. and put on a spotlight and then heard footsteps. When he went out to his car later that morning, he saw the flat tire, police said. Police will put on extra patrols.

Larceny

A 24-year-old Scituate woman went into Starbucks on Sunday at around 11 a.m. and when she came out, her over-the-shoulder handbag was missing from her 1996 Lexus SUV. She had left her bag on the front seat and did not lock her car, police said. Inside the bag were an iPod worth about $100 and a cell phone also worth about $100. The handbag – which is a white and black LeSportsac — was worth about $50. She had her wallet with her. The incident is under investigation.

Paraprofessionals want to unionize

Seeking representation under the CTA

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A group of school employees are seeking to unionize.

The paraprofessionals — who have had their pay rate changed and reverted back — twice in the last two years, informed the school department they are seeking representation by the Cohasset Teachers Association.

The School Committee voted to take the next step toward recognizing the union at its meeting on Oct. 6.

Approximately 33 employees are included in this proposed union, and include teacher assistants, library assistants, technology aides and other similar positions. The employees are found at all levels of the school system from pre-K to the high school.

The School Committee could have proceeded in one of two ways in recognizing the new bargaining unit. The committee could have agreed to have neutral party check the authorization cards to determine if a majority has signed. If majority status is established, the committee then voluntarily recognizes the Cohasset Teachers Association (CTA) as the exclusive representative of the employees group and agrees to negotiate a collective bargaining agreement.

The School Committee took the second option, which requested the CTA to file a petition for certification with the Division of Labor Relations. The state department will act as the neutral party and certify a majority of the group wants to unionize. Once certification is issued, the committee would be obligated to engage in good faith bargaining.

The CTA is affiliated with the Massachusetts Teachers Association. Cohasset teachers and secretaries are also under the CTA umbrella.

The cost for negotiations with the paraprofessionals as a bargaining unit is not included in the school counsel retainer. All the negotiations will have to be paid at the standard legal counsel rate of $220 per hour.

"The cost involved is in the negotiations," said Superintendent Denise Walsh.

Currently, the paraprofessionals are the largest of three non-union groups, or employees-at-will, working in the school district. Bus drivers and two central office secretaries are also not protected by a union contract.

The paraprofessionals, their rate of pay, and the way they are paid has been on the School Committee's radar since last fall. Days before the school year began last year, the paraprofessionals were informed their benefits and the way they had been paid for decades was changing. They were to become hourly employees, instead of salaried.

By December, after several meetings with the committee, the decision was overturned and the paraprofessionals returned to the way they were being paid.

This year, the paraprofessionals received another memo informing them their pay was changing. The change in pay structure resulted in a loss of $1000 annual salary for many of the employees. After a meeting with the School Committee in early September that decision was overturned.

To return the paraprofessionals to their salary rate, with a 2-1/2 percent increase over last year and with appropriate step increases, resulted in a $38,685 cost over what had been budgeted for this fiscal year.

School superintendent search set

The School Committee set forth some key ideas they want to convey to prospective candidates, ideas that will be written in an informational letter.

School committee chair Helene Lieb said she wanted to make sure Cohasset's record as a top performing school district should be at the forefront.

"To say we're a beautiful community is not enough. We are one of the top 20 high schools in the state and ranked nationally. This place rocks," Lieb said.

School committee vice chair Alfred Slamets said Cohasset's high performance in multiple standards, strong athletic program, music, drama and dramatic programs, and community service programs should be highlighted.

"This community and parents are very supportive of education. These kind of things attract the right kind of candidate," Slamets said.

Other thoughts for what the committee was looking for in a potential candidate were strong human resource skills, communication skills, academic leader, creativity, and flexibility.

"We want the perfect candidate," said school committee member Paul Scheeren.

The perfect candidate also included a desire to live Cohasset, excellent written and oral communication skills, a doctorate in education or one in process was preferred.

The school committee said they wanted to promote the salary to be competitive, especially compared to the surrounding towns. Walsh's salary for the past year was approximately $167,000.

The school committee is going before Town Meeting members Oct. 25 "to ask for additional funds to attract the right candidate," Slamets said.

The search committee will also include a representative from the Cohasset Teachers Association, a representative from the Cohasset Administrators Association, a parent representative, a representative from the Cohasset Finance Committee, and a representative from the Cohasset Community Partnership.

The search committee will also include a representative from the Cohasset Teachers Association, a representative from the Cohasset Administrators Association, a parent representative, a representative from the Cohasset Finance Committee, and a representative from the Cohasset Community Partnership.

Also, Dr. Joanne Rys, who was not able to attend the meeting, will also be aiding in the search.

The whole community will have opportunities to get involved in the process in the next month or so through a focus group and survey. The school committee anticipates a lot of community interest in the search for the new superintendent.

The focus groups will help the committee determine, via conflicts, what the community is looking for in their next superintendent. The purpose, Ferris said, is to find out what kind of candidate the town wants and what are the important issues they want the new superintendent to address.

"You get a different kind of input with the survey than the focus group. In the focus group you can ask further input because the conversation leads to one question after another," Ferris said.

In January, a representative group of search committee members will review the applications, determine who qualifies, and make recommendations to the school committee's subcommittee.

The committee's subcommittee will then conduct interviews in January, and hold a public forum for candidates. Following the forum and interviews, the process becomes confidential again. The finalists' resumes will be open to the public.

Director of human resources Ann Wallace Walsh is leading the search.

School partnership series launched

Brings parents, staff together

By Nancy White
nwhite@cnc.com

Every month during this school year, the Cohasset schools student services department is putting their professional staff front and center to talk about issues facing parents and kids today.

The effort is a brand new way for parents to meet with school staff, learn from their expertise and discuss common problems and potential solutions.

Student services director Denise Messina and her staff, which is found throughout the district, are calling the presentations Student Service Parent and Professional Partnership Series.

The student services staff includes a variety of professionals – occupational therapists, physical therapists, behavioral adjustment counselor, school psychologist, speech pathologist and special education support professionals.

"They are a highly qualified staff and we wanted to find a way to share that and bridge it," Messina said.

When she approached the staff she said their response was enthusiastic.

"The staff identified areas they wish they had more parent talk about with parents," Messina said. Topics then grew out of the staff's area of expertise and interest. Many are concerns and questions the student services department receives over and over again.

The topics range from bullying to anxiety to fine motor skills to [illegible] (see sidebar for full listing).

The morning lecture series will include a presentation by the professionals then open it up for a dialogue between the parents and professionals.

[illegible] Childs, secretary of the parent organization Special Education Parent Advisory Council (see sidebar).

Lisa Iarossi, an occupational therapist at all three Cohasset schools, has helped to coordinate the series.

"It's an opportunity to bring professionals together from different schools and with different expertise. Everyone bring something different to the table," Iarossi said.

She will be part of a panel of professionals to speak to parents about getting and keeping a child organized for school and the benefits of an inclusion classroom.

"The inclusion piece is a part that's new to a lot of parents," Iarossi said. Many parents are accustomed to students receiving specialized instruction in a pull-out, separate classroom situation. "Inclusion brings specialized instruction into the classroom and we want to make parents more comfortable with that through an understanding of the process involved."

In addition to being a new way to dispense information, Childs said the partnership series offers another opportunity for parents to interact with the staff.

"It's a wonderful way for parents to meet the professionals that are working with their child everyday," Childs said. "I think it is great student services is reaching out to parent for them to be included in the process."

In fact, that is one of the program's goals.

"We want parents to feel comfortable with the staff that is working with their child on critical developmental issues," Messina said. "This is just one way to support building a partnership."

The Student Service Parent and Professional Partnership Series is a complement to the parent-run organization, Special Education Parent Advisory Council (SEPAC) workshops.

"I see this series as another resource to our families and affords professionals and families another opportunity to participate in topical presentations and discussions related to field of student services and special education," Messina said.

Both workshop opportunities are not designed solely for parents of students on IEPs, they are relevant for all.

"We want to open it up to all parents in the community. This is about helping all families with all the problems that might relate to their child," Childs said.

About SEPAC

SEPAC stands for Special Education Parent Advisory Council. It is a system-wide organization of parents working in partnership with teachers and special education service providers, the director of student services, superintendent and school committee to promote a successful educational environment for children. Their mission is to ensure that all children have equal access to educational opportunities, and schools that are safe, nurturing, challenging, learning environments.

The SEPAC holds meetings on the first Tuesday of every month, alternating morning and evening times. Each meeting features a speaker who informs the group about the latest research concerning learning and parenting typically developing children, as well as children with special needs.

The next meeting of SEPAC is Tuesday, Nov. 2 at 9:30 to 11a.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

'Level services' budget for schools

Discussion started on 2012 budget

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The school administration is starting to build the fiscal 2012 budget.

Superintendent Denise Walsh sought guidance from the School Committee on how to build the budget: level services, level funded, or something in between.

The committee determined a conservative level services budget is the way to go, and as more budget pieces become known they will determine if a reduction is needed, or an override.

Walsh said a 3.2 percent increase over the current year's budget is needed to meet contractual obligations and fixed costs, which translates to about $500,000.

If a level-funded budget is created, which keeps funding roughly the same as the fiscal 2011 budget, it would translate roughly to "a $500,000 cut" to the budget because of the increased cost of contractual obligations, Walsh said.

The committee discussed the many moving pieces of the budget from grants to state aid to special education funding.

"All the issues statewide are going to impact our budget," said Helene Lieb, school committee chair.

The Cohasset school district was the recipient of a $105,000 Education Jobs bill grant. The one-time funding can be used to create, save, or restore teaching jobs. The committee recommended using the grant in the fiscal 2012 budget, rather than the current fiscal year.

School Committee member Paul Schubert was optimistic about the fiscal outlook in Cohasset. While real estate sales are down in other parts of the state, Cohasset's real estate has remained steady.

Schubert said with the Education Jobs bill and some new growth monies the town might not be in terrible shape.

"Building a level budget is not reasonable," Schubert said. He offered creating a budget with a $250,000 increase over the current fiscal year.

Walsh said even with that type of increase layoffs might be unavoidable.

"If (it ends up) we're not getting the money we expect we'd have to talk about an override," Lieb said.

School Committee member Jeanne Astino said an override would not pass given the state of the water department.

"We need to get creative," Astino said. She wanted to look at the possibility of getting rid of the block scheduling, or doing a modified block schedule, where there could be significant savings.

Walsh offered that the school department build a conservative, but level services budget.

"Create a budget, as we have before, conservatively, but level services," Walsh said.

"(Making cuts) too early doesn't give people the idea of how much money it takes to run the district."

Lieb said it's important for residents to know what would possibly happen in the school system with the projectd level of funding.

"It might energize people to take action," Lieb said.

Walsh said the principals and administrative team would be working in the coming months to build next year's budget.

Three to interview for interim manager

The third finalist Robert Robinson has connections to Cohasset and is recently relocated back to Massachusetts. Robinson has international experience, IT implementation experience, and experience managing a water resource authority.

"His background is a little different than the others, but showed he understands town government," Selectman Lee Jenkins said.

Carlson said while he was impressed with his resume, he did not have interim town manager experience.

The Selectmen briefly considered having the Interim Public Management, LLC come in for a presentation. But, a majority of the selectmen felt the logistics (the company is based in Arizona), the expense (they ask for the same salary the current town manager is receiving) and the question of if they had specific Massachusetts experience was too much to overcome.

"Initially I was intrigued by the company, but they are from Phoenix and are a bit pricey. So I put them aside because we had such good candidates," Quigley said.

Carlson agreed, "they sent a fine presentation, but I think some of the other people (have skills) more relevant to our needs."

In addition to the top three candidates, the Selectmen also voted on two alternatives, in case one of the top three was not able to make the interview.

Water needs oversight

Citizens' petition seeks selectmen control over spending

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A citizens' petition has been put forth asking for more oversight for Water Commission spending.

On Wednesday night, the Selectmen did not jump on board with article, and raised questions as to whether the action being requested was legal.

Michael Ronzoni of 50 Reservoir Road, the proponent of the article, said the purpose of the article was essentially to have the Board of Selectmen take over financial decision making for the water department. The petition proposes imposing restrictions to limit the Water Commission's charge, control and authority to spend money without the approval and consent of the Board of Selectmen.

"The Water Commission must be transparent and accountable. This is a way to do that," Ronzoni said.

The article comes on the heels of the water department's fiscal crisis last spring. A Special Town Meeting had to be called to deal in June with a $700,000 shortfall in last year's budget, and to raise rates to ensure a similar shortfall would not happen in the current fiscal year. To compound the issue, many residents were and remain to be unhappy with the quality of the water.

"People are mad about the quality of water they are getting for the amount of money they are paying," Ronzoni said.

He – and his fellow citizens who signed the petition – have some concerns about some spending practices and the water commission was able to move forward on spending and contracts with little checks and balances.

Selectmen vice chair Ted Carr's first question was whether the board could even take on this responsibility. Town Manager Bill Griffin said as a citizens petition Town Counsel was not permitted to review the language of the article as it appears in the warrant, but could review its legality as a motion is drafted for Special Town Meeting (Nov. 15).

Selectman Fred Koed has his doubts about the town's authority to impose this restriction. The formation of a water department dates back to state legislation passed in 1886.

"I think the issue here is electing competent water commissioners. I can't see the water commission coming here every week. I don't know how the Board of Selectmen is going to have time to do this," Koed said. "I understand your frustration with the whole situation, but I think it is a little big punitive for the new water commissioners (to have this extra layer of review)."

Koed said there were two relatively new water commissioners on the board who were looking at the department from all angles, but change takes time.

Griffin said that as town manager he has oversight over the enterprise fund (money in and money out), but not operationally.

A financial and operational audit is currently underway and a series of recommendations for operational improvements is one of the deliverables.

"I'd like to see this addressed after the auditor gives his report. I don't see the urgency right now to do this," said Selectman Paul Carlson.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley gave a different reading on the petition.

"I understand people are angry and people have a right to be angry. This is the people of the town saying you told us you'd do better, we don't really trust you, and you need to figure out a way to make this right," Quigley said.

"I understand the spirit in which this is being brought forth."

The Selectmen will want to hear Town Counsel's opinion on the article before making a recommendation for town meeting. But, it will be the voters at Town Meeting who will have the ultimate say on the article.

SCHOOL REMINDERS

Hello Cohasset. I hope that everyone enjoyed the Columbus Day weekend that just passed and are getting themselves ready for several more weeks of beautiful fall weather. The colors of the leaves have been so pretty to see as they emerge and with this season of change also comes a few reminders as school is in full swing.

The most important one is for all of us to make sure to slow down while driving as many children are walking, riding bikes or scooters to school and the school busses are making many frequent stops. Also, we need to make sure to follow the rules about our cell phones while driving in the car and remember that texting is not allowed and is something that I am reminding myself every day. It is so easy to pull the phone out for that one "last time" of texting or even talking on the phone and the outcome could so easily become something more than a ticket or warning (which is not something any of us would like either!)

The last request that I have received for this week's column is in regards to the pick up/drop off routines at the three public schools in town, especially at the Osgood School. Please take the time to request the procedures that are in place at the schools. Park in safe, appropriate spaces, follow the lines that everyone else is following and do not try to find a better spot or park in a foolish space that only causes more traffic congestion. No one wants to be inconvenienced or late these days but by following the rules, it will help all schools flow in a smoother pattern. Now, on with the news. Have a super week Cohasset.

Joshua's Run is full of heart

Fall race benefits Jimmy Fund

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The celebration of life at this race is palpable in every volunteer from the registration, to waters stops to the local community who line the course.

Fall in New England is both the peak, and the end of road-race season. Joshua's Run gives deeper meaning to saving the best for last. Joshua's Run is on Sunday, Oct. 23. This five-mile race is among the most challenging, scenic and "feel good" races there is.

Joshua's Run has something for every family member to enjoy, from the youngest to the oldest. It's really three events in one. There is a Kids Fun Run at 8:30 a.m.; 2 Mile Fun Run / Walk at 9 a.m.; and 5 Mile Cliff Challenge at 10 a.m. All events begin and end at St. Mary's Parish Center, Scituate.

The 2-mile course is perfect for the sprinter or someone who wants to challenge themselves with the hills without the distance of the longer course. Or you can walk the two miles and enjoy the gorgeous views of the Atlantic coastline.

The 5-mile course, also known as the "Cliff Challenge" is not for the faint of heart. The course is the perfect combination of flats and "climbs" allowing your body to "rest" in between the sets of hills. The end of the race is a nice downhill feeding into a fast, flat stretch of road that your legs will thank you for as you approach the finish and await the great food and music at the post race party — a time to enjoy the fruits of your labor. The party features delicious food provided by FLIK and musical entertainment by local musician Matt Brown and friends.

Joshua's Run began in 1996 as a way to give back to the community that supported this local boy throughout his cancer diagnosis and successful treatment and to raise funds for others like him. Over the years, a wonderful community of generous, philanthropic residents have gathered to make a difference. One of these people was Scituate's own beautiful Andrea Gaziano, who lost her heroic six-year battle with cancer when she was 14 years old. Andrea was a much-loved member of the Joshua's Run community. Andrea is, in fact, the very reason this race goes on. Her story serves to strengthen the resolve of all who support this race and to carry on in her spirit and actively engage in the battle against childhood cancer.

"This is a phenomenal race in every way," says Race Director, Esther Blacker, mother of Joshua, for whom the race was named. "People come for the challenge of the course, and then get hooked by the emotion of it all."

The celebration of life at this race is palpable in every volunteer from the registration, to waters stops to the local community who line the course. The races "Hill Heroes" are seen in both named hills along the course and photos of children who have been or are currently patients at Dana-Farber's Jimmy Fund Clinic. As runners climb the hills and question whether they can make it to the top, the answer becomes clear at the sight of the kids' faces in the photos. The serve as "inspiration for the perspiration" as the saying goes, and perhaps even inspire some PRs at this autumn race.

The major sponsors of this race truly give more than funding, they are the foundation of the race and it truly comes from the heart. The biggest contributors are Granite City Electric, G&R Construction, Hyundai and BlackRock. The smaller local businesses who have generously supported the race over the years include: Culkins Construction, Nantasket Eye Care, DJ Richard Electric, Anderson Fuel, Good Sports, Greater Boston Running Company, South Shore Orthopedics, Norwell Veterinary Hospital, and new this year, Peak Physical Therapy and Wellness.

Joshua's Run proceeds are directed to The Andrea Gaziano Memorial Fund within The Jimmy Fund at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. This fund specifically benefits pediatric oncology research at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. Pre-registered entrants will automatically be entered into a special raffle! Great prizes for the top pledge earners! All participants are encouraged to raise $50+ for the battle against childhood cancers. All race fees and pledge donations are tax deductible and non-refundable.

Joshua's Run has raised more than $365,000 since the race's inception in 1996 and this year they intend to bring that over the $400,000 mark. Participants are encouraged to raise as much as they can either through a flat donation or collected pledges. Run great and feel good...that's what Joshua's Run is all about — celebrating and embracing life's challenges. Register for Joshua's Run now. Visit joshuas-run.com.

Building of second Minot lighthouse is topic

Cohasset Historical Society will continue its monthly Wednesday Night Lecture Series on Oct. 20, at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St. Paul Fiori and Rebecca Bates-McArthur will tell the story of the building of the second Minot's Ledge Lighthouse. The program will start at 7:30 p.m., and is open to the community at no cost. Light refreshments will be served.

Lying about a mile off shore, Minot's Ledge has been the curse of mariners for many years. Something had to be done to warn sailors of the dangers, and so, the first Minot's Ledge Light was erected and ready for service in 1850. Just over a year later, in April 1851, a fierce storm claimed not only the lighthouse, but its two keepers as well. In 1855, the construction of the second lighthouse was started and Fiori and Bates-McArthur will recount its construction and bring a video tour of the inside of the interior of the structure.

Spiritual retreat offered for caregivers

An interfaith retreat for people who care for those with chronic illness will take place from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., on Saturday, Oct. 23, at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham. Cost is $49. We Auto Know
by Gene Smith and Jay Gorman
COOLANT COLORS
Automobile owners may wonder if it is okay for them to add/replace coolant that is different from the original antifreeze. Well, the short answer is "no." The fact is that auto manufacturers have largely replaced the once nearly ubiquitous green coolant of a decade ago with various formulas of differently colored coolants. The carmakers claim that using anything other than the coolant designed for their vehicles will compromise the factory's preferred type of corrosion protection. While all coolants made for automobiles are 93%-95% ethylene glycol, they have different protective and anti-corrosion ingredients. Because vehicles are engineered with pump seals, gaskets, polymer parts and o-rings that are compatible with specific additive formulas in mind, straying from the original coolant poses potential problems.
If you have any questions about antifreeze - or about any other writeup
...ften issues with your car. When you need to call ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT. In fact, now is a great time to bring your car in for a tune up and some preventative maintenance to make sure your car is in the best possible condition before you have to face autumn rains and winter storms. Our ASE certified technicians will take care of things like antifreeze and checking your windshield wipers, which will make your winter driving experience much safer. The Friendship sloop was among the first ship models Hartshorne completed. The Friendship also has a 12-1/2 pound lead keel and as seaworthy as the real thing

Cohasset resident John Hartshorne presented his scale model of the Bowdoin to Captain Andy Chase, first captain of the schooner Bowdoin at Maine Maritime Academy this past weekend. The student captain of the Bowdoin is behind the model holding her tightly as the wind was quite strong.

BOAT BUILDING IN MINIATURE

John Hartshorne took up model ships in retirement

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When retirement comes so does a lot of free time.

Filling that time with something rewarding, challenging and fun doesn't always come easy.

Cohasset resident John Hartshorne faced this problem about 20 years ago — and discovered model ship building. Before long the interest became a passion and revealed a talent.

From a Friendship sloop to a steam-powered launch to a World War II troop transport to an Arctic exploration schooner, Hartshorne models run the gamut of sea-faring ships.

"When I retired and came to Cohasset I had time to concentrate on something," said Hartshorne, 85.

Unlike most ship models, Hartshorne's models do more than just sit on a mantle they can sail the ocean blue.

"I liked doing the models, but I also wanted something that I could play with," Hartshorne said. Most of his models are equipped with some kind of motor and remote control.

The diversion into model shipbuilding followed a long career as a management consultant, but working with his hands had always been an interest. He and his brother used to make and use model tractors and trucks as kids.

"I always thought it was fun to make things to scale and operable in some way. But, I never got into it until I had the time."

— John Hartshorne, Border Street

"I always thought it was fun to make things to scale and operable in some way," Hartshorne said. "But, I never got into it until I had the time."

The Friendship sloop was his first big ship model project. Using a technique called the "lift method" Hartshorne put together the hull by layering pieces of wood, similar to a baker making a layer cake.

"It's very accurate and makes for a very sturdy structure," Hartshorne said. The center of the hull is hollow allowing room for the mechanics of the motor and sails to be enclosed and hidden.

The Friendship also has a 12-1/2 pound lead keel and as seaworthy as the real thing, Hartshorne said.

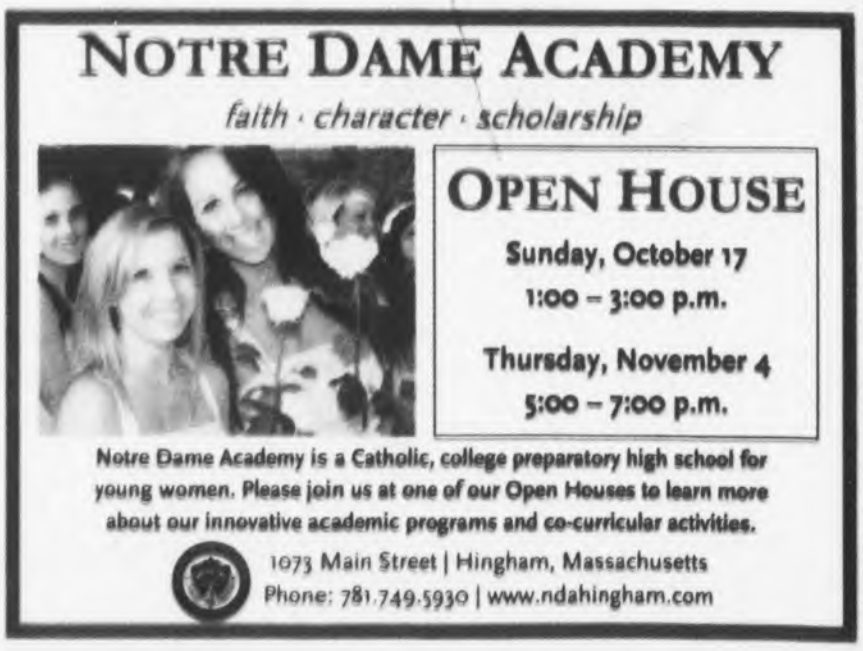
"It really sails, even in rough water. With the remote control it can go as far as you can see," Hartshorne said, who has often sailed the Friendship and his other models in the Gulf River behind his home. The remote control can steer the boat and trim the sails.

For Hartshorne, his interest is in the details.

"The fun is in the building; it's kind of like an addiction, I suppose. The best part for me is to find as many pieces of detail. I like incorporating those tiny things that really convince you it's the real thing," Hartshorne said.

His model of the USS General W.A Mann, a World War II troop transport, allows him to go back in time. As a member of the U.S. Navy, Hartshorne served on the 566-foot boat that once transported 5,000 troops all around the world.

"It was quite a special boat, very beautiful," Hartshorne said, pointing out the clipper bow and teardrop shaped stacks. The model is detailed down to the many lifeboats (there were 5000 crewmembers aboard after all).



A trip to the lake region of England was the inspiration for another one of his models. There he and his wife, Mary, encountered these lovely steam driven launches.

"Mary admired them particularly and wished she had one," Hartshorne said with a smile. With that inspiration, Hartshorne sought out plans to build a steam

John Hartshorne's Mount Washington steamboat floats on Lake Winnipesaukee where the real thing has ferried people for decades.

The Nellie model is a scaled down version of a steam powered launch built in 1872 and now housed in the Mystic Seaport Museum. The model runs on a steam engine and has many details, like the fringe canopy, to make it look like the real thing.

powered launch. At the Mystic Seaport Museum he found "Nellie," a steam powered launch built in 1872. Hundreds of hours of work later the miniature Nellie was launched, complete with a fringe canopy, a steam engine that can maneuver the boat forward and backward, and whistle.

The creation of the ship models, including the meticulous detail work Hartshorne requires of himself, takes more than two years to complete.

The first test of a sturdy, seaworthy ship model occurs in the bathtub. If all goes well in the bathtub, as in it floats as it should, the Gulf River is the next trial.

Hartshorne has also created models of the Mount Washington — a Lake Winnipesaukee paddleboat and historical icon — an ice racer boat and a plexiglass profile model of the USS Oakland for his brother.

Hartshorne is taking up a new challenge as of late: finding forever homes for his models where he can be assured they will get proper care.

This past weekend Hartshorne and his wife, Mary, traveled to Maine Maritime Academy to present his working of the ship model of Bowdoin, an Arctic exploration schooner. His Bowdoin was launched in Cohasset in 2001 and took two years to build. The 44-inch model of the real 88-foot ship sails just like the real thing through the power of remote control.

He handed over the model to the current crew of Bowdoin where they promptly inspected it for accuracy.

"They know the boat better than anyone. They would ask 'does it have…' and there it is," Hartshorne said. "I'm delighted she's now theirs – and so, apparently, are they."

Some of the models he has worked on have already found permanent homes. He restored a ship model of the St. John, a brig that tragically shipwrecked off Cohasset and claimed the life of over 100 Irish immigrants that now resides in the Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum.

"It was a thrilling opportunity to bring that model back into shape," Hartshorne said.

Another re-conditioned model Charlotte found a home in the main room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Hartshorne is hopeful each of his models, which were made with a lot of care, love and painstaking work, will find a suitable and appropriate home where they will be well taken care of.

OCTOBER IS BREAST CANCER AWARENESS MONTH

In Their Own Words

Linda M. Wallace – it didn't make sense

In November 2009 my younger sister was diagnosed with Non-Invasive Tubular Breast Cancer. She was 51 at the time. She had her surgery and she went through seven weeks of radiation. It was extremely scary and I worried about her all the time. Then in March 2010 I went for my mammogram and they saw something and wanted to do a biopsy. I immediately took everything into the Faulkner Hospital; since that is where my sister had gone. In April, I was diagnosed with Micro-invasive Ductal Carcinoma at the age of 53. So within six months of each other we were both diagnosed with breast cancer.

There is no history of breast cancer in my family. Not my mother, not my two aunts, no first cousins. The doctors say it could just be a strange coincidence. Now you must know, my sister and I have always been competitive with each throughout childhood and into adulthood. But this was too much. Just because she had breast cancer did not mean I wanted breast cancer.

We both had surgery with seven weeks of daily radiation. And we are both on Tomoxafin for five years. My sister was my strength, even though I never told her. She was my support system. She sent me cards of encouragement and she would always ask me how I was feeling and doing. We share something now that I could never imagine. We both did everything to avoid getting breast cancer. We ate healthy, we had children and nursed the children. We didn't smoke, we maintained a healthy weight; it just didn't make any sense.

Lisa Jessick: Be vigilant and proactive

I am 45 years old, married, and involved in many charities and civic projects in my area. Top of my mind is always breast cancer organizations that support awareness, research, and prevention. This became of major concern to me when my mother, at age 61, was diagnosed with breast cancer and had a radical double mastectomy and still suffers the consequences of surgery, chemotherapy, and radiation three years later.

That's when I truly understood the impact of my family history. My grandmother (my mom's mom) had a mastectomy, my aunts (my mom's two sisters) were affected – one with a breast lumpectomy and the other passing away from colon cancer. I am now absolutely committed to preventing and beating any breast cancer possibility in my future. I have a digital mammogram every year (and wish I could have more), have proactively pursued ultrasound testing for areas of concern, and have already established a relationship with a breast cancer specialist.

I recommend vigilance for all women and proactive involvement in your own best health.

Jane McGovern: Healing through laughter

I am a Scituate breast cancer survivor, and have teamed up with two friends, also survivors, to write a play called "The MOMologues: Pink Ribbon Overdose." It is a comedy, yes, a comedy, about breast cancer. The three of us all drew on our sense of humor to get us through the ups and downs of treatment. We are hoping that the play will help our fellow survivors and their families do the same. We are going to use the play as a fundraising vehicle for non-profits that support women in treatment with breast cancer. The first presentation of the play will be Wednesday, Oct. 27 at the Hard Rock Cafe in Boston to benefit the Ellie Fund.

Meredith Rennie: Celebrating a milestone

I am so excited to share my story of survival. This will be the first October (Breast Cancer Awareness month) as a survivor. This is my story:

In August 2009, weeks after my 35th birthday, I discovered a lump the size of a pea in my left breast. Immediately, I knew. I called my doctor and made an appointment for an exam. During the exam, I was informed that yes, she felt it too, but not to worry, I was young and the odds of it being nothing were on my side. I was then sent for a mammogram and ultrasound. Again, they agreed there was a solid mass that would need to be biopsied, but I was young and the likelihood of cancer was slim to none. From there, I was referred to a breast surgeon. I was given the same spiel: the odds were in my favor as 85 percent likely to be cancer-free. In September of 2009, I had surgery to remove the lump.

When I woke from surgery, the doctor again reassured me. Ten days post-op the message changed. I was anxious for the results of my biopsy and called the office. When I informed the woman on the other end of the purpose of my call, she hastily informed me she could not give me information and the doctor would call me. Two hours later, I received the call: "you have breast cancer."

Initially, all I could think was how unfair life could be. I had already become a widow at 29 when my husband, Paul, was killed in a car accident.

I had two children and I was the only parent left. What about them? The thought of my children, Megan and John, being left orphaned was what gave me the strength to go and fight this demon with everything I had. I often thought of the Dr. Seuss quote: "I have heard there are trouble of more than one kind, some come from ahead and some come from behind. But I've bought, I'm all ready you see, now my trouble are gonna have trouble with me."

"Promise me you'll always remember: You're braver than you believe, and stronger than you seem, and smarter than you think."

And off to battle I went.

My next stop was the Massachusetts General Hospital von Breast Cancer Center. I had heard wonderful things and wanted to be comfortable with the team I chose to help me in this battle. The first difficult decision: remove one breast or two? Since this was a battle to ensure I did EVERYTHING possible to not leave my kids, I chose both. On Oct. 19, 2009, I had a bi-lateral mastectomy. Funny, the start of my battle was during breast cancer awareness month! I made the right choice. When the pathology report came back, it showed additional tumors in the unhealthy left breast, but also showed atypical cells in the "healthy" right breast.

This is a sign that breast cancer would have developed there too. Now onto the chemotherapy.

In November 2009, I had my first dose of the "red devil". It is adriamiacin cytoxan, a cocktail called red devil because of the color and the severity of the illness caused following each infusion. But my first infusion of it was my last. I suffered an allergic reaction. My throat closed and over a period of 45 minutes I suffered three waves of throat constriction. In my mind, all I could think was "I am fighting so hard to live and the treatment is killing me?!? Finally, the reaction under control, my oncologist decided that for the next 2 1/2 months of treatment I would be given TC (taxotere cytoxen). It would work as effectively, hopefully without the reactions.

Before I even went for my next treatment two weeks later, my hair began falling out in clumps. This was a symptom I had been warned of. I decided to let my kids know that it was time for me to shave my head. It gave me a power over this disease. I was deciding to get rid of my hair, I was not going to let the medicine do it. While upset, they understood.

I tried to calm their fears by telling them that if my hair was falling out then the medicine was doing its job. I prayed I was right. My dad, a retired Marine, offered to do the honors of shaving my head. He told me to look at it as my initiation into boot camp. After all, I was in battle. Once the hair was gone, I took a picture. I immediately posted to Facebook. I was not going to let this disease make me feel ashamed of the way I looked. And the battle continued.

In February 2010, I finished chemo and was deemed cancer free. To celebrate, I participated in the Miss Pink Pageant. It is a pageant for breast cancer survivors. A place to share our stories and raise awareness. While I was not crowned Miss Pink, I was crowned Miss Congeniality! Following the pageant, I walked the Avon two-day.

My hair is starting to grow back very curly, but it's hair. I have had reconstruction surgery over the summer. I am facing a final reconstruction surgery in early October and will have a one-year check up with my breast surgeon. I see my oncologist every three months and take tamoxifen for the next four and a half years. I'm OK with all of that. I survived and will continue to fight to raise awareness and fundraise for a cure. One in eight women are diagnosed in their lifetime.

I do this for my mom, my sisters, my daughter, my friends and my neighbors. If my story makes one person get a mammogram or do a self-breast exam, I will gladly accept going through what I have. I am a fighter and I am a warrior.

As my sister, Melissa said to me as I was fighting (in the words of Christopher Robin to Winnie the Pooh): "Promise me you'll always remember: You're braver than you believe, and stronger than you seem, and smarter than you think."

She's right!

Ingrid Eikinas: Living for today

Let me take you back to 1995 for a moment. I moved to Boston to begin graduate school at Northeastern University. And I met a boy. Not only did I find him incredibly handsome, but he was a nerd – just like me! Anyway, we connected, and would talk for hours upon hours on any number of topics. He would often talk about a place that sounded unreal to me, a place that he longed for in a dreamy sort of way. How much hope his parents had when they moved there (he is dyslexic), how much the school system gave him a boost in life, how much he respected and revered and his Boy Scout leader (also an ex-green beret). He was talking to me about Hingham. Hingham seemed to be a part of him – in fact, it seemed to save him.

Flash forward to 2010. We are married with children. We've been living in Hingham for about six years now. The school department has been fabulous for our two daughters, one with special needs. I have heard that people in our town can be "snobby" – I have yet to really see that. Instead, I received an outpouring of love and support upon my breast cancer diagnosis. Almost three years ago, I walked into the doctor's office with tumors that had spread from my breast throughout my bones and almost completely covered my liver. There were so many tumors that it was useless to count them. I could tell by the looks on the nurses' faces that I was doomed.

"Yesterday is History The future is a Mystery Today is the Present That is why they call it a GIFT."

At 35 years old, I felt like a dead woman walking. Time to "get your affairs in order," I was told.

Unhappy with the first scenario I was given, we went for a second opinion at another hospital. This doctor told me that we would try like heck to "knock it out of the park." Really? I could hardly believe that he was using a baseball analogy for stage four cancer, but why not? I held on to the visual of "knocking out all the tumors." We kept that attitude going forward. I had a brief period of total remission before the cancer came back – this time to my brain. I remember looking worriedly at the doctor when I got the news. His reaction? "Your squash will be just fine," he said. His bedside comfort put me at ease. I still have stage four breast cancer, and it is still metastatic and considered "end stage." But it's being well managed by the best.

And I'm still here in Hingham – once my husband's dreamy past, now my present. I'll be here until the science runs out I guess.

In the meantime, I try to live by these singsong words as told to me by my daughter:

"Yesterday is History
The future is a Mystery
Today is the Present
That is why they call it a GIFT."

Brenda Pignone: 'I am blessed to be here'

Seven year ago July 8, 2003 on what was planned to be a day shopping with my then 13-year-old daughter became a day that stopped me in my tracks and cemented the meaning of "your life can change forever in one moment."

Sara and I took the train to Boston and I told her that I needed to stop at Mass General Hospital to "quickly have my mammogram" and then we could head out for a day of shopping and lunch. The radiologist suggested that the mammogram showed an area of calcifications and that she would like to do an ultrasound. The ultrasound confirmed that there was a cluster of cells that needed to be biopsied. Several days later a biopsy confirmed that I had breast cancer.

I have no family history of breast cancer, have never smoked and have no known risks for developing the disease and I had three previous mammograms that were "completely clean." It is imperative that women schedule their mammograms yearly. If I had elected to delay the mammogram, I may not have been one of the fortunate women who found their cancer so early and was able to treat it.

What unfolded from that day has been an incredible journey. I elected to have a mastectomy with reconstructive surgery and after my final pathology report revealed an "invasive carcinoma" I went through three months of chemotherapy. It was a difficult time filled with fatigue, nausea, being bald, and worrying about the impact my disease would have on my children.

It is here that I need to say how incredible the Abington community was in helping me through a very difficult time. I arrived home from the hospital to a basket filled with gift certificates from all area restaurants so that when I was having my treatment, I never had to worry about making dinner. The basket had certificates for massages, movie coupons, Dairy Queen certificates and many inspiring words of hope. Dinners arrived at my house for over two months. My mother moved in to help with all the daily activities my children were involved in so that their routine would not be altered. I will forever be grateful to the many people who helped me through this period of my life.

I tell this story because now seven years later, I am able to give women hope. My children came through that time stronger and more appreciative of what life is about. They are resilient and they are strong. They had moments of fear, moments of panic, but they also had moments of understanding and compassion. I now support causes such as the Susan Komen Rally for the Cure and Making Strides Against Breast Cancer. This past winter the Abington High School girls basketball team had a "pink night" and they raised money for breast cancer research. Every dollar helps in finding a cure. I am not the same person I was seven years ago. I live with more hope, more vitality, more compassion, and more humility. I am blessed to be here.

"I am not the same person I was seven years ago. I live with more hope, more vitality, more compassion, and more humility."

There is an amazing amount of research being done in the area of breast cancer. I feel fortunate that I have been able to be a part of this research. I still go for blood work every three months, and mammograms and MRI's every six months. Each year that I am cancer free the women I work with have a "pink day" to celebrate. My children celebrated a recent milestone in my survivorship by hanging pink ribbon balloons around town. I believe that the most recent statistics show that one out of every six women will be diagnosed with some form of breast cancer.

My closing comments are get your mammograms, support your friends and family members fighting the disease and continue to help raise money to support breast cancer research and its cure!

OCTOBER IS BREAST CANCER AWARENESS MONTH

'You can beat this disease'

Risa Graziano, Marshfield

COURTESY PHOTO

Risa Graziano has been cancer-free for more than three years.

Around Thanksgiving 2006, at the age of 38, I found a lump in my right breast during a self-check at home. A mammogram, ultrasound and biopsy soon followed, and I was officially diagnosed the day after Christmas with Invasive Ductal Carcinoma. (Not the best Christmas gift I could have gotten.) My oncologist recommended an aggressive course of treatment; beginning in January '07, I was to undergo six sessions of ACT chemotherapy in an attempt to reduce the lump (which it did), followed by a lumpectomy, followed by seven weeks of daily radiation. I am very pleased to report that treatment was successful, and I have now been cancer-free for more than three years.

One of the most difficult thing to deal with — and I'm sure almost all families go through this — was attempting to keep some semblance of normality at home for my three young children: Owen, Nora and Molly. My fantastic husband Vinny took the reins on much of the parenting when I was not up to speed, and with assistance from our friends and neighbors, we were able to keep the kids' lives fairly routine. Another thing — although I had always offered my help to friends and family, I had been the type of person who felt uncomfortable ASKING for help, and it was therefore difficult for me to accept it. My neighborhood put together a "dinner list," and these wonderful people (some of whom I was only barely acquainted) would show up on my doorstep each night with groceries or fully cooked meals. I was simply blown away by the support and generosity of my friends and neighbors. Eventually, I had to accept the fact that yes, I needed help, and I started letting people help me. That was a very humbling experience, and I'll always be grateful for everything they did to help my family.

Throughout the entire ordeal, my attitude remained one of "Let's do this thing!" I was eager to start fighting right away, and worked very hard to keep that positive momentum going. To me, failure was not an option, and I would not stop until the job was done. In addition, I have always prided myself on my free-spiritedness and sense of humor, and tried hard to keep that going as well. (To chemo, I wore silly pajama pants and sneakers with penguins on them, and watched funny DVDs on a portable player as toxic chemicals ran through my veins.) I tried my best to be upbeat, even when I felt absolutely terrible, and I think it really helped get through some of the rougher times. When I lost my hair, I chose not to wear a wig, and could usually be seen in my baseball hat, though I sometimes wore some pretty ridiculous headgear just for comedic value. At home, the kids and I would make jokes about "Bald Mommy." My husband even shaved his head when my hair fell out. (That scored big points with me!)

In Their Own Words

My current attitude toward being a breast cancer survivor is one of quiet pride. Although I donate and fully support the movement, I'm not a pink ribbon-wearing person, and I sometimes rankle at being identified as "one of the sisterhood" of survivors. That is not in my nature. However, I am by no means shy, and I'm extremely comfortable sharing my insight and experience with any person going through a similar experience.

The personal things that the doctors and nurses can't tell you, the in-your-face, living-with-it-every-day reality of the situation...only someone who has gone through it (and hopefully has come out the other side healthy) can offer that kind of truth, and I share that information willingly.

And the best way to beat the disease, most breast cancer survivors and doctors will tell you,, is early detection.

Risa Graziano

If she hadn't given herself a breast exam, Marshfield resident Risa Graziano might have not found the tumor that had formed.

"It was in my right breast," Graziano said. "One day it wasn't there, and the next day it was. It seemed like it formed that quickly."

She went to the hospital the day after Christmas 2006 to get the lump checked out and was diagnosed with a form of breast cancer called Invasive Ductal Carcinoma at the age of 38.

"My doctor was very aggressive with the treatment," Graziano said, noting she underwent six sessions of chemotherapy before she had surgery.

The lump was eventually removed. After surgery, Graziano had to undergo seven weeks of daily radiation treatments.

She said through the whole treatment, her family – her husband, Vinny and three small children – were extremely supportive. Vinny even shaved his own head when Graziano started losing her hair.

She is now cancer-free.

"When I was going through treatment, I just tried to keep things as normal as possible," Graziano said. "My three kids had to have their lives and I felt like breast cancer was just another issue I had to tackle."

Graziano said people who are initially diagnosed with the disease should seek out others who have been through treatment to get the real stories, not the ones from the Internet.

She also said support groups are very helpful and noted she herself has turned into a sort of resource for people who are diagnosed with the disease.

"I wish I had someone like that when I was first diagnosed," Risa said. She added being positive can help a great deal.

"You have to look for things in life that make you feel better," she said. "You have to take care of yourself and continue to live your life. Assume that everything will be OK because in this day and age, more than likely, it will be. There are a lot of new treatments out there."

Pattie Majenski

Majenski discovered she had breast cancer through self-examination. She found a lump in her right breast back in July of 2005.

"It was like a hard marble," she said. "I had never felt it before."

She went to her doctor immediately but was told she only had "cists."

Majenski said she was skeptical about her initial diagnosis.

"I just had a bad feeling," she said.

Eighteen months later, she returned to the same doctor. Her "cists" had gotten bigger. There were four of them in her left breast. But the doctor told her she was not dealing with cancer.

She was not due to go back to the doctor until February of 2008. But because of a nervous feeling she had, she went back to the doctor to get the "cists" checked in October of 2007.

She was then told she had breast cancer. She was 36 years old.

"By some miracle, it was still Stage 1 cancer," Majenski said, noting Stage 1 is considered an early form of cancer. But she added the doctor said she had a very aggressive form of breast cancer.

She had a double mastectomy that November.

"I did the double mastectomy because it was an aggressive form of cancer and I wanted to get rid of all the breast tissue," Majenski said. "It's not a necessary thing for all women to do but I felt it was necessary for me."

Afterward, Majenski underwent 16 weeks of treatment with three different kinds of chemotherapy. Since her mastectomy, she has had breast reconstruction, one of the technologies available out there today.

Majenski said she is happy to be alive, referring to her experience. She stressed if you are someone who doesn't believe what a given doctor is telling you about your body, stay on the issue and keep getting it checked out.

She said if you are told you have cists, then tell the given doctor to "aspirate" them, which means draining the cists.

"If they are really cists, they can be drained," Majenski said. "You have to be your own advocate. I was like the poster child for early detection but the system somehow failed me. I wish I had known the right questions to ask."

Majenski said breast cancer is not in her family gene pool and she reiterated she was under 40 when she found out she had the disease.

But she also said she would've never discovered the initial lump in her breast without doing a breast exam on herself.

"My prognosis is that I have a 15 percent chance of ever getting the cancer again," Majenski said. "It's just something I need to stay on top of."

Victoria Corse

Marshfield resident Victoria Corse was initially diagnosed with an aggressive form of breast cancer back in March of 2005. Back then she had a 4.8-centimeter tumor removed from her left breast.

She was put on a program where she was having chemotherapy every two weeks along with doses of radiation.

"After the surgery, technically, I was cancer-free," Corse said.

But this past August, Corse was told her cancer had come back. Now, she is waiting to have a mastectomy in November with the hopes of getting rid of her cancer once and for all.

Rockland resident Judy Shores has been in remission from breast cancer for 28 years.

Corse said her doctor, Beth Lesnikoski, told her the tumor is operable and noted she will "probably" not have to have chemotherapy again, something that Corse would be fine with. She added the first time she went through chemotherapy, it was a very painful experience.

"Every hair on my body was gone," Corse said. "Can you imagine what it's like to not have any eyelashes?" She added she chose not to wear wigs because her head "prickled" with pain from the chemotherapy sessions.

She stressed what got her through that time was the support of her friends and her three grown daughters. And those are the same people who are getting her through a tough time right now.

"It doesn't change the fact that my kids are terrified," Corse said. "And this whole thing has been really tough on my elderly father."

Corse said being emotional is to be expected when dealing with breast cancer.

"It's OK to be angry and frightened," she said. "But I would tell people going through this to reach out for help, whether it's your friends, family or therapy. The help is there—you just have to accept it. Don't be too proud about asking for help. Where will that pride get you?"

Judy Shores

Rockland resident Judy Shores said it's OK to be afraid of breast cancer, but stressed the disease is beatable, as she is a breast cancer survivor of 28 years.

"I was 45 when I was diagnosed," Shores said, noting she was also going through a tough divorce at the time.

Shores said when she was initially diagnosed with the disease, her breast cancer was labeled by doctors as "Stage 3," a late stage of the disease.

She immediately had a mastectomy and then underwent several weeks of chemotherapy treatments.

During the whole ordeal, Shores had to put food on the table for her two daughters, so she kept working at the U.S. Trust Bank in Braintree, which was located at Five Corners.

"I used to try to find humor in the situation, even when I lost all my hair," Shores said. "I had to keep doing what I had to do. I kept a positive attitude, and I've always had a particularly strong sense of faith."

She said she realized a lot has changed in terms of breast cancer detection and treatment, something she finds very promising.

"A lot has changed since the time I was diagnosed," Shores said. "But there are things that haven't changed, like the importance of early detection and getting yearly mammograms."

Shores said she's been cancer-free for so long that she doesn't even think of it that much anymore.

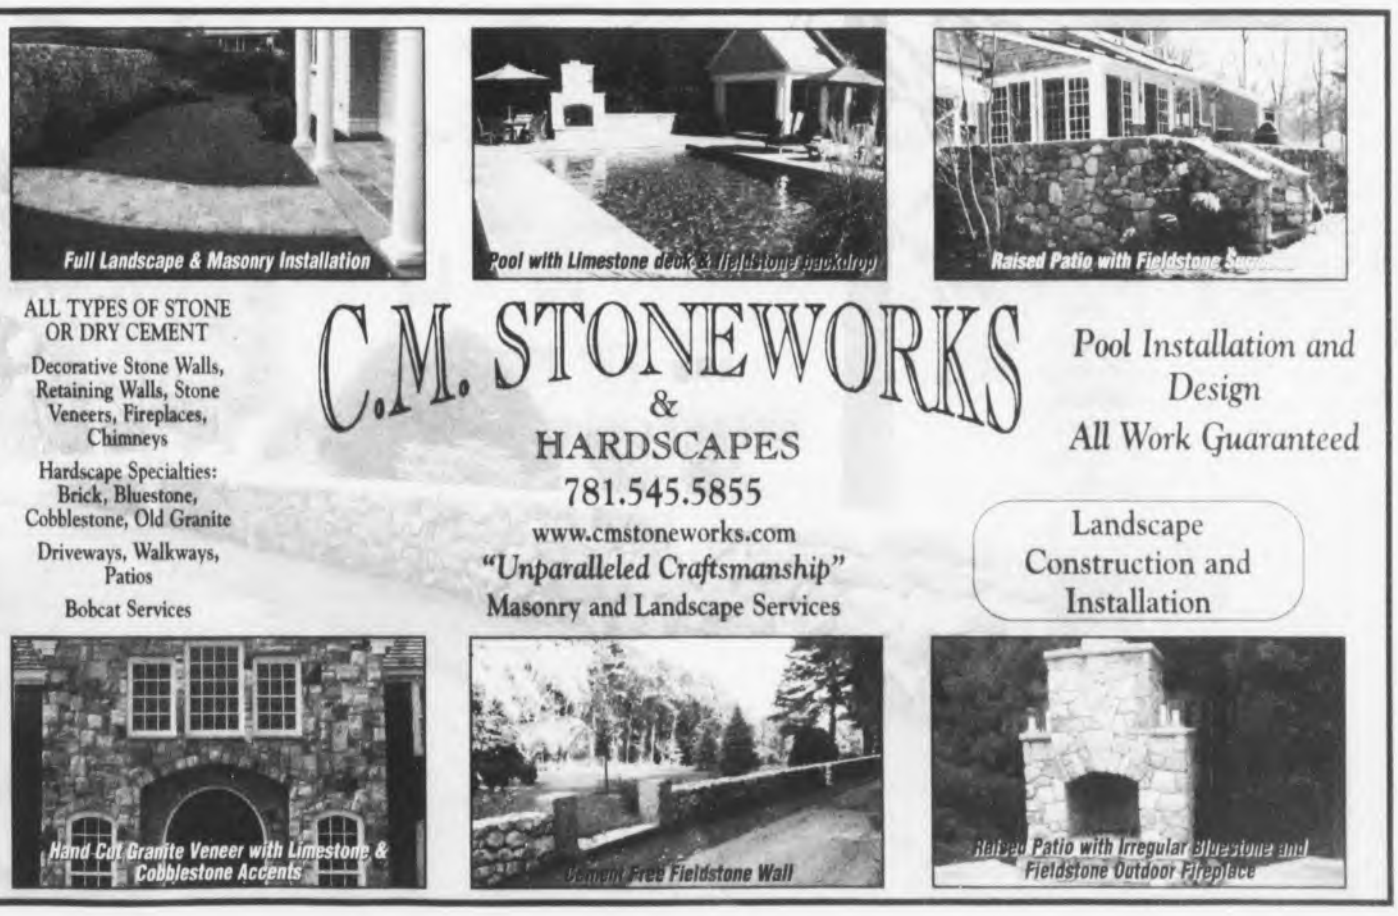
"I try not to dwell on it too much," she said. "I know I'm in remission, but cancer can lie dormant in certain parts of the body.

"For me, it's about living each day to the fullest. I try to stay active and I have no regrets. Having breast cancer is what you make of it."

Panera Bread's Pink Ribbon Bagel

Panera Bread's Pink Ribbon Bagel has returned to help support the fight against breast cancer.

A Pink Ribbon Bagel is being sold in participating bakery-cafes during the month of October in honor of Breast Cancer Awareness Month. The bagel features cherry chips, dried cherries and cranberries, vanilla, honey and brown sugar.



Sue Stees, one of Panera Bread's first franchisees and a breast cancer survivor, developed the idea for the Pink Ribbon Bagel in 2001 as a way to help support the cause.

Panera will donate a portion of proceeds to The Ellie Fund's Care for the Caregiver program, supporting their mission to fight breast cancer and ease its effects on women and families across Massachusetts.

A partner of The Ellie Fund since 2006, Boston Bread has raised more than $400,000 to benefit The Ellie Fund's Care for the Caregiver program through the Pink Ribbon Bagel and other promotions.

Senior power

We are particularly proud this week of two "senior" ladies featured in the Police Beat on page 3.

One of the women – in her 90s – contacted a friend when she felt a contractor was overcharging her for repointing her chimney. The friend arrived, a dispute ensued with the contractor, and police were called. A police officer climbed the ladder and agreed that the work did not justify the $5,800 bill.

Another woman – in her 70s – did not fall for the infamous "Grandparent Scam" that continues to plague seniors nationwide. She asked pointed questions from the caller who claimed to be her grandson. The scammers soon gave up and probably went on to find a new "target."

We think it is wonderful when seniors feel empowered enough to ask pointed questions and not fall for efforts to be overcharged or scammed.

We all need to learn from these two women who demonstrated both intelligence and courage.

On a related matter, we make it a point never to donate over the telephone. We always ask for printed information on a particular cause when contacted. In our experience – 95 percent of the time – the caller gives up when asked for backup materials and moves on.

Caller ID is another great feature. If we do not recognize the number or if it says "anonymous" – we just let it ring. If it is important, they will leave a message and we can return their call.

Recently outside Shaw's a young man was collecting for a Veterans group that we were unfamiliar with. We noticed how many shoppers dug into their pockets and donated money without asking a single question. We approached the young man and asked for some information on the group, which was not local. We were polite and he provided us with his boss' business card, also from out-of-state. We gave the card to the Commander of the Scituate American Legion Post for follow-up. We support our Veterans but we want to be sure that any donated funds actually help them and we prefer to give to local organizations.

We are gratified when people of all ages – but especially our seniors – ask the right questions. The best defense is always a good offense!

If someone is scammed or thinks there is an attempted scam – they should notify the police. Many people would not know about the Grandparent Scam if those affected had not reported it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Counterproductive Muslim bashing

TO THE EDITOR:

Is Muslim bashing useful, or is it counterproductive, in our struggle against terrorism? The Internet is buzzing with criticism of recent ostentatious public prayers by U.S. Muslims, and with dire warnings about the potential of being overwhelmed by Muslims. And we can expect more inane blather in the print media.

There are perhaps 1.5 billion Muslims in the world, and about 2 million in the U.S., most of whom are intent on earning a living and raising a family and are not about to get involved in support for terrorism. Many Muslims (and Muslim governments) consider terrorism to be a threat not only to nonbelievers but ultimately to themselves, and oppose rather than support it.

These responsible Muslims, particularly here in the U.S., should be considered a potential resource in our enduring struggle against terrorism, not only as being citizens contributing positively to the nation's activities (just like other Americans), but as a resource for our armed forces for speakers of Arabic and other relevant languages (and as a valuable resource for ordinary servicemen as well). That we have had a few bad actors (as we have had for every ethnic and religious group) is no argument for shunning them at the recruiting office.

Sure, the U.S. Muslim community can be also a potential resource for recruits to terrorist activity, and a provider of funds and other support to our enemies. But surely that is a small fraction of the community, a fraction that can be contained by a mixture of security vigilance by experts, and encouraging the cooperation of the larger Muslim community. That cooperation is not much encouraged by thoughtless Muslim bashing.

Radical Islam truly is a dangerous horror, but it is not the only Islam, nor the Islam espoused by many Muslim citizens of the U.S.

Discouraging cooperation, by mindless Muslim bashing, is inimical to our security, even though such discouragement is permitted by our tradition of free speech. However, that tradition also permits thinking, informed and far-sighted people to argue with the foolish abusers of free speech.

It is not being naïve or lily-livered to seek cooperation, rather than bash it with anti-Muslim propaganda, in this vital struggle. Cooperation does not preclude professional scrutiny to identify and neutralize the factions who would harm us.

A lesson in real community service

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing this letter to let all who live in Cohasset know what a valuable town employee they have.

I've had a mooring in the harbor for some time and had never really needed any assistance before last Saturday. I took my young daughter for a boat ride toward Sandy Beach when I developed engine trouble. I tried to fix the engine myself for some time, but as the sea got rougher and my daughter started to get nervous I gave some serious thought as to how we were going to back to the harbor. I didn't want to ask for help, but it came to a point where I needed to. I contacted the Harbormaster, Lorri Gibbons, and told her that my young daughter and I were stuck off Sandy Beach. I wasn't sure what my options were and asked for her advice on towing options. She asked if we were safe and did we have an anchor? I said yes we are at anchor and safe. Her next words to me were "I'll be right out to tow you in, don't worry." The Idea that help was coming was such a relief. I was able to calm my daughter down and make her more secure.

I thought everyone should know that from my first contact and all during the tow into the harbor our Harbormaster was a consummate professional. I feel we are all very lucky to have her working for the Town of Cohasset.

"The Zigzag Kids" series is about a group of children attending an after-school center with common universal problems. As in her Polk Street Kids series titles, the Zigzag Kid- stories are easily readable. "Storyteller" tells the entwined story of two girls linked to each other by their ancestry. Zee, a pioneer girl, lived during the period of the Revolutionary War and Elizabeth faces her own challenges in the modern world.

A selection of Giff's books, provided by Buttonwood, will be available for purchase at the event. If unable to attend and would like to order a signed copy, call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

COMMENTARY

PEGGY LEWIS

Without public comment, it will just keep happening. Public comment makes the Administration address the issues and address them correctly.

After watching the Cohasset School Committee meeting last Wednesday night (Oct. 6) I feel the need to address some of the discussion.

First there was the public comment discussion. Ms. Lieb has done a great job as School Committee Chair, and I am sure she will continue to do so in the future. The largest task Ms. Lieb has accomplished has been to welcome the public comments and participation segment at the School Committee meetings. However, it is obvious that we might be heading back into the day when Mr. Flynn and Mrs. MacCarthy were chairs. Dr. Walsh and Mrs. MacCarthy are both working very hard to keep the parents quiet in order to prevent public awareness. Cohasset is a little town and has one of the smallest school systems around.

Why can't School Committee meetings be run in a better way? Why can't things run more smoothly? Why is it so much work? Why is it so hard? Very simple, it is because the Administration, no matter what the issue, just doesn't care about your thoughts. They will pretend to listen to you, they will read your letters, they will even let you think they agree with you, but in the end it is all a fake and it will all get messy. The facts always get confused by the Administration, which makes one wonder if this is done on purpose so when controversy arises they can cover themselves. Parents have to keep repeating

Clay bottom to stay in Meetinghouse Pond

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Steel access ramp.

Meetinghouse Pond Project — If you have driven by the Common lately, you may have noticed that work is afoot. The area around the pond has been surrounded with fencing to keep the work area protected for safety purposes. As you can see, significant excavation is currently taking place. The whole idea of this project is to add new reinforced concrete walls on top of new reinforced concrete footers around the entire perimeter of the pond. Also, a new wider concrete sidewalk will be laid over the existing perimeter walkway.

There seems to be a bit of misinformation circulating that the reconstructed pond will have a concrete bottom installed. That is not true. The old pond had a clay bottom. Clay was chosen for the pond bottom because clay is impervious to water. Anyone who has clay in their yard knows that it sheds water very readily and the water will not soak into the clay. The same is true for a pond bottom. In fact, in this application clay is superior to concrete because it will not crack in cold weather. The clay bottom will be reconditioned. Some of the mucky material on top of the clay will be removed and replaced with new clay material. Often bentonite is used which is actually sodium bentonite.

So what is sodium bentonite? It is natural clay, which has the characteristic of swelling many times its dry size when it becomes wet. When bentonite is applied in a layer of porous soil or mixed with a porous soil, and moistened with water, it forms an impermeable layer. That's why this is an excellent material for this application. When properly applied, bentonite does not affect the water or wildlife. (As an aside, a bentonite and water slurry is also used as a lubricant for well drilling.) In our project, the engineers will actually decide the exact material to be used for the new pond bottom.

The first photo we have included shows a portion of the Robert Jason Road side of the pond wall after the old footer was excavated. If you look carefully you can see the broken up concrete pieces stacked in the upper portion of the trench.

Another photo shows how the contractor is able to get his equipment into the center of the pond over the trench that runs around the pond perimeter. The answer is a simple, sturdy steel plate that bridges the gap. Thus the small tracked vehicles have nearly an unimpeded access to the pond interior.

By the middle of next week, most of the site preparation work should be far enough along so that the contractor can start the forming work for the new pond walls. Let's see how far we get. Of course, the weather is always a wild card when it comes to construction progress and scheduling.

The old pond had a clay bottom. Clay was chosen for the pond bottom because clay is impervious to water.

Witchery in Salem Village

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

Winter in New England: long and cold and dark. Snow on the ground and sometimes pale sunlight for a few hours each day. In villages isolated from each other, small wood houses huddle close together. The men cannot plough in the fields, but there is plenty to do repairing tools and equipment, caring for animals. The women keep busy cleaning, mending, baking. Boys finish their schooling and chores, then play games among the bare trees.

The girls are bored and restless. For Elizabeth, Ann, Abigail and the others, there is no school. Daily household chores finished by late afternoon, there is nothing left for them to do. Singing, except for hymns at Sunday services, is not allowed. Dancing is sternly forbidden. Storytelling is suspect unless the Bible is the source and wisdom or morality can be learned. All devout Puritans are concerned with the sinfulness of man; the fulfillment of his hope for Heaven. The dread of predestination hangs heavy. Only the Elect may aspire to Heaven, and no matter what good deeds are done, if a sinner is not chosen, Heaven is closed to the sinner's soul. The evil of man could not have been more starkly illustrated. Laughter and lighthearted fun are easy indications that the Devil is poking his horns into hearts and minds, adding to the surety of eventual doom.

These girls, by the very nature of their maturing, are prone to unexplained physical pains, to flashes of intense imagination. And there are no approved outlets for their energy and adolescent anguish, no acceptable way to have fun, to feel important.

In the late afternoons when shadows are long and darkness fingers out from the trees and down the lanes, Elizabeth and several of her friends gather together in her house. Elizabeth's father, Reverend Parris, owns a female slave from the Caribbean, restless and lonely in this grim world. But she does remember that once there was sunshine and singing and freedom from fear of predestined disasters inflicted upon wretched sinners.

One day, drawing near the girls, she begins to weave a spellbinding tale of her happy – and heathen – childhood. Enchanted, the girls flock around her, beg for more. Tituba, her bondage forgotten, spins wild and wonderful tales of dancing and singing, of witch doctors, magic spells, sacrifices to gods, demons infecting people with madness, the devil at midnight. What turbulence is unleashed in the minds of these girls who can expect for their own future only drudgery and the certainty of eternal flames? Guilt over such sinful indulgence drives them nearly insane, but desire for more drives them back to Tituba's kitchen, to hear the slave, her eyes dark in the firelight, her voice eerily slurred and passionate.

Frail Elizabeth, youngest of the group, finally can stand no more. She falls ill, raves from her bed. Questioned by astonished and frightened adults "Who has done this to you?" she screams that the old village woman Sarah Good, has caused her suffering. The other girls quickly agree, shrieking obscenities, bodies contorted. Sarah Good is torturing them. Sarah Good must be a witch.

During that exceptionally cold winter of 1692, Salem Village reeled in the chaos of mad accusations flung out by the distraught girls. Suddenly, they became immensely important members of the stern Calvinist congregation, their words feared, their presence dreaded. Hundreds of people were imprisoned. During the trials, prosecutors "proved" witchery by asking the defendants questions like "If you're not a witch, how do you account for those poor afflicted girls now falling into fits at the sight of you?" Or: "Did you not pause as you passed your neighbor's house? And did not your neighbor's cow fall ill and die that very day?"

Before sanity returned, 14 women and five men were hanged from June through September. One 80-year old man, Giles Corey, was pressed to death for refusing to admit that he had consorted with the Devil. Two dogs were executed for the crime of being accomplices to witches. Four-year old Dorcas Good, daughter of Sarah, was jailed, chained to a wall, for eight months after several girls complained that her "specter" had bitten them. The bites could clearly be seen on their flesh. Dorcas watched as her mother was hanged on Gallows Hill. Later it was reported that she "cried her heart out."

Much later, one of the girls stated for the Church's record: "We did it for sport; we must have some sport."

HEALTH NOTES

Global warming and other worldly thoughts

By Steve Bobo

Global Warming — We try to represent a consensus of scientific opinion, although the degree of accuracy is an open question. An earlier Health Notes (2005) reported that winters were no fun even in 1965. Everyone had skates the harbor would usually freeze over to the extent that one could walk out to his boat over the ice. A condition we haven't seen in years. Below, we publish those comments with appropriate imperfections.

According to many media sources, we seem to have lost the battle for control over change in our environment in several important areas. Although, we seem to have reduced depletion of the ozone layer somewhat, seemingly causing skin cancer deaths to level off, global warming, now generally acknowledged to be caused by burning of fossil fuels, has reached the point that most predictors indicate between 2 and 10 degree Fahrenheit annual temperature rise over the next 90 years. The annual rise over the last 100 years was about 1 degree.

Melting of polar ice is proceeding freely, and the calculations indicate that rates of inundation of low lying areas such as Bangladesh, Florida, Margin Street and parts of Jerusalem Road will not increase greatly within the next 10 years. The rate of increase will remain at about an inch per year, or perhaps a bit more because of global warming. Even at this rate, we will have to worry less about the rivers and streams entering our estuaries, because many of them will be inundated by more frequent high tides. For example, the Gulf and Little Harbor will receive more and higher tides, which will contribute to better flushing and less worry about our herring, fish, and lobster population. To respond to the water rise thing, it seems that we will build ever more massive and expensive dams as in Egypt, and Jerusalem Road, so we should get along well for a while.

But about fish, almost all species are under considerable pressure from over fishing, with consequently higher prices and less supply. The current news is that recorded instances of over fishing are reducing fish species. engineering is doubling the size of several species. When numbers become too small to fish with existing methods and are abandoned as a source of income, they generally resurrect themselves; sometimes in another place. Generally, the loss of a species is caused by its replacement by a more efficient species; such as mammoth to elephant; dinosaur to- and perhaps Cod? – but then they may be wiped out by a meteorite.

Now about man — Happily, we are making great strides medically. We eliminated mumps, polio, and several other maladies, however some of these seem to be making a comeback. By increasing productivity of our farms, we are able to feed more and more people, albeit with poorer and poorer diets. The good news is that the increase in overweight is giving our medical establishment the opportunity to use economies of scale to solve the problems of things like diabetes and gout. And finally, enough people have AIDS worldwide so that the medical community may undertake its solution on a global basis.

Generally this column tries to expose a situation; give some facts and statistics about it and then to offer solutions, which we can use in Cohasset; admittedly a tall order when we're talking about things like AIDS, and global warming. Nevertheless, we'll try. Tongue in cheek, we offer the following:

- Buy more water. Cohasset's water is OK, but the fiction that it tastes bad must apply, since frequently the taste of water in other places is different, and may even sometimes be unhealthy despite pretty good oversight and control.
- Don't forget to fertilize your lawn. After all it helps agribusiness, which is exporting sugar, grain and corn to help feed the world.
- And by all means stop for that coffee Coolada and doughnut on the way to lunch. It helps the medical community work out what they can do to take care of any illnesses you may develop.
- And finally, if you can, tear down your house and replace it with a bigger one, or at least build a bigger garage for your SUV. You're entitled, and besides, it helps the economy and the environment. And if everything goes well, soon you may have waterfront property.

FOR THE RECORD

GREGORY MATHIS

A new law went into effect Oct. 1. While it didn't come with all the hoopla and fanfare of the new texting-while-driving law, it's an important law nonetheless.

It's important because it sets rules and regulations on how governmental bodies disseminate information to the public.

Many of our newspapers have written stories about the revision of the state's Open Meeting Law over the past few months. Many of those stories have appeared on the front page. It's an important story, and not just because it gives the media access to committee agendas, minutes of meetings, and keeps boards from making decisions behind closed doors. It's because it gives the public – you – access to the information you deserve. And if you don't have the time or the means to get to those meetings, you often have our newspaper or website to report what happened.

In this age of e-mail, text messaging and instant messaging, the growing fear is that government, especially town government, is being conducted in a vacuum.

We believe the more the public knows, the better.

In this age of e-mail, text messaging and instant messaging, the growing fear is that government, especially town government, is being conducted in a vacuum.

There are times town officials seem more concerned about talking to the video camera each week to make sure the cable viewers sitting at home are getting a good show. But this isn't show business, this is the town's business. And with that comes the responsibility of spending taxpayers' hard-earned money and keeping the public adequately and appropriately informed.

The idea behind the new regulations is to create more transparency. Transparency has been a big buzzword in political circles over the last several years with politicians at all levels promising more accountability, greater access, and an open book.

We know that's not always the case.

The Open Meeting Law has a lot of legs to it and it can be confusing. We shouldn't assume every new town official, or even every veteran town official, knows every aspect of the changes made to the Open Meeting Law. Education is the key here and making sure there are workshops and information packets distributed on a regular basis would help town officials from accidentally violating the Open Meeting Law.

Stricter penalties and hefty fines would also go a long way toward preventing further abuses of the law and ensuring that the town government process is indeed conducted in a public setting – with transparency.

One key point is the state's Open Meeting Law is now being enforced by the Attorney General's office. In the past, enforcement fell to the district attorneys, which meant there could be different interpretations of the law depending on what county you were in or who was DA. That part of the equation has been fixed and now the Attorney General's office will have jurisdiction across the board. That should help standardize the regulations as well as the punishment for those violating the law.

We hope these revisions work and not because it benefits us, but because it allows us to do a better job of informing you.

To view the new Open Meeting Law regulations, go to my blog http://blogs.wickedlocal.com/fortherecord/ and click on the Attorney General's link.

Raise a glass to 'End Polio Now'

Cohasset Rotary to hold fundraiser

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Tickets are $50 per person and seating is limited; no tickets will be sold at the door. The event begins at 6:30pm.

On Oct. 25 the Cohasset Rotary Club will host a wine dinner and auction at Bia Bistro, 35 South Main St. in Cohasset, with all proceeds going to the Rotary International's "End Polio Now" campaign. The auction will have a wide range of items available for bidding. Tickets are $50 per person and seating is limited; no tickets will be sold at the door. The event begins at 6:30pm.

The dinner will consist of a three-course meal paired with great wines chosen by Chef Brian Houlihan and his wine consultant; during the meal they will discuss the characteristics of the food and wine and what makes them work well together. Bia (the Irish word for food) is Zagat rated and has been chosen a "Best of Boston" pick by Boston Magazine.

One hundred percent of the proceeds will be matched dollar for dollar by the Gates Foundation Challenge to End Polio Now.

For tickets, or if you would like to donate an item for the auction, please contact Peter Pearce at 617-946-4045 or peter_pearce@ml.com

Why Polio?

Polio is historically the leading cause of disability and we are on the verge of worldwide eradication with universal vaccination. It exists in just four countries, Afghanistan, Pakistan, Nigeria and India. The Gates Foundation and Rotary International have teamed up to raise $555 million to finish the job.

MCAS scores are in Schools continue to meet state targets

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"These results drive our decisions on curriculum changes, professional development, textbook purchases. They tell us what things we need to spend more time on and what we're doing right."
— Denise Walsh

Each spring across the state students sit down to take the MCAS exam. The statewide assessment test gives schools a litmus test of how the school system is performing against state standards.

This year, as in all previous years, Cohasset Schools are matching or surpassing those standards. On Wednesday, Oct. 6 the School Committee received an overview from Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh and an in-depth look at their strengths and weaknesses from school principals.

"These results drive our decisions on curriculum changes, professional development, textbook purchases," Walsh said. "They tell us what things we need to spend more time on and what we're doing right."

MCAS tests include multiple choice, open response, and short-answer questions and writing prompts. School and district results are used to evaluate, revise, and update the curriculum and instruction programs, aligned with the Massachusetts Curriculum Frameworks.

All three Cohasset schools — Deer Hill, the middle school and the high school — met their targeted annual yearly progress scores on both the English and math portions of the test. If Cohasset keeps on pace with its yearly gains, all students should score proficient and above by 2014 when all students are required to be proficient in reading and math under the federal No Child Left Behind Act.

However, Cohasset schools are falling short of the targeted annual yearly progress in the subgroup of special education students. But, administrators said, Cohasset is not alone.

"The performance gap of many subgroups compared to the aggregate has narrowed; however, the gap between the aggregate and Special Education subgroup persists statewide," said Nancy Mrzyglod, director of Curriculum and Professional Development.

Student Services Director Denise Messina said there might be a flaw in how the subgroup is formulated. If a special education student is making progress in line with their peers, they are moved out of the subgroup.

"The qualifier with the subgroup is a lack of progress," Messina said. "But, that being said, we do need to focus a little more deeply and strategically at this subgroup."

Messina said some options they are considering is expanding the summer school programming to include all those students with warning and needs improvement MCAS scores, offering professional development opportunities to paraprofessionals and focusing on effective math teaching for students with learning disabilities.

By and large though Cohasset students performed very well on the MCAS tests.

In a comparison with six other South Shore school districts (Norwell, Scituate, Hingham, Hanover, Duxbury, Marshfield) Cohasset ranked third overall for percentage of proficient and advanced scores district-wide. They ranked first regionally in the grade 7 math test, grade 8 and grade 10 language and math.

Each year school staff at all levels from Osgood to the High School use the MCAS results to tweak their teaching methods and hone in on areas of student weakness. Each of the principals presented a plan to address some of the weaknesses the test revealed.

Osgood School

While the MCAS test is not taken at the Osgood School, much of the knowledge and skills third graders need to pass the test is learned in kindergarten through second grade.

Osgood principal Janet Sheehan said the focus this year is improvement in reading comprehension and writing. Students at Osgood have at least 90 minutes of instruction in English Language Arts and 60 minutes of math instruction daily.

A weakness has been found on the student's math open response questions, as well as reading comprehension from non-fiction samples.

Sheehan said they would continue to implement their early reading intervention program in kindergarten to get target the kids who might need help early on.

The new STEM lab, designed for hand-on science and math learning, will be used extensively this year to enhance teaching. This year, Osgood will also be looking at the possibility of new reading textbooks.

Deer Hill School

Principal Jennifer deChiara said at the Oct. 6 meeting that the teachers and staff would be taking an in-depth look at the MCAS scores on the Oct. 12 professional development day. The process included understanding why scores might have gone up or down and brainstorming solutions.

In the English portion of the test deChiara said students were less adept at responding to non-fiction writing. As a result, the reading units have been redesigned to be grouped under a theme, rather than by genre. A re-focus on open response will also be taken.

"It was a disappointing year in fourth grade math," deChiara said, adding the class is a small group with 108 students, 19 of whom are on special education plans (IEPs). "The scores were sensitive. That's one piece of the puzzle, but we have a lot of work to do to determine what the other pieces are."

DeChiara is also looking at new methods to differentiate instruction for both students with special needs and gifted students.

Middle-High School

Principal Joel Antolini in part credited the 10th graders success on the MCAS to block scheduling.

"(The block schedule) allows the teachers to spend more time on tasks and the growth shows," Antolini said. "Teachers can teach at a higher order."

That being said, Antolini said more efforts would be made in the instruction of writing, aligning content across disciplines, ensuring teachers are assessing students in similar ways.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

The controversial new state law banning text messaging while driving and prohibiting drivers under 18 from using any type of cell phone or mobile electronic device went into effect a few days ago.

This week, Beacon Hill Roll Call reviews the votes of local senators and representatives on various versions of the bill and several amendments - some of which became part of the final version of the bill and some that never made it.

The House and Senate had approved different versions of the measure. The major difference was that only the House version also banned drivers from using a hand-held cell phone and allowed those over 18 to use a hands-free one with voice-activated dialing. The Senate removed that provision.

Another difference was ducting versions of increased testing of drivers over 75. The Senate version would require older drivers to be screened and checked by their doctors at age 75, age 80 and then every three years to determine if they are physically and cognitively capable of operating a vehicle. The House version would instead require drivers 75 and older to take a vision test every five years when renewing their licenses.

A House-Senate conference committee hammered out a compromise version of the proposal that was eventually signed into law by Gov. Deval Patrick. That version did not include the House provision that would ban all drivers from using a hand-held cell phone and allow only drivers over 18 to use a hands-free one. It did include the House provision that would require drivers 75 and older to take a vision test every five years when renewing their licenses.

Prior to passage of the new law, the state required all drivers, regardless of age, to renew their licenses in person every five years but only required an eye test at the Registry of Motor Vehicles (RMV) every ten years. That law still applies to all drivers under 75.

BAN TEXTING WHILE DRIVING (H 4795)

House 154-1, Senate 37-0, approved and Gov. Patrick signed into law the conference committee version of a bill banning text messaging while driving and imposing a $100 fine for a first offense, $250 for a second and $500 for a third. The measure also prohibits drivers under 18 from using any type of cell phone or mobile electronic device.

Another section requires drivers 75 and older to renew their driver's licenses in person and take an eye test at the RMV every five years.

BAN HAND-HELD CELL PHONES (H 4466)

House 92-66 approved, Senate 16-18 rejected, an amendment that would ban the use of hand-held cell phones for all drivers but allow drivers over 18 to use a hands-free cell phone with voice-activated dialing.

The Senate rejection prevailed and the ban is not part of the current law.

(A "Yes" vote is for the amendment banning the use of hand-held cell phones for all drivers. A "No" vote is against the ban.)

SENIORS MUST BE TESTED BY DOCTORS (S 2290)

Senate 33-2, approved an amendment that would require older drivers to be screened and checked by their doctors at age 75, age 80 and then every three years to determine if they are physically and cognitively capable of operating a vehicle. The amendment replaces a provision in the bill that would have had the RMV conduct these tests and would have required seniors to pass the exam every three years beginning at age 75.

Seniors who do not pass the exam would be allowed to request the right to take a road test to qualify for their licenses.

This Senate provision did not prevail in conference committee. The House version won out, and the new law requires drivers 75 and older to take a vision test every five years when renewing their licenses.

(A "Yes" is for the amendment that would require drivers 75 and older to be screened and checked by their doctors. A "No" vote is against the amendment.)

PRIMARY ENFORCEMENT OF TEXT MESSAGING BAN (S 2290)

Senate 24-10, approved an amendment that would make the proposal banning texting while driving a "primary enforcement" law. This means that police officers would be allowed to stop and issue tickets to a driver solely for texting.

This Senate provision did not prevail in conference committee. The House version won out, and the new law is a "secondary enforcement" one that prohibits drivers from being stopped solely for texting and allows an officer to issue a ticket only if the driver is stopped for another motor vehicle violation or some other offense.

(A "Yes" vote is for the amendment allowing police officers to stop and issue tickets solely for texting. A "No" vote is against the amendment.)

Decision 2010

Candidates in the Third Plymouth District were asked to respond to the following question in 300 words or less.

How do you plan to vote on Question 1 (repealing liquor sales tax) and Question 3 (reducing sales tax and use tax rates to 3 percent) and why?

Finnerty: "Higher taxes equal higher unemployment"

Ten years ago the people of Massachusetts voted to reduce the income tax to 5 percent. How did the legislature respond? They ignored the vote! Some State Representatives made the reduction of the income tax to 5 percent part of their campaign platform. We remember. Do they? Ballot questions do not matter if the legislature does not respect the voice of the people. The legislature will not respect the voice of the people until we elect new legislators.

Liquor sales tax: Alcohol is taxed at several levels so that the total tax on some alcohol can exceed 40 percent of the price you pay and that is too much. We can reduce the sales tax on alcohol and it will continue to be one of the most taxed items you buy. We live next to sales tax free New Hampshire, an easy drive for many Massachusetts residents. When sales move to New Hampshire they take jobs with them.

Sales Tax: Tax policy does matter. Higher taxes = higher unemployment. It's that simple. Our neighbor, New Hampshire, provides a helpful comparison. New Hampshire has a zero percent sales tax and a 5.8 percent unemployment rate. Massachusetts has a 6.25 percent sales tax and a 9 percent unemployment rate. Which would you prefer?

The House of Representatives raised the sales tax to 6.25 percent. I favor the rollback of the sales tax to 5 percent because it will help us to recapture the 15,000 jobs lost as a result of the sales tax increase and it can be done without cutting local aid. A 3 percent sales tax would require cuts to local aid and local aid to our towns has been cut too much. Did you know that the Commonwealth spent 50 percent+ more on local aid in 2007 than it will spend in 2011?

Bradley: "Shares constituents' frustration with higher taxes"

I am voting no on Question 1. The revenue from this tax raises approximately $100 million a year, with every penny dedicated to helping those with alcohol and drug addiction as well as behavioral health problems. This commitment lowers the burden for health care costs on the rest of us. If this question passes, these much needed services would be cut drastically or shut down all together. There are only five states that do not have a sales tax on alcohol and the Massachusetts tax is one of the lowest in our region. Contrary to popular belief, this tax has not hurt businesses, as alcohol sales have actually increased 4 percent in Massachusetts.

Like each of the three candidates for Governor, I too will be voting no on Question 3. If passed, Question 3 would remove $2.5 billion from the state budget, or half of what the state spends on local aid every year. The result would be that already struggling cities and towns would be forced to raise property taxes to maintain basic services or lay off scores of police, fire and school personnel. Local estimates are that Cohasset would lose $802,054 every year.

I share my constituents' frustration with higher taxes. I am one of only six Democrats in the House to vote against the highest tax hike in Massachusetts history. I've voted against raising the gas tax, against raising the income tax, against raising corporate excise taxes and I voted to reduce capital gains taxes.

COURTESY PHOTO

Garrett Bradley, a democrat, is seeking reelection.

Voting yes on Question 3 is not a responsible way to express our frustration. For those who say they are voting yes on Question 3, where would they cut to compensate and how would they avoid simultaneously raising our property taxes.

Chambers: "State has problem living within its budget"

Question #1: I will vote to repeal the sales tax on liquor sales. I do so reluctantly because this is a luxury item and it frequently has adverse effects socially. This is not a moral issue in my opinion but practically the residents of the Commonwealth deserve reasonably priced liquor purchased here from a State retailer.

Question #3: I will vote for a rollback to 3 percent but it has to follow massive adjustments in spending by the Commonwealth. The State does not have a problem in generating tax revenues — it has problem in living within its budget. The Legislature always presents a balanced budget as required by law and proceeds to overspend it as requested by lobbyists. The savings required should come from early retirement and layoffs in the states bloated midrange administration personnel. The average government salary now exceeds the salary range in the private sector and includes overly generous pensions. There should not be any further layoffs directed at teachers, fire, police and other front line personnel; as in corporate controls we should be reducing excessive and redundant bureaus, and flattening the management structure.

However, one of the jurors, Henry Fonda, wants to "coolly deliberate the case." This Oscar-nominated drama illuminates the "petty impediments on the path to justice." Tales of great journalism past – and present

By Roy Harris
SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

Toting copies of the paperback version of my book "Pulitzer's Gold," I traveled to Las Vegas and Southern California last week. My mission, in talks to one crowd of journalists and two non-media audiences: dispel the notion that great public service journalism is only a thing of the past.

I'm happy to report that on all three of my stops I not only found receptive audiences, but also encountered good, current, local examples to help prove my point.

One of the joys of writing such a book is that it can turn the author into a speaker on his subject of choice – in my case, how dedicated Pulitzer Prize-winning reporters and editors dig out their "stories of a lifetime." The journalism cited in "Pulitzer's Gold" ranges from the 2007 exposure of abuses at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, to the 2002 detailing of how Catholic priests were kept on the job after sexually abusing young parishioners, to Watergate in 1972, and back to the 1920 revelation that Charles Ponzi was an outrageous Boston fraud artist – a forerunner of this century's Bernard Madoff.

There's a challenge, though, that goes with talking about evolving journalism history. I must keep a finger on the shaky pulse of the media today, helping diagnose problems, and suggesting prescriptions for treatment. Plus, as I prepare new editions of the book – the full title is "Pulitzer's Gold: Behind the Prize for Public Service Journalism" – I must be open to recently cases of media public service around the nation.

So it was heartening to find journalists, wherever I went, still on the trail of such projects for their audiences.

In Los Angeles, where I spoke at the Leo Baeck Temple, the buzz was about the Los Angeles Times' shocking exposure of the exorbitant pay – in some cases more than $1 million a year – given to officials of the poor Southern California city of Bell. The Times reports have led to indictments of some of the officials, along with investigations.

The smaller Desert Sun in Palm Springs, east of L.A., where I spoke at a library, has been performing a lower-key public service. All year, a reporter has been writing feature stories about the World War II veterans who live in the area – heralding their considerable contributions in the 1940s, and in their lives since then.

And while in Nevada, where I hosted a panel for the national conference of the Society of Professional Journalists, I found that the Las Vegas Sun continues to keep a close eye on construction safety, the topic that led to its 2009 Pulitzer Prize for Public Service. The Pulitzer was won for it by a then-29-year-old reporter, Alexandra Berzon, working on her first assignment after earning a graduate degree from the University of California, Berkeley. Indeed, Berzon described her reporting technique as part of my panel for journalists, while I ran through the 94-year history of the Pulitzers, and the public service they recognized, leading up to her work.

Roy Harris of Hingham recently returned from a trip to Las Vegas and Southern California with his book "Pulitzer's Gold."

One of the joys of writing such a book is that it can turn the author into a speaker on his subject of choice – in my case, how dedicated Pulitzer Prize-winning reporters and editors dig out their "stories of a lifetime."

Strangely, it was a trip West that almost didn't happen. Three weeks ago I pulled a hamstring muscle in Scituate, while stretching a bit beyond my capability as a first baseman in the South Shore Senior Softball League. Carried by teammates off the field, and then to South Shore Hospital's emergency room, I feared at first for the October travel plans that had been in the works for so long.

But now that I'm home in Hingham – and using my crutches less and less – the feeling of having overcome adversity makes the success of the appearances out West feel all the more rewarding.

Most satisfying of all, though: the confirmation that journalists are still out there, in communities around the nation, going beyond the "opinion-based" Internet and television talk that seems at times to replace real reporting. These journalists – like the Boston reporters who shocked us by uncovering the priest scandal – still are presenting readers and viewers with news stories, reported and edited by professionals who have public service as their motivation.

Roy Harris, a long-time Wall Street Journal reporter who now works with CFO magazine in Boston, lives in the World's End area of Hingham. The paperback version of "Pulitzer's Gold" was released by the University of Missouri Press in February. The book's website is www.pulitzersgold.com.

Advice based on personal experience

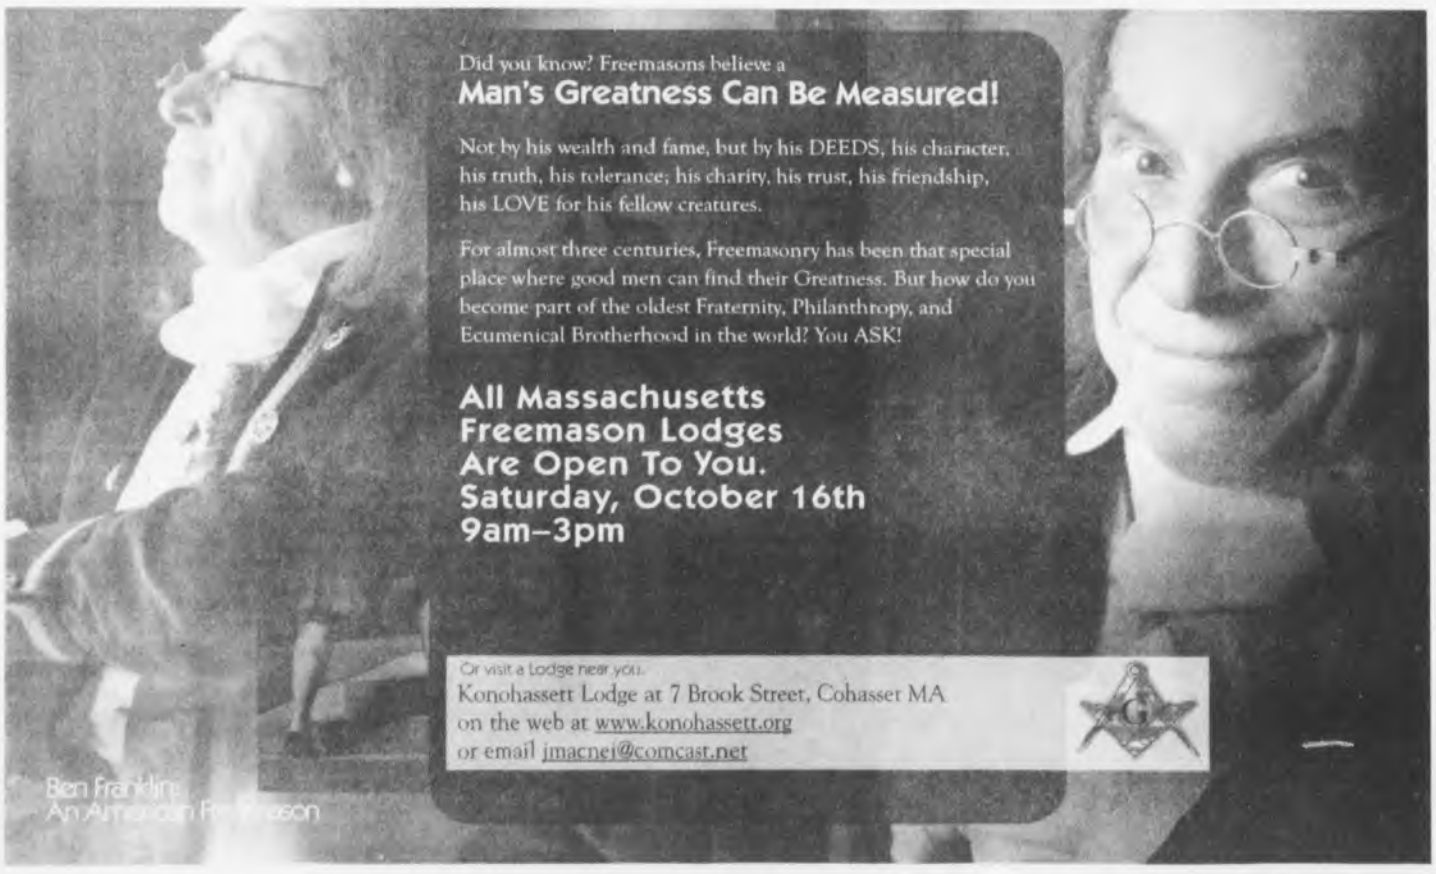
themselves over and over again and even then the Administration will insist that your issue is really about something else rather than what you say, and then they will even insist that they listened and addressed it. The same questions are asked repeatedly with no answers. So, the bottom line is, especially with this Administration, the public participation is a necessity. It is the only way the parents in Cohasset can truly know what the story is.

Why is it so hard? It is obvious that people have to keep clarifying every point they are trying to make over and over again. Without public comment, it will just keep happening. Public comment makes the Administration address the issues and address them correctly. Dr. Walsh and Mrs. MacCarthy are insisting that the School Committee keeps breaking the Open Meeting Law. Though it does not matter what is being discussed, neither one of them like it when a parent comments in any way. Having all meetings recorded and corrections made to the minutes in a timely manner are steps in the right direction.

As the issue of public commenting and participation was continuing, Ms. Lieb was explaining why she will be using her gavel more often from this point on. She stated that parents should go through the proper channels if they have a personal/personnel issue. Ms. Lieb actually even made it sound like this would work, but that is probably because Dr. Walsh sounds so convincing when she states the same thing, but for anyone who has ever had to deal with this Administration, for whatever reason, knows that is not how it works. For anyone who has not had to deal with this Administration, consider yourself lucky. Addressing the proper channels always leads to the Superintendent, and her judgment has been discussed over and over by parents and teachers at School Committee meetings and in the press.



Ms. Lieb stated that if someone came to her and wanted something on the agenda, she would check with the other members and Dr. Walsh and if the majority voted to put it on, it would go on. Of course that is how it should work, but it does not, not at least with this Administration. This is the time I guess we will see how strong our new School Committee is. The reality is that back when Mr. Flynn and Mrs. MacCarthy were in charge (Dr. Walsh stated in a meeting herself that she works for the School Committee and they are her supervisors) it was easy for issues to stay confined within the Administrative walls of the Cohasset School System.

I wonder if things would have been different for me back in 2007 through 2009 if this present School Committee was around and if Ms. Lieb was Chair. My personal experience was that two different times I went through the proper channels, I did everything I was supposed to and I followed all the rules. I asked the School Committee and the School Committee Chair mostly for help with two major issues that could not be resolved by going through the proper channels. I tried and tried. I exhausted myself and I begged both times and not one person in this Administration or the School Committee cared enough to help.

In 2007 I ended up with the fight of my life to remove my son from his IEP. The Special Ed Director, Linda Gill, fought me. I went to her and explained the reasons why I wanted this for my son. I begged for her not to fight me on this issue. Of course, that was only after going to Principal Antolini first and getting nowhere. I then went to Dr. Walsh, again I got nowhere. I then went to the School Committee and what Mr. Flynn stated to me was that "after speaking with Dr. Walsh, we are just going to let this play out." After a DOE hearing and after removing my son from his IEP, which was our right, a Temporary Restraining Order to prevent us from removing him was issued. Imagine that the School Committee still did not care?

Although, in fairness to Mrs. MacCarthy, she did tell me that the School Committee only deals with budget issues. I guess as School Committee Chair she must have forgotten that costly legal fees were going to be part of the budget. Months later I also worked with an Administrator for my job related issues stemming from the court battle initiated by the school earlier – no help again, and left without a job. So from my personal experience as a parent and an employee with two major issues in the Cohasset School System, (as negative as it sounds), I would advise people with issues not to bother going through the correct channels because your exhausting efforts will be for nothing. Start at the top and work your way down.

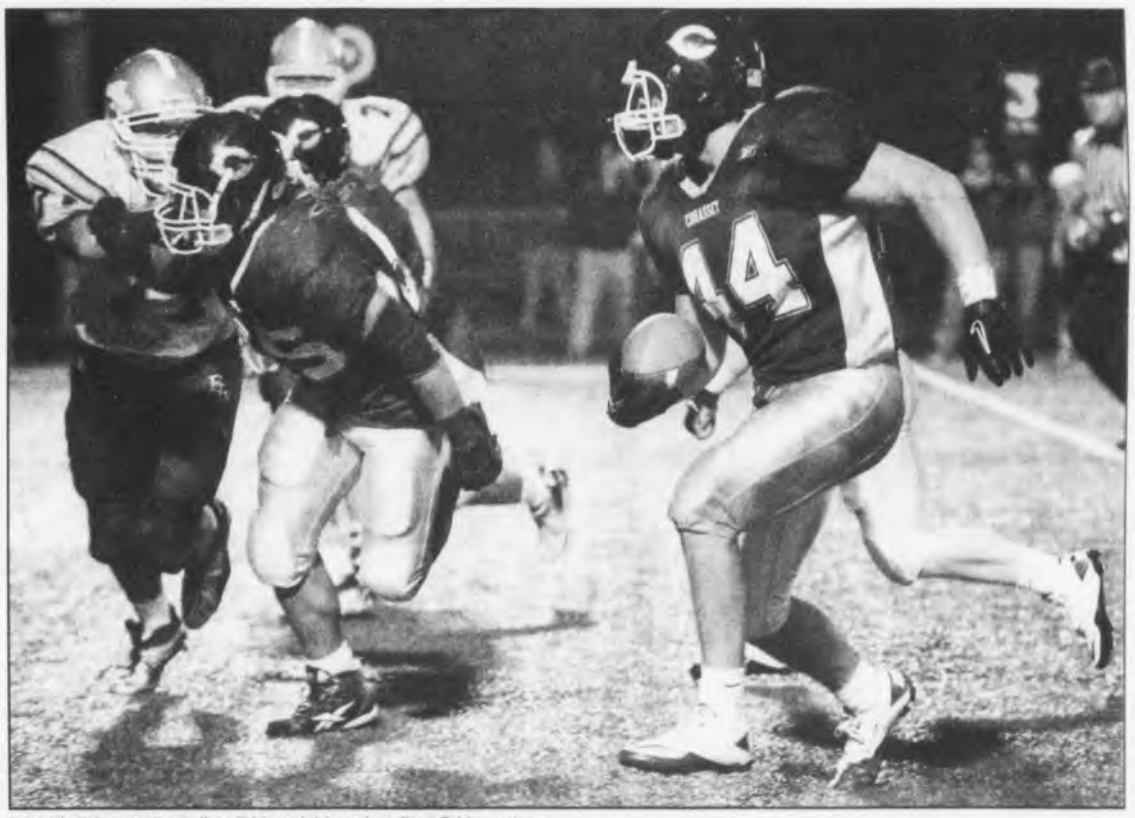
Total team effort

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

There are times when coaches talk about a total team effort.

On many occasions it is just a phrase.



Friday night in Cohasset, it was true as the Skippers dominated all aspects of the game in a 24-0 win over a pretty good East Bridgewater team.

Aside from a number of early penalties by Cohasset, the Skippers turned in a total team effort with solid play from all three areas - special teams, which had some nice kicks, a pretty fake two-point conversion and good coverage, defense, which recorded a big interception that set up a touchdown, made a few big stops on fourth down while shutting down East Bridgewater's explosive offense, and of course the offense, spurred by big runs by quarterback Jeff Cavanaro.

"All aspects were firing on all cylinders," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said, while jokingly apologizing for taking the company line, Bill Belichick style. "Special teams, offense, defense. It really was a team effort."

Cohasset struck first with a two-play, 25 yard drive highlighted by a 24-yard quarterback keeper by Jeff Cavanaro that set up a one-yard run by Jake Kissick, who took it right through the middle for a touchdown and an 8-0 lead with Kissick's two-point conversion

GIRLS SOCCER

Working hard and having fun

The wins haven't been piling up, but the Cohasset girls soccer team is giving their all.

"This fall has been a challenging season in the sense that we have had to start over in a few areas," Cohasset coach Deb Beal said. "In the past two years graduation has taken a toll on us. I knew coming into the season that we had some big shoes to fill in some areas on the field, primarily defense. For a few years now, we had some height back there. Most of the basketball girls played back there and it was a position I took for granted."

When circumstances changed, Beal had to make adjustments on the run.

"In August right before preseason I learned a few players had decided not to return and that created more holes to fill," she said. "In the backfield I had no returning starters. So we began figuring it out and I must say I am very pleased with the performances of the athletes taking on those roles."

After Tuesday's 4-0 loss to Norwell, Beal knows her team will have to battle.

"We have a long road ahead of us in terms of playing more consistently and ultimately reaching one of our goals and qualifying for post season," she said. "It's a situation right now of playing one game at a time and building and creating confidence on the field. Right now we sit at 4-6-2 overall and 3-4-2 in the league. With seven games remaining we need some wins. More importantly though we need to play more efficiently and play more confidently. I work with a tremendous group of girls who train hard and deserve to experience all the joys the game brings. I am confident that we have turned a corner and we are now ready to finish this season off strong. A few bumps in the road have set us back, but I feel now we are ready."

GIRLS SOCCER

Clipped, again

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

The Cohasset vs. Norwell girls high school soccer rivalry dates back to the first time the two teams stepped out onto the pitch, several years before the current players were born. And as cliché as it sounds, records really don't matter. When the two teams meet, regardless of the all-stars or the club soccer players that have and insane amount of talent who are out on that field, it's a game to watch.

This season may seem as if the rivalry's not as intense. Cohasset is down, having lost some of its greatest talent from the past few years, but if one thinks Cohasset Head Coach Deb Beal will sit around and use that excuse as to why her team stood at 4-6-2 following Tuesday's loss to Norwell, think again. She's not about to call 2010 a rebuilding season. It's a matter of building on the small aspects of the game and improving with each game and each practice.

"I think one of the things we really need to stop and focus on, which we're trying to, is the basics," Beal said. "We're not getting the basics done, and the past two games – Sunday we played Bourne in the Duxbury Tournament – and today, with Norwell, I think we concentrated a little bit more on not getting so caught up in

The win improved Cohasset to 8-0-2 and gave them the 18 points they needed to clinch a

This Week's High 5 (Week 7)

Brian Collins (Cohasset/ Hull)- Cohasset/ Hull took down Mashpee 22-33 on Tuesday to improve to 2-3 in the league. That wasn't what impressed me the most. It was Collins destruction of the field, crossing the 2.9 mile course in 16:19, well over a minute ahead of the second place finisher. Collins ran through the mud of Franklin Park in 18:30 in 2009, and with the obvious improvement he is showing, looks like a threat to qualify for the All State meet on November 20 in Gardner. All he has to do is begin November the way he's begun October, and he'll be fine.

Michael Baccarri (Hingham)- It's unusual for a 5th place finish to catch my eye, but when it's against the #16 team in the nation and you have a runner as strong as Mike McConville in front of you, you must be doing something right. Baccari was on fire against Pembroke, hanging onto McConville for dear life en route to a 17:12 time on Pembroke's treacherous 2.97 mile course. The 19-40 score doesn't really tell the story, as Hingham looks to give Whitman-Hanson the fight of their lives when the two meet next week. The 1-2 punch, along with John Logan (17:26), makes the Harbormen a true contender for a Keenan Division title.

Hingham Girls (Hingham)- Coach Livvy Kates called it a big day, and it was. With an impressive 27-28 win over an upstart Pembroke team that had just lost on a tiebreaker to Whitman-Hanson, the Harborwomen maintained a tie for the Patriot League lead (7-0) with W-H's Panther squad. Pembroke's 2.95 miles course runs a lot like a 5K, and Hingham looks like they could be a tough out in November. Julie McConville took the win (19:57), but the pack of Alyssa Lumbert (20:28), Sammy Pinkham (20:29), Gabby Nigro (20:39), Kelly Bandera (20:47), freshman Maggie MacFarland (20:57), and Maryclare Demenna (20:59) did what a coach dreams of- keeping the 1-7 spread within a minute.

Sarah Perfetuo (Norwell)- Dominating a conference isn't an easy thing for a team to do, but Norwell's girls have managed to do just that in the South Shore League. How they do it is by continuing to add newcomers like Perfetuo, who led the team to a 23-33 victory over East Bridgewater, one of their top challengers for a league title. Her time of 18:55 on Norwell's home course comes on the heels of a nice 22:21 run for 5K at Bay States over the weekend. Norwell continues to improve and be noticed by the smaller divisions.

Jen Asci (Rockland)- At least one Bulldog athlete doesn't miss the Patriot League. Asci has yet to lose a race in the South Shore League, flying through Abington's 5K Ames-Nowell course in 21:22. Rockland is 3-1 in the league after dispatching Abington 21-34, and Asci has been a huge part of her team's success to this point. Not having to butt heads with larger schools and powerhouses like Hingham, Pembroke, and Whitman-Hanson has been just what the doctor ordered for Rockland.

MEET TO WATCH (WEEK 7)

Brown Northeast HS Championship Meet (Saturday, October 16- Goddard Park, Warwick, RI)- A year ago, Pembroke entered the prestigious Brown Championship Race, electing out of the DI small schools race and a chance to run the big dogs. What it led to was a victory, a Northeast Regional ranking, and the momentum to carry them to a DII All State title. This year, they're back to defend their title, with a bulls-eye on their back. Weymouth's girls will run a full squad for the first time in an invite, hoping to take a top 3 place in the girls Championship Race. Led by Steve Sollowin, a top 10 placer in the race a year ago, Weymouth's boys will do the same, and show DI East that they are a force to be reckoned with.

Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings

(Week 5)

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

Even though gameweek five didn't produce too many games due to the weather, the teams that did manage to sneak in a full 80 minutes here and there certainly made the most of it. Even though the number one teams on both the boys' and girls' side remain unchanged, the same cannot be said for the rest of the top six on either side. Three new teams enter the rankings, including a pair making their 2010 Inside the 6 debut. The four bubble teams continue to shift around, and the two new teams in the top six burst through that bubble this week. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Oct. 10.

BOYS

1. Hingham – The Harbormen remained perfect on the season with one win this week, a 2-1 victory over Pembroke. The Hingham boys come into this week with a 6-0-3 record, needing results in only two more games to get into the postseason..

2. Weymouth – For the second straight week, the leaders of the Bay State Carey Division hold down the number two spot. The Wildcats played once last week and drew 0-0 with Framingham.

3. Norwell – The Clippers clinched a tournament berth with Friday's 0-0 tie against last week's No. 3 Hanover. One day prior, the 8-0-2 Clippers kept a lock on first place in the South Shore League with a 1-0 win over East Bridgewater.

4. Duxbury – A team that few considered to be a threat this season has started proving the naysayers wrong. The Green Dragons made it five wins in a row with three straight victories last week, one each over Quincy, Middleboro, and Whitman-Hanson, to improve to 6-2-2.

5. Cohasset – The Skippers have bounced in and out of the top six a couple times this fall, and with a 4-0 win over a much-improved Carver squad coupled with the performances (good and bad) of the top six and bubble teams, the boys find themselves back in.

6. Hanover – Taking the biggest dive, the Indians played two straight to end the week. They had several chances to knock off unbeaten Norwell Friday afternoon, only to come away with a scoreless draw.

On the bubble: Silver Lake, Marshfield, Braintree, and Scituate

Week four rankings: 1. Hingham, 2. Weymouth, 3. Hanover 4. Norwell, 5. Duxbury, 6. Marshfield

GIRLS

1. Marshfield – For the first time in a game this season, the Lady Rams didn't produce two points and were held scoreless. But even a 0-0 tie against Notre Dame Academy of Hingham didn't budge the Marshfield girls from the top spot.

2. Duxbury – After starting the season as the No. 1 team before slipping two spots, the Lady Dragons find themselves climbing back up. Idling at No. 3 for four weeks, Duxbury won four games (Quincy, Middleboro, Bourne, Scituate) in five days this week to improve to 9-2 and qualify for the postseason.

3. Plymouth South – The Lady Panthers got stuck in a rut. After losing their first game of the season Thursday, Sept. 30, they got shut out by Plymouth North four days later. This team is still a force both in and out of the Atlantic Coast League.

4. Weymouth – How does a team lose and still climb one spot in the rankings? Consider this: last week's No. 4 Norwell, suffered its first league loss in nearly two years, and Weymouth's 5-0 loss last week came to the No. 1 team in the state - Whitman-Hanson.

5. Plymouth North – One of two new entries Inside the 6, the Lady Eagles handed both Plymouth South and Bridgewater-Raynham defeats last week and did not yield a goal in either match. This extended North's unbeaten streak to five games.

6. Silver Lake – This week also marks the debut of the Lady Lakers. After a slow start, Silver Lake quickly turned it on. A 2-0 win over last week's No. 6 Hanover pushed the Lake's record to 5-2-1 and gave the team its third win in a row.

On the bubble: Pembroke, Norwell, Hanover, and Rockland

Week four rankings: 1. Marshfield, 2. Plymouth South, 3. Duxbury, 4. Norwell, 5. Weymouth, 6. Hanover

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@cnc.com.

Cohasset coach Jim Willis has his squad back in the Top 6 this week.

FROM THE OTHER SIDE

Another Battle of Unbeatens on tap

By Jason Kenney
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

It could've been a trap game, but the Rockland High School varsity showed up ready to play hard nose football.

While the second half of the season will determine Rockland's future, the Bulldogs had to get past Hull first.

The Pirates won't compete for a division title this season, but they have enough talent to shake up the league standings.

Unfortunately for Hull, Rockland is a very disciplined and they refused to look ahead.

Their ability to focus on the task at hand resulted in an impressive 26-0 win.

"It was one of those games where we made a few mistakes," Rockland head coach Ken Owen said. "I looked at the film and we played pretty good except for a few turnover and penalties."

Despite a few mental mistakes, Rockland found itself in complete control of this game.

With their league-leading defense, which is only allowing 8.6 points per game, the Bulldogs completely stifled Hull's offense.

With their defense firing on all cylinders, Rockland's backfield was given time to show off.

Lead by senior running back Tim Fitzgerald, Rockland completely dominated on the ground.

Fitzgerald put Rockland on the board in the second quarter with a 20-yard touchdown run.

Later in the second quarter, the Bulldogs continued to show off their backfield depth.

Senior running back Jason Hall scored his fourth touchdown of the season when he caught a 40-yard touchdown from Ricky Witt.

After a failed two-point conversion, the Bulldogs took a 12-0 lead into halftime.

Ricky Witt's touchdown highlighted a very solid night for the junior.

Starting quarterback DJ Austin missed the game with an injury, but Witt did a great job filling in.

He finished with five completions and 94 passing yards.

"Ricky Witt did a great job filling in for DJ," Owen said. "We're expecting DJ back next week, but Ricky threw the ball nicely."

Rockland pulled away in the third quarter, which was highlighted by another big game from Tim Fitzgerald. Fitzgerald scored a pair of touchdowns from five and 54 yards out.

Fitzgerald finished the night with 119 rushing yards and three touchdowns.

He now has nine touchdowns this season, which is second in the South Shore League.

"Tim had his usual game," Owen said. "He scored on a 54-yard run with some very good downfield blocking."

As usual Rockland's offensive line played great.

Their ability to grind out games in the trenches has allowed Rockland's backfield to run free.

A big game from junior Drew Robinson was a key reason for Rockland's dominance up front.

On the defensive side of the ball, senior linebackers Shay Morton and David Roy anchored another dominant performance from this defense.

Their upcoming game will be huge for the Bulldogs.

Rockland will travel to Cohasset to challenge the undefeated Skippers.

The Skippers have the highest scoring offense in the South Shore League and they will likely provide the toughest challenge for Rockland's defense.

Both squads sit a 5-0 and this could be an elimination game for both squads.

"They have an excellent quarterback who can throw and run," Owen said. "It's one of those weeks where we have to rise to the occasion and not make mistakes. It's one of the few times where we have to play better than we are."

Cohasset quarterback Jeff Cavanaro leads the South Shore League with eight touchdown passes.

Getting pressure on Cavanaro will be a top priority for Rockland.

It could be the difference between becoming a champion or an also ran.

run with 2:55 left in the first quarter.

On the drive, the Skippers took advantage of a 43-yard punt return by Kyle Livingstone, who was also a force on defense.

"Kyle is only a junior," Afanasiw said. "But he's a fierce competitor. I'll put him up against anybody."

With 6:52 left in the half, Cohasset's Jamie Faber made a touchdown saving tackle on East Bridgewater quarterback Tim O'Brien, who only had one man to beat to go all the way for a long touchdown.

Casey DeAndrade ran the next play for a big gain, but the Skippers held and stopped the Vikings short on a fourth-and-two at the Cohasset 17 to take the ball back.

Three plays later, Cavanaro hit a diving Robert Jones for a 20-yard pickup and a first down at the 47. Jones and Cavanaro hooked up again on fourth-and-three for a first down.

Flibotte ran the next play to the 15 for another first down with 1:37 left in the half.

Cohasset couldn't capitalize though as DeAndrade picked off a Cavanaro pass on a fourth down play with 27 seconds left.

The Skippers took an 8-0 lead into the half.

The Skippers came out strong defensively in the second half, with Eric Wasel and Kyrel Jaundoo coming up with a big sack on a third-and-short to force a punt.

Not long after, Cavanaro struck again with a 39-yard keeper to bring the ball to the Viking nine and Kissick made it count with a nine-yard touchdown for a 16-0 lead after kicker Jamie Faber tossed a perfect pass to Robbie Mahoney off a fake extra point kick with 4:42 left in the third quarter.

Kissick struck again with 2:50 left in the quarter with an interception and 29-yard return that gave the Skippers a first-and-goal at the five after an East Bridgewater personal foul.

Thomas Flibotte converted on the next play with a five-yard touchdown. Kissick made it 24-0 with a run for the two-point conversion.

With 2:34 left in the game, Jaundoo had a highlight reel play, running down Jared Contre from behind, saving another touchdown after Contre had picked up 42 yards on a screen and looked like he was free for the score.

Two plays later the Vikings were sent back to the 48 after a bad snap, setting up a fourth-and-forever. That play set up an interception by Livingstone that sealed the shutout.

Before the game, Afanasiw has talked about how last year's playoff game against Holliston figured in the game-planning.

"They played a similar style of spread offense with some excellent athletes," he said. "Playing a quality team like Holliston last year, we knew how to attack their offense."

Cohasset improved to 5-0 with the win and handed East Bridgewater it's first loss.

The Skippers will face another unbeaten team on Friday night when they host Rockland.

The Bulldogs are new to the South Shore League this season, moving over from the Patriot League Fisher Division, which they won last year.

Afanasiw jokingly suggested a new venue might work for his team.

"I want to go into a different league," he said when the upcoming schedule was mentioned. "You don't get a week off in ours. It's good, but taxing emotionally and physically. This is a challenging league."

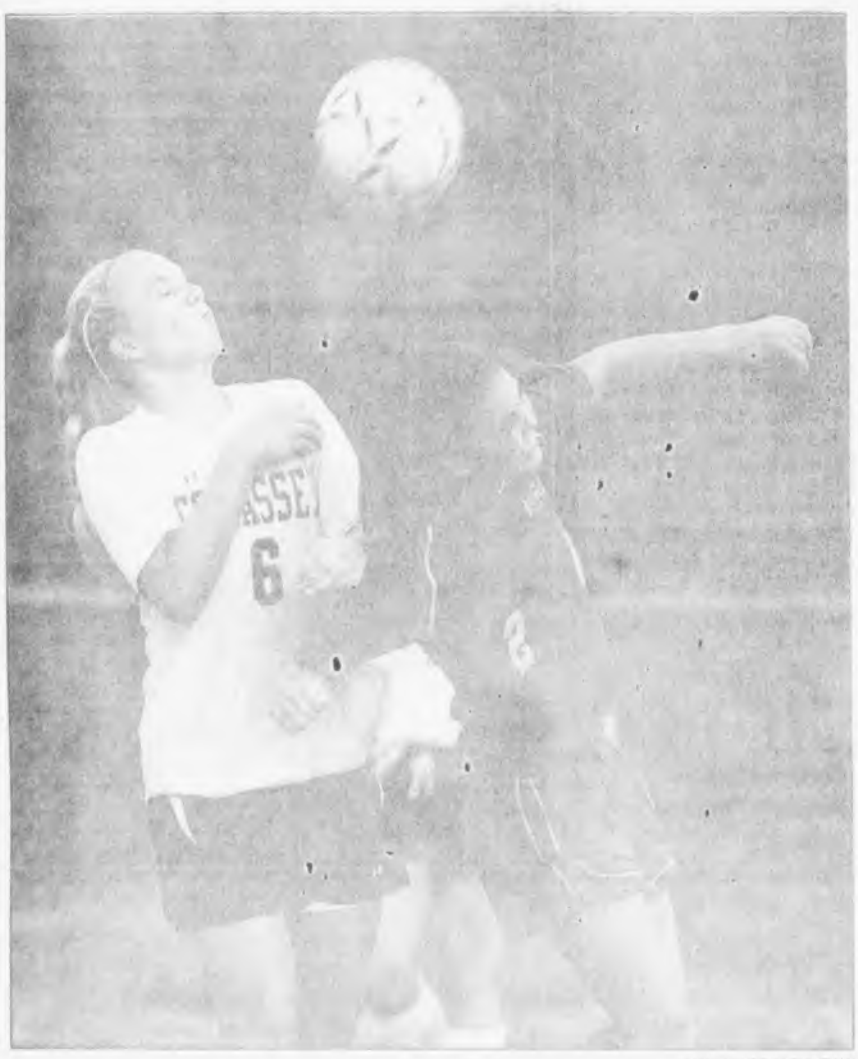
Rachel Fredey and Carli Haggerty. Seniors include Caroline Fein, Amy Costa and Olivia Yerardi. Cohasset's junior class includes Anna Serafikas, Julia Canney, Katie Brennan, Erika Botts, Nicole Hajjar, Michaela Brophy and Hannah Rawson. Skipper sophomores are Kate Sooklassian, Caitlin Mavilia, Melinda Dignam, Kristin Alexander, Charlotte Barzsewki and one freshman Micaela Durkin.

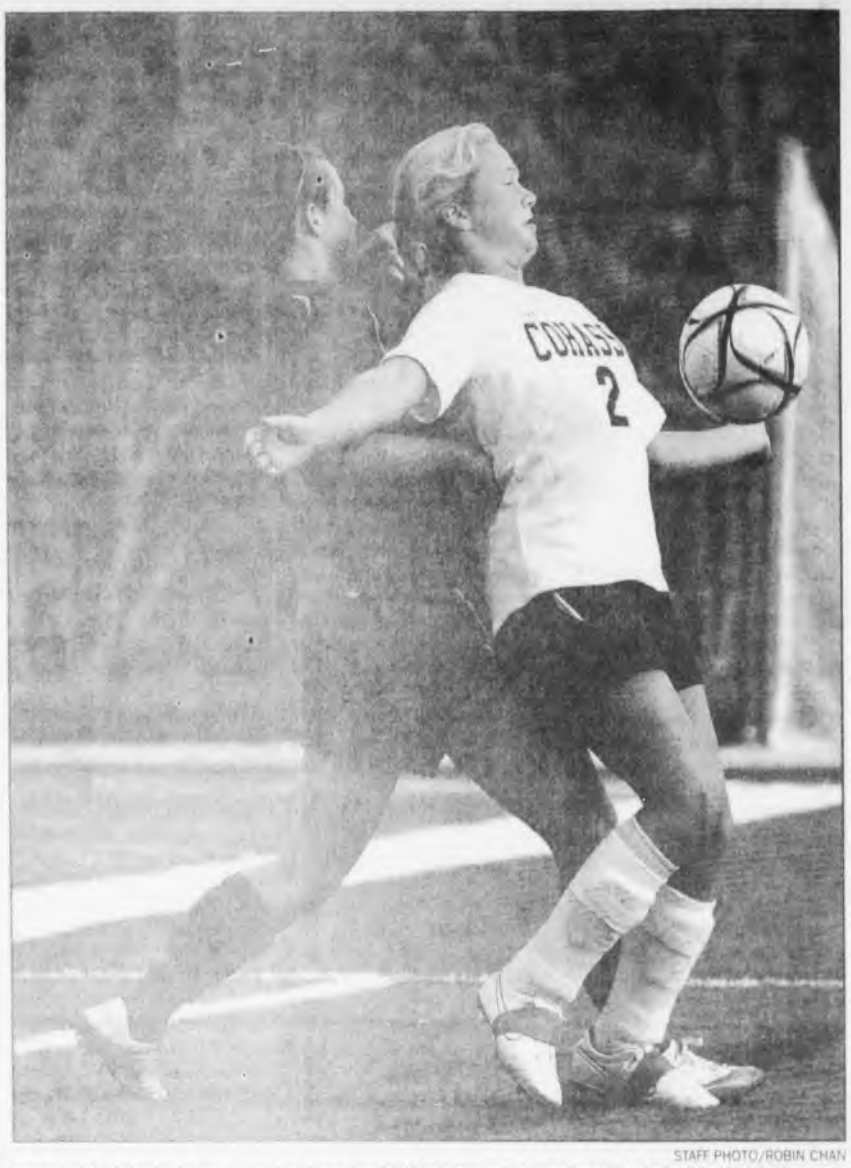
Beal is proud of her young team.

"We have a very talented team that trains hard and plays hard," she said. "In the past few weeks we have really proven to ourselves that we came to play and we came to have fun and that attitude is beginning to spill over onto the field. We are playing as a team and relying on one another. Understanding that we are a fairly young team and we have some work to do is where we are at. We will continue to plug away and make gains everyday. This group is hard working and dedicated so as the next few weeks pass you can bet that the improvements on the field will be very exciting."



On the boys side, Cohasset beat Harwich on Wednesday night to improve to 7-2-1.

Nick Brown scored both goals for the Skippers.



Cohasset needs just three points in their last eight games to qualify for the MIAA Tournament.

They played Hull on Thursday night and have a big rematch with East Bridgewater on Monday.

Cohasset beat East Bridgewater 1-0 earlier this season.

the big picture. It's small things that are going to make us get better and better and better. I think with a little more confidence in some of these areas, I think we'll start to see some successes."

The Lady Skippers lost 4-1 Tuesday to Norwell, which in any other case would be considered a blowout. But rewind the clock to Sept. 14. Cohasset's second game of the season. The girls played Norwell, and they lost 7-1. The strides they made in the past four weeks speaks volumes to the team's will to win. And following the loss to Norwell, Cohasset still had a mountain to climb, needing 11 points in seven games to reach the postseason, but it's not something that's out of reach if the team keeps focusing on the basics.

Cohasset showed that it can make plays, maintain possession, and create opportunities, all of which were evident in the game against Norwell. Seemingly transitioning from a 4-4-2 formation to a 4-3-3 attacking mode, the Cohasset girls started putting pressure on Norwell's back line. Even though they were trailing, 4-0, with less than 10 minutes to go in the game, the Lady Skippers kept moving forward.

Runs down the left flank were only stalled by one of the top central defenders in the South Shore League, Norwell's Molly Lodigiani. Only the little things hurt Cohasset – set pieces that went out of bounds and corner kicks that were easily cleared by Norwell – eventually took its toll. But, just like Beal said, focusing on the basics and gaining confidence will lead to success.

Some of our most important work is done with a measuring tape.
We custom build every window, so while in your home, we meticulously measure to ensure your new windows will have the tightest fit. Why is that so critical? Our PerfectMeasure Method™ requires us to invest more training and time but ensures an exact fit for your home's maximum energy-efficiency.

Our installation crews aren't infuriating; they're impressive.
A lot of people haven't had the best home improvement experiences, but our Certified Installers are respectful of both your time and your home. Each member of our installation teams averages 10+ years of window installation experience and finish their jobs either on time—or ahead of schedule—96.2% of the time.

Our Fibrex® material is twice as rigid and stable as vinyl.
Fibrex material combines wood fibers with a thermoplastic polymer and will never chip, rot, corrode, peel† or give you headaches. When fog forms between your window panes, that's a definite sign of energy loss. Fibrex is so strong, it prevents glass movement that can lead to fogging. It's how you boost your home's energy efficiency for years—long after other windows can fail.

Head of the Weir takes place Oct. 23

The Hull Lifesaving Museum will host its annual celebration of open-water rowing and the glory of the Weir River Estuary and Boston Harbor in autumn, the Head of the Weir River Race, on Oct. 23.

Up to 45 boats jockey for position as they race out the narrow estuary and into the open water, from West Corner (on the Hingham/ Hull/ Cohasset line), past Bumpkin Island, across Hull Bay, to the museum's Windmill Point Boathouse at Hull Gut. A highly contested 5-1/2 miler, the Weir draws coxed youth and adult rowers in gigs, single and double scullers, currachs, and ocean shells, as well as experienced kayakers. In the "head of the river" format, boats leave the starting line at one-minute intervals, and times are collated at the finish to determine the race winners. The Weir is an exceptionally exciting race and a great spectator event, featuring over 150 of the region's finest rowers from all over New England and New York. Best spectator views are from the bridge on George Washington Boulevard (5-15 minutes after the start), at the tip of Hull's Sunset Point, or at the Windmill Point Boathouse finish line. Spectators should show care crossing the road on George Washington Boulevard, watching for fast moving traffic.

Registration, required for all participants, will be 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the race starting line behind the Hull Public Works building at the Hull Town Line on Route 228. Cost is $20 per person. The coxswains' meeting is at 11:45 a.m., and race start at 12:30 p.m. All coxed boats must contact the race organizers before the day of the race. There is no parking available at the race starting line; the put-in for trailered boats is at Nantasket Pier, one mile from the starting line, where car and trailer parking is available.

For more information or questions about participating, call Ed McCabe, the Hull Lifesaving Museum's Maritime Program Director or Lory Newmyer, Executive Director, at the museum 781-925-5433 or check out the museum's website: www.hulllifesavingmuseum.org

He is Regal, loves people, but does not get along with other cats, dogs, and we'd prefer him not to go to a home with small children. He's quite friendly with teens and adult humans and tends to follow you around like a puppy. He's a very special cat that needs a special home. Please come meet him and see if you'd like to share your home with him.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
OCT. 25, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be growing impatient with a situation that seems to resist efforts to resolve it. But staying with it raises the odds that you'll find a way to a successful resolution.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Travel and kinship are strong in the Bovine's aspect this week. This would be a good time to combine the two and take a trip to see family members for a pre-holiday get-together.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A colleague could make a request you're not comfortable with. If so, say so. Better to disappoint someone by sticking with your principles than disappoint yourself if you don't.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The Moon Child's ability to adapt to life's ebbs and flows helps you deal with the changes that you might confront at work or at home, or both. Things settle down by the week's end.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's a good week for Leos and Leonas to get some long-outstanding business matters resolved. Then go ahead and plan a fun-filled family getaway weekend with the mate and the cubs.

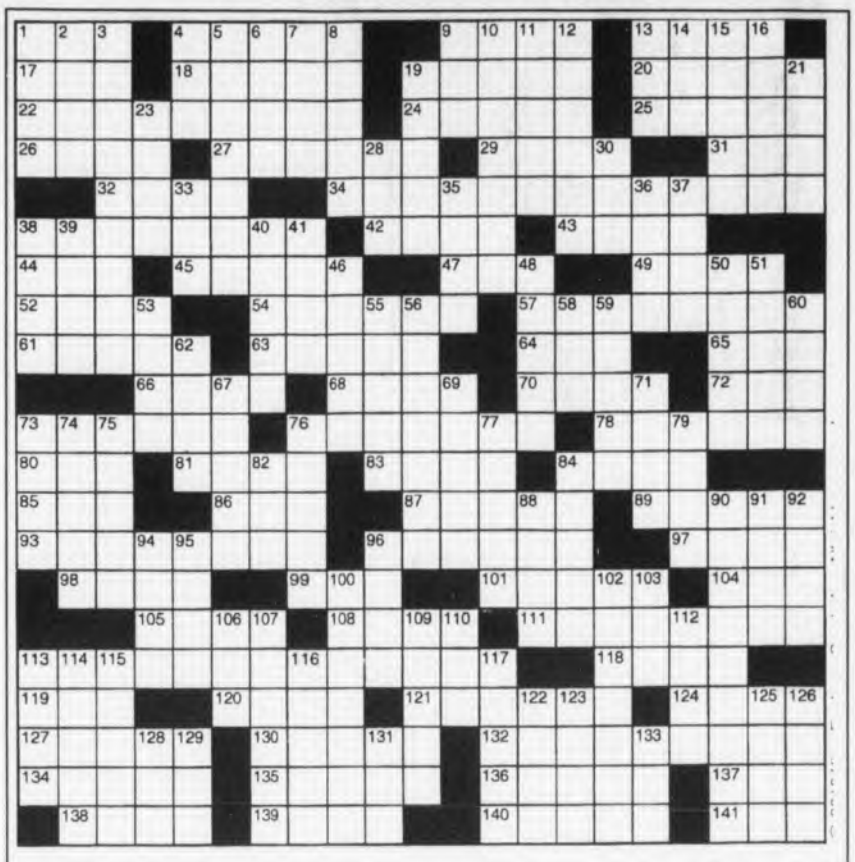
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A possible workplace change seems promising. If you decide to look into it, try not to form an opinion on just a small part of the picture: Wait for the full image to develop.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A newcomer helps keep things moving. There might be some bumpy moments along the way, but at least you're heading in the right direction. You win praise for your choices.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You could be pleasantly surprised by how a decision about one thing opens up an unexpected new option. Also, assistance on a project could come from a surprising source.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) With more information to work with, you might now be able to start the process that could lead to a major change. Reserve the weekend for family and friends.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This could be a good time to begin gathering information that will help you turn that long-held idea into something substantive. A personal matter might need extra attention.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) That new challenge might carry some surprises. But you should be able to handle them using what you already know. That new supporter should be there to lend assistance.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Someone might be trying to disguise his or her true motives. But the perceptive and perspicacious Pisces should have little or no problem finding the truth in all that foggy rhetoric.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Cappella Clausura is an ensemble of soloists and period instruments whose goal is to research and bring to light works written by women from the 18th century to the present day.

Cappella Clausura to present 'A Chantar!' at First Parish

Cappella Clausura, a professional early music ensemble specializing in Baroque works composed by women, will perform at First Parish Cohasset, on the green at North Main Street, at 4 p.m., on Sunday, Oct. 17. Admission is $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

This program will feature songs of love by medieval women trouvères and trobairitz, juxtaposed against recently transcribed Byzantine chant by 9th century Greek nun Kassia. In addition to Cappella Clausura's singers, this program will also feature lute, harp, recorder, vielle and percussion.

When people think of troubadours, they picture lute-playing men; not women. In fact, courtly society in the era of the Crusades encouraged musical as well as literate learning for all young people, including girls.

Female singer/poets, called trouvères in the north and trobairitz in the south, lived in the same courts, and wrote poetry and sang for the residents, as is witnessed by the few existing bits of music and poetry that can be attributed to them. Most notable among these female trouvères was the Comtessa de Dia. Her single surviving piece of music, "A Chantar," is preserved in the Manuscrit du Roi.

The distinguishing characteristic of the poetry that women wrote is its uniquely female perspective on life in the early first millennium. As this poetry will make clear, these women were angry, frustrated, hurt, in despair, feeling imprisoned, physically abused, or on the lighter side musing on life's beauty, wonder and love. Come enjoy this secret look into the life of female trouvères and trobairitz in France.

Cappella Clausura is an ensemble of soloists and period instruments whose goal is to research and bring to light works written by women from the 8th century to the present day. The intention is to dispel the false notion that there are not now nor have there ever been gifted women composers. While they perform music by all women composers, and champion living composers, they concentrate on repertoire by women in the cloister – clausura – during the Italian Baroque period. During this time, women were allowed to express themselves spiritually and artistically, and to publish their own music. History has been blind and deaf to these works; Cappella Clausura brings vision and voice to them. More information about Cappella Clausura can be found at ww.clausura.org.

For more information about the concert, call Allegra Martin at 617-872-0461. For more information about the ensemble, their scholarship and history, call LeClair at 857-919-4218.

Talk on Christian Meditation Practices

From the beginnings of Christianity, men and women have experimented to find appropriate ways to develop their spiritual lives. Various forms of meditation and worship practices have emerged to nurture spirituality and achieve a closer relationship with God.

Professor Mark Burrows of Andover Newton Theological School will deliver a message on Christian spiritual practices through the years titled "Meditating Our Way to Life" at the 10:30 a.m. worship service, on Sunday, Oct. 17, at New North Church, 1 Lincoln St., Hingham. A potluck brunch will take place immediately following the service. VOF to present 'An Introduction to Centering Prayer'

Scituate Affiliate of Voice of the Faithful will host a talk titled "An Introduction to Centering Prayer" by Father Bill Sheehan, OMI, at 7 p.m., on Thursday, Oct. 21, at St. Mary's Parish Hall in Scituate.

Centering Prayer is a method of silent prayer that is both a relationship with God and a discipline to foster that relationship. Father Sheehan will explain this method of prayer and discuss its Christian roots. In addition, there will be an opportunity to experience Centering Prayer and share thoughts about the experience with others.

Centering Prayer is a method of silent prayer that is both a relationship with God and a discipline to foster that relationship.

Since 1983, Father Sheehan has been involved in Contemplative Outreach, an organization founded by Father Thomas Keating, OCSO. Contemplative Outreach was formed to renew the Christian contemplative heritage through sharing the method of Centering Prayer to all who wish to learn. The organization consists of a spiritual network of individuals and small faith communities committed to living the contemplative dimension of the Gospel. For almost three decades, Father Sheehan has been leading Centering Prayer workshops and retreats throughout the country. GEEK TRAGEDY

Film Review
AL ALEXANDER

The Social Network (A)

In "The Social Network," Jesse Eisenberg captures the complexity of Facebook's hero/villain Mark Zuckerberg. He's pictured with Joseph Mazzello.

The Oscar race began (and may have ended) on Friday with the release of "The Social Network," the stirring, utterly engrossing tale about the ingenuity, ambition and the ultimate betrayal that went into the founding of Facebook.

It's an instant classic, a textbook example of movie making in which all facets of the medium — writing, directing, acting and cinematography — coalesce into something close to perfection. But it all begins with what's sure to be Aaron Sorkin's Oscar-winning script, full of scintillating dialogue and enough intrigue for a dozen courtroom dramas.

And at its core, that's exactly what the "The Social Network" is, an old Perry Mason whodunit in which civility and morality are put on trial and the viewer serves as the judge and jury. Sorkin doesn't make it easy, either. He layers on the complexities in presenting three sides of a court battle over ownership of an amorphous product.

Does it belong to the person who invented it, financed it, or thought of it? Sorkin makes such a compelling argument for all three that your loyalties switch about as often as Facebook racks up new customers. Then Sorkin goes even further, delving into the darker ramifications of this evolving phenomenon.

Sure, Facebook is great for making friends and reconnecting with old ones. But the movie subtly asks you to ponder if the benefits are really worth the loss of privacy, the lessening of face-to-face communications, and what amounts to an open invitation to an endless array of cyber-stalkers.

And that's just the beginning of a tale that also incorporates issues of class, privilege and basic humanity. You almost need to see it twice just to absorb all its nuances.

What drives it, though, is a remarkable performance by Jesse Eisenberg as Mark Zuckerberg, the socially inept Harvard sophomore with the 10-cent smile and soon-to-be billion-dollar bank account. It's an extraordinarily tricky piece of acting because Eisenberg not only must portray Mark's genius, but also find a way to get you to empathize with a character whose bitterness is trumped only by his narcissism. It's truly a love-hate relationship shared by more than a few people he steps on while becoming the biggest cyber-entrepreneur since Bill Gates.

Like Gates, Zuckerberg is a quintessential nerd. He's quiet, shy and ruthless. He's also quite dangerous and more than a little bit cunning, as evidenced in a tone-setting opening scene in which he practically goads his date, a lower pedigree coed from B.U., into dissing him just so he can play the martyr.

It's a classic case of self pity that Mark drunkenly carries with him back to his dorm room, and, in a matter of a few short hours, turns into the seeds of Facebook. He calls it Facemash, an obstreperous and highly sexist endeavor in which he and his two roommates hack into the Harvard database, extract the photos of every coed on campus, then send the pics out over the Net, two at a time, for users to vote on who is the hottest.

In just that one pulsating scene, director David Fincher ("Zodiac") tells you everything that's admirable and deplorable about Zuckerberg. But he also captures the thrill of an idea that will literally change the world. It's even more exhilarating watching his notion continue to sprout until it grows unwieldy, as the product becomes more valuable than the close friendships that nurtured it.

Before you know it, the story moves from makeshift boardroom to a courtroom. Like he did on "The West Wing," Sorkin puts you right in the middle, as moral arguments unfurl during a deposition hearing in which Mark is forced to face his accusers. Among the gathered litigants: his college roommate, Eduardo Saverin (Andrew Garfield), who put up the $19,000 to seed Mark's idea; and the Winklevoss twins, Cameron and Tyler (Armie Hammer and Josh Pence), the muscular Harvard crew team that devised the plan for a campus-wide, online social network.

Cleverly, Sorkin and Fincher use the deposition as a platform to launch a series of chronological flashbacks covering Facebook's first, highly tumultuous year, which began in the fall of 2003 and ended in the arrest of Zuckerberg's closest advisor, Sean Parker, the Napster co-founder (played flawlessly by an Oscar-worthy Justin Timberlake) who helped take Facebook from a campus-only website to an international sensation.

That's when "The Social Network" gradually evolves from a euphoric high to a Shakespearean tragedy. For two stimulating hours by a story that never talks down to its audience or goes over its head. It's riveting.

Rated PG-13. "The Social Network" contains sexual content, drug and alcohol use and language.

Theater review

'Spirit' needs lifting

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Matt Murphy, Karen Wadland and Nancy Finn perform in Noel Cowards "Blithe Spirit" at the Company Theatre through Oct. 24.

It might seem that you can't go wrong with "Blithe Spirit" – especially given how often it is produced. Providence's Trinity Repertory Company staged a blissfully well-done production of the Noel Coward favorite just a few seasons back. Just last spring, however, Lyric Stage Company of Boston presented a disappointing "Blithe Spirit" reminiscent of the starry 2009 Broadway revival, with Rupert Everett and Christine Ebersole, which not even Angela Lansbury could save from mediocrity.

A similar fate seems to be befalling director Steve Dooner's current Company Theatre production, with its own South Shore constellation of proven favorites including Matthew Murphy, Jennifer Duval White and Juliana Dennis – a memorable Mrs. Meers in Company's 2008 staging of "Thoroughly Modern Millie." Dooner has eliminated the second intermission, and Zoe Bradford has designed a richly detailed, perfect-for-the-piece set, but the production still plods along preventing this take on the Coward classic from ever taking off.

Playwright Coward had huge success with his 1941 "Blithe Spirit," which tells of what happens when novelist Charles Condomine, living with his second wife, Ruth, invites a local medium, Madame Arcati, to his house as part of his research on the spirit world for an upcoming book. He gets more than he bargained for, however, when Arcati conjures up the ghost of his first wife, Elvira. Soon, Charles is caught between one live wife and one dead wife — each jealous of the other. Complicating matters, Charles is the only one who can see and hear Elvira.

As the crisply pressed Charles whose veneer is rumpled by the return of wife number one, Murphy has some funny moments. Duval White fares less well as an Elvira that never quite seems ethereal. Costume designer Jennifer Spagone further undermines the actress by putting her in a peignoir that is stiff and static when it should flow. Nancy Finn does fine work as Ruth, the outraged current wife trying to hold her place against an astral invasion. Finn also does a terrific British accent – capturing not just the appropriate sound, but also all the right rhythms.

As Madame Arcati – played on Broadway by Mildred Natwick, Geraldine Page and Lansbury, and at Trinity by the sublime Barbara Meek – Karen Wadland is a less dotty, more determined medium than most. Her other-worldly dancing does, however, provide this production with some much-needed levity. Dennis and Jeffrey Phillips don't have much to do as Dr. and Mrs. Bradman and make little impact on the proceedings. The same is also true of Jessy Rowe whose high-strung housemaid Edith should be a scene stealer.

"Blithe Spirit" will be presented by the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, through Oct. 24. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787 or go online at companytheatre.com

Interim town manager chosen

Stephen Lombard to start Nov. 1

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Town of Cohasset will not be without leadership when Town Manager Bill Griffin bids adieu next week.

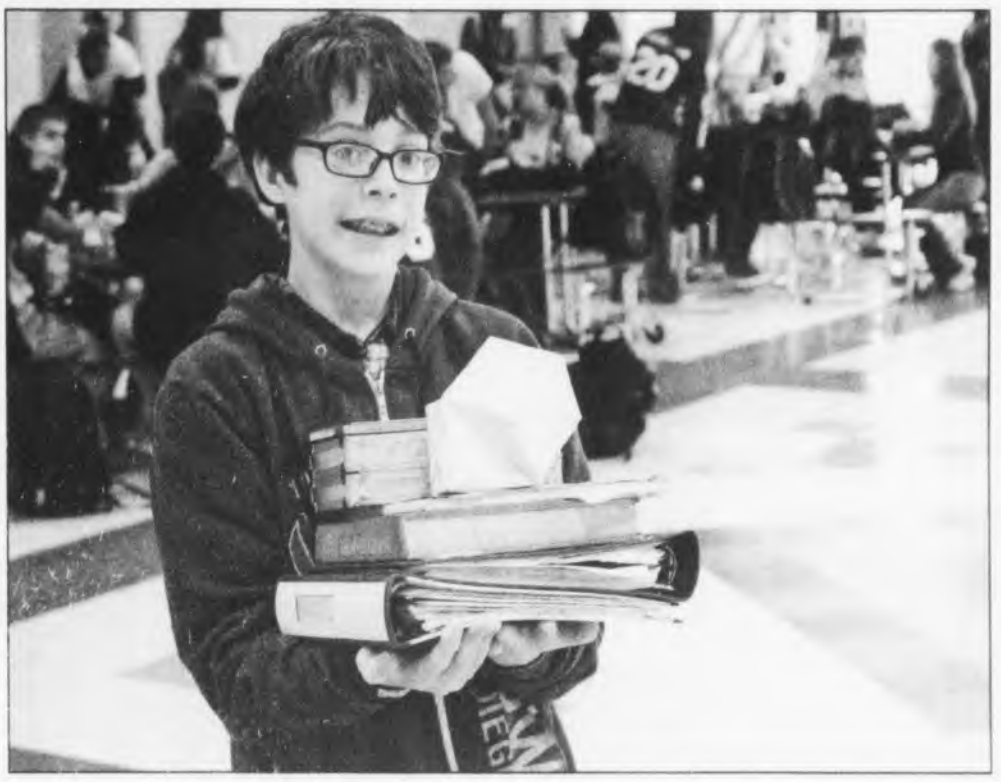
The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously to hire Stephen Lombard of Mattapoisett to the position of interim town manager.

Lombard will likely start on Nov. 1 and serve the town for about six months, or until the new town manager can begin.

Two other candidates interviewed for the position, Jeff Ritter of Medway and Richard Robinson of Hartford, Conn.

Lombard will bring to Cohasset 32 years of experience in municipal administration and eight years of experience leading towns for the short-term in an interim capacity.

He has served as interim town manager in several towns both big and small: Middleborough, Harwich, Hopedale, Swansea and Norton. In addition to serving as interim town managers Lombard has served on his hometown of Mattapoisett's Board of Selectmen for the last six years.



He retired in 2002 after serving the Town of Dennis as town administrator for 10 years.

The combination of budget know-how and consensus building leadership approach appealed to the Board of Selectmen.

In previous meetings, the Board of Awash in water tank talk

Bear Hill forum draws a crowd

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

At the end of the Water Commission's three-hour forum on the Bear Hill water tank access issues just about one thing was clear: there are more questions that need to be asked.

About 30 residents came out to the Tuesday night forum and it seemed each one of them was armed with questions and concerns for the Water Commission.

The purpose of the forum was to give residents a chance to air their concerns associated with a proposed access driveway off Reservoir Road. The Water Commission is interested in establishing an access driveway at Reservoir Road in part to accommodate the construction of cell antennas on the water tank. The construction vehicles may not be able to negotiate the current access road over private property on Pleasant Street, which was moved and reduced in size from 30 feet to 12 feet earlier this year.

The proposed Reservoir Road access has the surrounding neighborhood frustrated, and some angry, for reasons related to safety and process. While the moved access point would impact the immediate neighborhood it also has bearing on the whole town. The new cell antennas could bring revenue to the town (up to $40,000 per year) as well as better cell phone reception coverage.

The issues surrounding the Bear Hill water tank are plenty and have a several-year history.

From the outset of the meeting, and at various times throughout, Water

'Balloon' provides a lift

Hingham artist helps kids cope with cancer

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

A child's world changes when a family member has cancer. A new South Shore Hospital Friends of Hope Program is designed to help children in this situation express — through art — feelings that might be difficult to put into words.

"Helping Children Cope with a Loved One's Cancer" is geared toward children ages 4 to 10 and their parents. It was created by this volunteer coalition, which supports those whose lives have been touched by any cancer, including breast cancer.

The program is based on renowned Hingham author-illustrator Joan Drescher's popular children's book, "The Moon Balloon: A Journey of Hope and Discovery for Children and Families."

The program helps children gain a sense of comfort during stressful times when adults are struggling with their own feelings and worries and may not recognize cancer's impact on their young lives. It is free of charge.

"Children may not be able to define cancer, but they know that when a family member has cancer, their lives and world change," said Hingham resident Julie Kembel, a Friends of South Shore Hospital board member with a focus on the Friends of Hope program. Drescher calls her book a balloon ride of the mind that has made "a huge difference in children's lives."

THE GREAT HALLOWEEN CANDY BUY BACK!
Money for You - Candy for the Troops!
One area dentist is redefining the phrase "put your money where your mouth is." This Halloween, trick-or-treaters can bring their excess candy to Abington Family Dental Care in Abington and receive $1 per pound ($10 maximum). Dr. Mike Thomas is leading this anti-decay movement by giving away dollars and toothbrushes in exchange for cavity-provoking candy.
"Ditch the candy, that's what we're saying. Visiting your dentist twice a year and brushing and flossing daily are great preventative measures, but doing away with excess sweets altogether would really give your teeth a healthy boost," says Dr. Mike Thomas from Abington Family Dental Care. "Kids can still have all of the fun of trick-or-treating, and now their piggy banks will benefit as well."
HOW TO PARTICIPATE:
Candy will be collected at Abington Family Dental Care at 469 Washington St. in Abington, Saturday, November 6, 2010, from 11:00 am to 2:00 pm. The candy must be unopened. Please no bites. It will then be shipped to our troops overseas.
Dr. Mike Thomas is one of three dentists at Abington Family Dental Care in Abington, which emphasizes general family dental care as well as cosmetic procedures. Dr. Thomas and staff are available to provide more information at 781-878-2190, or visit Abington Family Dental Care on-line at www.abingtonfamilydental.com.

Plaza project gets green light

Planning Board approves 30,000 square foot retail space

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset could one day soon have a new retail building nestled between the two already existing building in Cohasset Plaza.

The future 30,000-square-foot building could bring as many as three new tenants to Cohasset's commercial corridor.

Earlier this month, the Planning Board approved the site plan for the project with conditions. Town Counsel is currently drafting the formal decision; the board has 30 days to produce a written decision.

Among the conditions of the project is to improve the nearby Sohier Street and Route 3A intersection, which Cohasset residents have deemed one of the worst in town, and to create greater pedestrian access and connection between the three buildings on the site and Sohier Street.

Planning Board member Clark Brewer said with Avalon apartment complex being built just south of the Sohier Street intersection he expects more pedestrians in the area in the future.

In addition, the Planning Board conditioned the approval on creating a connection between the signalized intersection at Cohasset Plaza and Sohier Street meaning the lights would be triggered after so many seconds of a car waiting to make a left turn from Sohier onto Route 3A.

The board also made it a condition to alter the area between Sohier and the plaza intersection to improve sight lines for the Sohier Street intersection.

Other conditions included no additional light would be cast off-site from the new proposed building; maintaining the 30-foot buffer between the commercial and residential zoning districts; restricting the times dumpsters can be emptied.

"Suffice it to say the conditions covered a lot of areas," said Planning Board chair Al Moore in a phone interview.

The board also made it a condition to alter the area between Sohier and the plaza intersection to improve sight lines for the Sohier Street intersection.

The plaza is currently anchored by Stop & Shop supermarket and another L-shaped building that houses Feng Shui, Papa Gino's, Blockbuster and others.

The approval of the site plan was not unanimous. According to the draft minutes of the Oct. 6 meeting Planning Board vice chair Stuart Ivimey voted against approving the site plan. Ivimey initially proposed a motion to deny the site plan based upon the fact it did not comply with zoning requirements regarding impervious surface and certain setbacks. His motion was not seconded.

Ivimey's concerns were addressed to the other members' satisfaction through conditions to maintain the existing impervious area percentage and leave unused a 30-foot buffer zone from the residential district.

The building has always been slated for retail, but no tenants have been named.

At a past hearing, Charles Humphreys, attorney for the project, said there were no specific tenants for the proposed building currently, but it was the intent to seek three larger tenants to occupy the space. He said the new building would allow the landlord to offer tenants space that is three times the size of the current space available at the plaza.

MV accidents, counterfeit $20s and free money

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

MV accidents

• At 6:50 p.m. on Tuesday (Oct. 12), police said a 16-year-old Cohasset girl operating a 1995 Volvo 850 was coming out of Spring Street from the high school when she did not stop at the stop sign at S. Main Street and struck a 2003 Chevrolet Trailblazer SUV traveling north (toward the village) operated by an 18-year-old Cohasset boy.

The girl's Volvo was towed; there were no reported injuries. However, witnesses reported several teenagers ran from the girl's vehicle. She was cited for failure to stop at a stop sign and for a junior operator's license violation for having passengers . She could be subject to a 60-day license suspension for the JOL violation, police said.

• At 8:22 p.m. on Tuesday (Oct. 12), police said a 17-year-old Weymouth boy operating a 1998 Chevrolet van north on Route 3A drifted into the traffic island at the train station parking lot entrance and blew out the two, passenger-side tires. The van had to be towed and the teen, who is from Brazil, was issued a criminal citation for operating without a license and failure to drive in marked lanes. He is being summonsed to court to face the charges.

• A 55-year-old Cohasset man reported at 1:59 p.m. on Friday (Oct. 15) that a large rock off a piece of construction equipment on Pond Street damaged his 2007 Honda Odyssey van. Police said he will pursue the matter on his own but wanted the incident logged.

• At 3:43 p.m. on Friday (Oct. 15), a 2003 Chevrolet Avalanche, operated by a 62-year-old man from Big Pine Key, Fla., slowed down while approaching the red light at Route 3A and Pond Street and was "rear-ended" by a 2003 Toyota Corolla, operated by a 29-year-old Duxbury woman. Both cars were traveling south on 3A when the accident occurred. The Duxbury woman was cited for following too closely. There were no reported injuries but the Corolla had to be towed, police said.

• At 3:20 p.m. on Sunday (Oct. 17), an 18-year-old Cohasset girl, operating a 2002 Land Rover north on Route 3A, rear-ended a 2006 Toyota Camry, operated by a 49-year-old Scituate woman, who was making a turn into Mary Lou's News. The Scituate woman was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries; her vehicle was towed. The Cohasset girl was cited for following too closely.

Counterfeit $20 bills

Police are investigating the passing of three counterfeit $20 bills at a local convenience store off Route 3A. Police responded to Rockland Trust last week (Tuesday, Oct. 12); the bank found the bills in a deposit from the convenience store.

Two weeks ago a counterfeit $20 bill was passed at Tedeschi's in the village.

Dog loose

A Rustic Drive resident reported last week (Tuesday, Oct. 12) that the same dog, a yellow-lab mix, has been showing up in her yard every day for two weeks or more. Police referred the complaint to the Animal Control Officer for follow-up.

Lock cut

A foreman from MassDOT reported to Cohasset police last week (Tuesday, Oct. 12) that the lock on the state highway gate to the barn off Crocker Lane had been cut and asked for extra patrols. MassDOT replaced the lock; nothing was reported missing, police said.

Hit and run

A 36-year-old Abington woman went to the station last week (5:10 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 12) to report that while she was parked on Elm Street by Fleming's the side mirror of her 2010 Nissan SESL was hit, breaking the mirror. The incident occurred sometime during the past hour, she told police.

Free money

Police said the 37-year-old man from New York City who said he was working on the movie being filmed in town checked out OK. A mother reported that the man gave her 11-year-old daughter and a group of friends $35 at Tedeschi's and then walked across the street. Other than that, the man had no contact with the girls; no crime was committed, police said.

Police said the man said he heard the girls saying they did not have enough money to purchase the snacks they wanted; he wanted to be nice, so he gave them the cash.

Police ran a computer check on the man and he has no record.

Harassing kids

A concerned father notified police last week (Wednesday, Oct. 13), that when his two sons, ages 8 and 9, were walking home from the bus stop – a neighbor yelled swears at them. Police talked to the 58-year-old neighbor, who denied the allegation, but told him to knock it off.

Canoe taken

A 68-year-old Beach Street woman reported last Friday (Oct. 15) that her Old Town Canoe with two paddles that was tied to her dock in Little Harbor were stolen sometime the night before. The canoe and paddles are valued at $225, police said. The incident is being investigated.

Summonses

• At 8:39 p.m. on Friday (Oct. 15), on officer monitoring traffic stopped a 2002 Mazda Miata, operated by a 41-year-old Scituate man on N. Main Street, because the car had no exhaust system. A computer check revealed the operator had an expired license and he was issued a criminal citation to appear in court. A passenger was able to take over operation of the vehicle, police said.

• At 8:30 a.m. on Sunday (Oct. 17), police stopped a 1993 Ford F150 pickup on Ripley Road that was known to them for having revoked registration. Police confirmed the registration was revoked for nonpayment of insurance and had the truck towed. The operator is being summonsed for operating with revoked registration and for operating an uninsured motor vehicle.

Intoxicated

An Ipswich woman, who was intoxicated, called police repeatedly at around 12:30 a.m. on Sunday (Oct. 17) about a family problem in Cohasset. Police asked Ipswich PD to conduct a welfare check on the caller.

9-1-1 hang-up

A 15-year-old girl who was being teased by her 14-year-old brother threatened to call police if he did not stop on Sunday (Oct. 17) at about 1:30 p.m. She dialed 9-1-1 and hung up, not realizing the call went through. Police responded and the siblings' parents were called. The parents handled the situation. There was no physical altercation between the girl and her brother, police said.

Contract sets stage for Cable-TV studio at CHS

The Board of Selectmen authorized the Town Manager to sign the contract between the town and the schools to place the cable television studio in a space at the Middle-High School.

The School Committee and the Cable Advisory Committee approved the contract in September. The cable television group will pay the schools $500 per month to use the space.

An RFP for the renovation of the studio space is expected to go out by the end of the month.

"My best guess is to have the studio up and running by the end of the year," said Selectman Paul Carlson, who also serves on the Cable Advisory Committee.

Lewis cites 'jobs, jobs and more jobs'

By Micah Flores
MFLORES@CNC.COM

That the current two-party system dominates the country's political landscape is a dilemma that Maryanne Lewis of Scituate — one of the three independent candidates running for Congress in the race to succeed Democratic U.S. Rep. William Delahunt — thinks she might be able to help solve.

While Lewis, 47, said both of her major party opponents — Democratic Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating and Republican state Rep. Jeff Perry — claim to act independently of their parties, both campaigns still rely on millions of outside-the-district dollars.

"I'm not beholden to any party," said Lewis, former Democratic state representative in the 11th Norfolk District, of which she is a native. "I always enjoyed a centrist profile, even before I had a 'D' beside my name."

Lewis, who now runs her own law practice, said she is not impressed by the major-party candidates, or her view that Democrats have strayed too far left.

"As a mother, business owner, homeowner and a citizen, I'm concerned about what's going on in Washington — that's why I'm running," she said.

Of her eight years on Beacon Hill, Lewis said she was proud to have risen quickly, "working across the aisle in terms of gender, geography and party lines," all while becoming the first woman in the history of the state to chair a committee her first term.

"I initiated taking unearned income tax from 12 percent to 5.3 percent," she said, also citing the creation of a $3 billion rainy day account. "My name is on the largest tax cut in the history of the Commonwealth."

Lewis said women's causes advanced during her tenure and that she proudly co-sponsored a bill requiring insurance companies to pay for minimum hospital childbirth stays — 48 hours for vaginal deliveries and 96 for cesarean section.

"We funded research and detection of breast cancer awareness in unprecedented amounts of money," she said.

A supporter of extending former President George W. Bush's tax cuts, which are due to expire, Lewis said small businesses would get hurt if they were allowed to lapse.

"My brother has a captain's license, and my son is a mate on tuna and lobster boats," she said, calling the creation of "jobs, jobs and more jobs" her No. 1 priority if elected. "That's a district issue. That's a state issue, and that's a national issue."

Lewis also spoke of frustrated business owners and her opinion that the federal government imposes over-burdensome regulations on them, an issue she said she would also bring to Washington, D.C.

"I'd like to get on the budget committee that deals with the tax code in terms of how it relates to small business," she said, citing the "disconnect" between the federal government's policies and the realities of the district's fishing and lobstering trades.

Striking a balance between the preservation of the coastal environment and the sustainability of the fishing industry for years to come is not an impossible feat, she said.

"I think I'm the best candidate with the best skill set to address the challenges that lie ahead," Lewis said. "I think I have the best understanding of the fabric of this district."

Sheets opposes health care reforms

By Micah Flores
MFLORES@CNC.COM

Jim Sheets devoted his life to public service, but said the Democratic Party in which he served has abandoned him, no longer reflecting the ideas or ideals he had grown to know.

Now 75, Sheets —Quincy's mayor from 1990 to 2002 — has come out of retirement to run for Congress as an independent candidate in the race to represent the 10th Congressional District.

"The Democratic Party no longer serves what I consider to be the real needs of Americans," said Sheets.

Sheets — rejecting the notion that he may be playing the role of spoiler, potentially stripping Democratic candidate William Keating the Quincy votes needed to overcome Republican Jeff Perry — said his reasons for entering the race were legitimate. Among his concerns is that the country continues to rack up debt, nearly $14 trillion worth, and that the Democrats' reforms to health care will hinder more than help.

"I don't see my children or and grandchildren living the American Dream," said Sheets, recalling his background as the son of a coal miner in Pennsylvania and then his years in Quincy, where, before serving as mayor, he earned an education, taught history and government, served 16 years on the Quincy City Council and served two terms as a Democratic state representative.

Sheets, who said his most notable accomplishment as mayor was his successful effort to keep Quincy Hospital open in the 1990s, said his candidacy focused on the repeal and redraft of health care reform.

"You have a half trillion (dollars) being cut out of Medicare for seniors over 10 years," he said. "It will affect the quality of care and what procedures you can get. It will affect the timeliness of it"

An older person with a lesser quality of life needing a knee replacement might instead be prescribed a wheelchair, he said.

"That's not acceptable to me," Sheets said. "These people have worked hard all their lives. They've paid taxes, and fought for their country. They've earned the right to have good health care."

Sheets said there are not enough moderates in Washington, D.C., and that he would work hard to build consensus, reaching out to both Republicans and Democrats in all his efforts.

On the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, Sheets said the latter was necessary, and that he trusted the judgment of U.S. Army Gen. David Petraeus to lead the way.

"I think Petraeus has to tell us within one year whether we can be successful in suppressing the Taliban," he said. "If we can be successful then we move forward. If we can't, it's time to come home."

On the three ballot measure questions to be voted on at the Nov. 2 State Election, Sheets said he was only certain of how he would vote on Question 1, the proposed repeal of the state's alcohol tax, which, as a non-drinker, he would not support.

Meanwhile, he was unfamiliar with Question 2, the proposed repeal of the state's Chapter 40B affordable housing law, and said he could not say for sure how he would vote on Question 3, rolling back the state's sales tax from 6.25 to 3 percent.

Van Nes wants to bring troops home

By Micah Flores
MFLORES@CNC.COM

Rather than reflect on job creation, Joseph van Nes of West Tisbury on Martha's Vineyard said he wanted to focus on some of the reasons why jobs disappear in the first place.

"We're losing jobs because we have a $7 trillion war with no end in sight," said van Nes, who at 25 is the minimum age required by the U.S. Constitution to run for the House of Representatives.

Billed as the "bring the troops home" candidate in the race to succeed Democrat U.S. Rep. William Delahunt, van Nes, who is running as an independent, said the U.S. military was being used to stir up more trouble than can be solved.

A self-described environmentalist and tradesman, van Nes said the country's economic system has failed because it "relies on exponential expansion on a planet which is physically, scientifically and mathematically limited."

Van Nes said he studied history in college, but never earned a degree, instead traveling abroad to Spain, where at one point he lived in a cave for nine months, reflecting on over-consumption. Traveling and seasonally living abroad taught him far more than the "recycled ideas" of the classroom, he said.

On global issues, van Nes argued that the current free trade system is was anything but.

"Free trade is sort of like the Patriot Act: there's nothing patriotic about it," he said, adding that the system exports slave labor, thereby eliminating jobs here in the United States and stoking an immigration crisis. "If we want to solve immigration, we could get rid of the Free Trade Act and have workers' rights. End it altogether or have (free trade) with other countries that meet certain requirements."

Arguing that cap and trade proposals promote pollution and the establishment of corporate monopolies, van Nes suggested the implementation of tax rebates to help protect the environment, calling them good incentives that might make corporate polluters think twice.

"The less you use, the more of a rebate you save," he said.

Meanwhile, van Nes said the federal government was too large and that it should be Constitutionally limited. He said the government should protect human rights and called for the legalization of industrial hemp, which van Nes believes would lead to the manufacturing of fewer petroleum-based products.

"The goal of the federal government is to provide loose guidelines for states to follow," van Nes said, citing the Second Amendment as an example. "We all have the right to bear arms, but it's up to the states to do a full background check."

Asked about his view on issues specific to the 10th Congressional District, van Nes — maintaining that local issues are closely connected to federal and global issues — pointed to the proposed Cape Wind project in Nantucket Sound.

"Those guys (the Cape Wind developers) got the right idea, but I'd really hate to see another corporation come in and take public resources," he said, noting that the public should instead have access to the profits. "My feeling is if you're going to build a wind farm, build it on your own property."

Capital request

Police cruiser purchase recommended

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Capital Budget Committee is recommending a sole expenditure to Special Town Meeting: the purchase of police cruiser.

Last spring, the police department requested a new cruiser as one of their front line vehicles was showing its age. But, the Capital Budget Committee did not recommend that capital expenditure for the Annual Town Meeting last March, or any other expenditure. At the time they were unsure at that time how the town would cover the water department deficits and wanted to keep as much in reserve as possible.

The Special Town Meeting in June on the water issues covered the immediate deficits without having to utilize the capital stabilization fund.

"This is to catch up on our recommendation made a few years ago to purchase a new cruiser every year," Gaumer said.

Several years ago the Capital Budget Committee made a commitment to fund the purchase of a police cruiser (at an estimated cost of $31,000) each year. They conducted a study and found that the optimal size for the police cruiser fleet is four, and each cruisers optimal running life is four years and approximately 150,000 miles.

"At that point the maintenance cost tips" and it becomes more expensive to keep the vehicle operating, Gaumer said. The vehicle finds a second life as a car for the chief, a detective, or some other use within the town.

"This is to catch up on our recommendation made a few years ago to purchase a new cruiser every year."
— Steve Gaumer, Capital Budget Committee

"It has greater use to us than nearly anyone else," Gaumer said.

At a Selectmen's meeting in September, the police department reported one of the marked cruisers had over 165,000 miles on it and another was approaching 150,000 miles. Six of the police vehicles (including non-marked cruisers) have over 100,000 miles on them. In fiscal 2011 the police department has budgeted $27,500 for vehicle repair and maintenance. As of Sept. 31 percent of the line item has been spent.

If approved by Town Meeting voters, the purchase will be made in cash from the capital stabilization fund. Currently, Gaumer said, the fund has approximately $360,000 in it.

If Town Meeting continues to allocate the town's debt roll-off — bonds that have been paid off and the amount is then available for other budgetary uses — to the capital stabilization fund then the fund will be approximately $560,000 after the Annual Town Meeting in the spring.

However, the fund is not uncommitted, Gaumer said. Town Meeting has previously authorized bonding and other purchases, such as the Fire Department's new pumper truck, that will be paid over time.

The Capital Budget Committee heard no other department requests in advance of Special Town Meeting, but will begin to meet with department heads in preparation for Annual Town Meeting in late November.

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously to recommend the article to Town Meeting. Special Town Meeting is scheduled for Monday, Nov. 15 at 7p.m.

Associate member

The Capital Budget Committee is also seeking changes to their enacting bylaw. The primary change is to create an "associate member" position to sit in and vote on recommendations in the case a quorum of full members could not be gathered. The ability to vote would be determined by chair of the committee.

The wording was mirrored on the language that enabled the Planning Board associate member last fall.

A second part of the article alters the charge for the capital budget committee to take on and review more strategic financial planning items.

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously to recommend the article.

Selectmen determined the town needed someone who was proactive and willing to jump in and get acquainted very quickly to the town.

In Lombard they found a candidate who said he would return calls quickly, solve problems and maintain an open-door policy.

In other communities Lombard said he has established weekly meetings with department heads and monthly all department head meetings.

"My job is to make (department heads) job that much easier. There is not a problem we can't solve together," Lombard said. "Bringing people together, that's the work that I like to do."

One of the key responsibilities of the interim town manager is to prepare the fiscal 2012 budget.

"2012 is going to be a very tough situation to get by and maintain the level of services residents are used to. The biggest struggle will be the loss of revenue and just trying to maintain where you are," Lombard said.

After all three interviews, each of which was approximately 45 minutes long, the Selectmen discussed the choice before them. All five Selectmen spoke highly of the three candidates.

"They are all really good people I don't think the town would be poorly served by any of them," said Selectman Ted Carr.

Robinson has spent his career in government public management and has spent the last 10 years helping developing countries form local governments.

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously this week to hire Stephen Lombard of Mattapoisett to the position of interim town manager.

Ritter brought to the table experience from serving as interim town manager in three communities, as well as several full-time municipal administration positions.

But, it was Lombard's extensive budget and municipal administration experience that gave him an edge. The Selectmen felt Lombard would have the shortest learning curve of all the candidates.

"We need somebody that shows up to work on the very first day," said Carr. "At (Lombard's) core he is a consensus builder."

In his cover letter, Lombard requested a per diem rate between $650 and $750, which included attending night meetings. At the interview Lombard said he was available as much as the town needed him.

Finance director Mike Buckley resigns

Finance Director Michael Buckley, who has worked for the town for 18 years, is moving on. In a letter dated Oct. 13, Buckley informs Town Manager Bill Griffin of his departure.

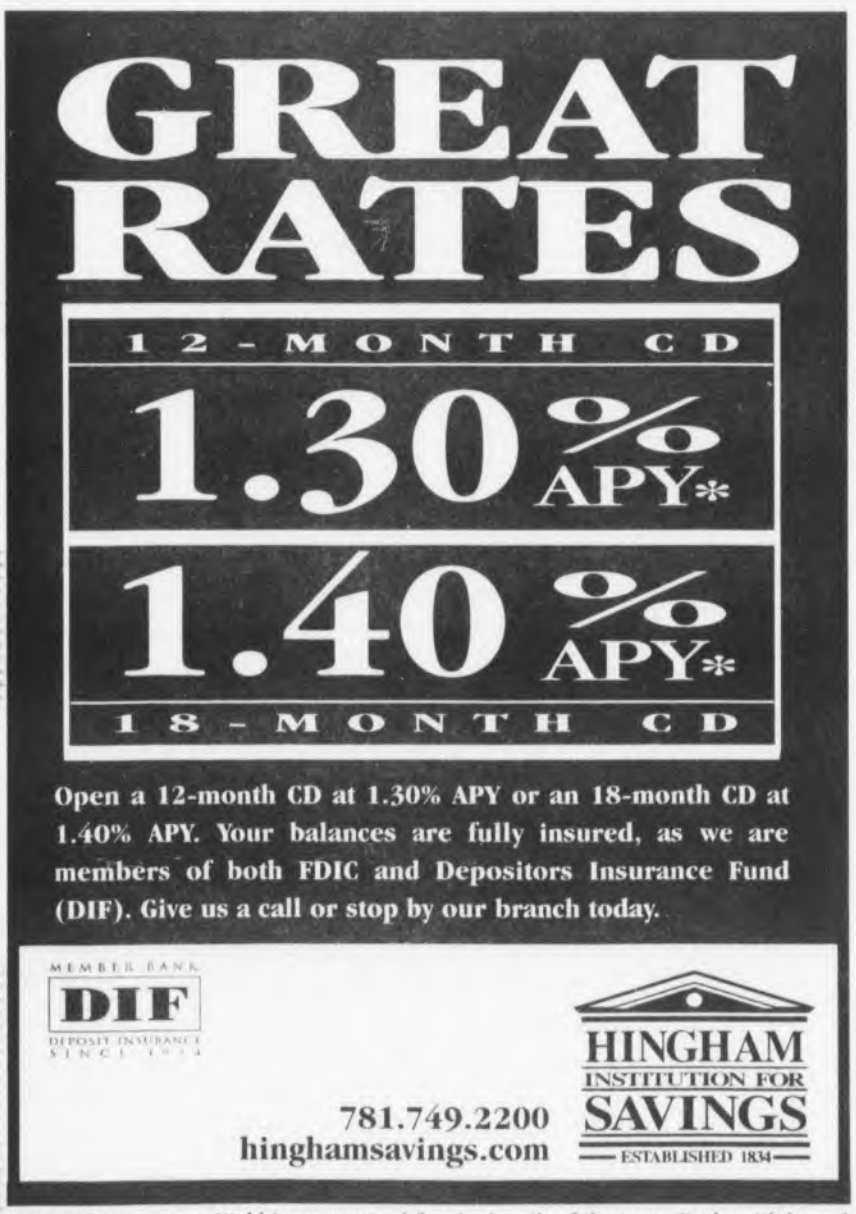
His last day will be Tuesday, Nov. 2.

"I would like to thank you (Griffin), the Selectmen and the residents of the Town for the opportunity to serve Cohasset for the last 18 years," Buckley wrote.

The Mariner previously reported Buckley had accepted the position of Treasurer/Collector in the town of Hull.

Buckley grew up in Cohasset, graduated from Cohasset High and started working as the town accountant when he was 29 years old. About 10 years ago he took over as finance director, a position that oversees the finance department, which includes the accounting, assessors, treasurer, collector and payroll services.

Buckley grew up in Cohasset, graduated from Cohasset High and started working as the town accountant when he was 29 years old.



Buckley's departure comes at a time when the town's leadership is in flux. Town Manager Bill Griffin is leaving Cohasset for a job in the private sector at the end of this month.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said Buckley had brought forth a proposal for interim finance director. The Board of Selectmen voted to consider the proposal in an executive session. The Selectmen then held a discussion in executive session on strategy for contract negotiations for non-union personnel.

COOL MOMENT

Hey there, Cohasset. I am hoping that this week is finding everyone doing well and enjoying the colors of fall before they fade away. I know I have been although I have to admit that the temps have been a bit on the cool side for me.

In the big picture, I have nothing to complain about, as we are so lucky to have the community that we do and to be living on the South Shore. The other day as I was rushing to work earlier than normal, I came to a very quick halt due to seven deer crossing. Four of them chose to just stop and stare at me and it was one of those really cool moments where it felt like they were giving me a message. They reminded me that life is too short and is a gift that we only get to unwrap once. As I sat in my car waiting for the deer to move, I was able to watch as the sun was almost up in the background of the deer and the message they gave to me was to slow down and enjoy the view! Life does not slow down unless we take the time to slow down each day and enjoy even a few of the moments. I hope that all of you reading this column this week try to find a few minutes each day to enjoy something that makes you smile, reflect and remember. Have a super week Cohasset.

Tosca dinner to benefit JDRF

"We are pleased to be able to support the efforts of JDRF in finding a cure for juvenile diabetes by hosting this event at Tosca. I have a personal connection with this disease and know how hard it can be on families and children."

— Ed Kane, Eat Well Inc.

Tosca Restaurant in Hingham will host a fall-inspired Sunday dinner featuring seasonal drinks and food to benefit the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation at 6 p.m., on Sunday, Nov. 7. The event will highlight a reception with seasonal hors d'oeuvres followed by a four-course dinner paired with a selection of red and white wines. Space is limited and reservations may be made by calling Tosca at 781-740-0080 or in person with a manager at Tosca. The cost is $100 per person and checks may be made payable to JDRF; credit cards will also be accepted. One hundred percent of the funds raised will go directly to JDRF.

Ed Kane, one of the owners of Eat Well Inc. and Tosca said, "We are pleased to be able to support the efforts of JDRF in finding a cure for juvenile diabetes by hosting this event at Tosca. I have a personal connection with this disease and know how hard it can be on families and children."

The Tosca event is also part of Team Hingham's participation in the JDRF Walk to Cure Diabetes. For the seventh year, families from Hingham who have children with Type 1 Diabetes came together to raise funds to find a cure. Although the walk took place Oct. 2, Team Hingham is still raising funds for JDRF.

Type 1, or juvenile, diabetes strikes children suddenly, makes them dependent on insulin for life and carries the constant threat of devastating complications. Type 1 diabetes is an autoimmune disease in which the body's immune system attacks and destroys the insulin-producing cells of the pancreas. While the causes are not yet entirely understood, scientists believe that both genetic and environmental factors are involved. Each year more than 13,000 children are diagnosed with Type 1 diabetes in the United States. JDRF was founded in 1970 by parents of children with diabetes and is the leading charitable funder and advocate of Type 1 diabetes research worldwide. The charity was recently rated one of the most effective in the country, with a fundraising efficiency rating of 91 percent given by Forbes magazine.

June Blair, a Hingham resident whose 16-year-old daughter was diagnosed with diabetes when she was 4 years old, helped to organize this event with Kane and Long. Blair said, "Living with diabetes is difficult and life threatening, and is only controlled through rigorous attention to managing daily care and insulin injections. Unfortunately Team Hingham has been growing, with three new children in town diagnosed within the last 12 months."

For more information about JDRF, call Blair at 781-741-5064 or contact JDRF at www.jdrf.org or call 800-533-CURE.

New era, new building

Sailing club needs new lease with town

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Sailing Club is about to embark on a new era that would include a new 1800-square -oot clubhouse.

The sailing club would like to raze the current building and reconstruct the clubhouse and adjacent shed.

Over the last 50 years the Cohasset Sailing Club has become an institution on and in the harbor. It has taught the sport of sailing to thousands of Cohasset youths.

The clubhouse on Government Island has housed the pre-water lessons for 30 years and, according to Sailing Club representatives, is in need a makeover.

"We made the decision to replace, instead of renovate," said Tim O'Brien, a sailing club officer. The sailing club would like to raze the current building and reconstruct the clubhouse and adjacent shed.

Sailing Club representatives came before the Board of Selectmen to discuss the potential project. The Sailing Club currently has an application for a special permit before the Zoning Board of Appeals.

An update to the Sailing Club has been in the plans for several years, ever since an assessment of the building was completed that revealed the underpinnings of the clubhouse were in disrepair. As time has gone on more things have been found that need to be replaced or updated.

The Sailing Club has a unique situation with the town. It owns the building, but the land it sits on is leased from the town for $1 per year.

However, on Monday night Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said the lease had expired.

"Given the major investment you will be making in the building it's very important to have a lease going forward," Quigley said.

The potential to lease the property will need to be put out to bid through a RFP (Request For Proposal) process. In the RFP the specific area needed for the Sailing Club's operation will be outlined. The RFP would require the land to be used in generally the same way the Sailing Club uses it today.

Thus far in the project all design, architectural and engineering services have been donated.

Cohasset Village-based architectural firm Hoadley Martinez Architects has designed the building to be LEED-registered. Environmentally conscious aspects include re-using timbers from the current structure, low Solar Reflectance Index roofing, native plantings, pervious draining, stormwater collection and re-use, energy efficient windows and sourcing all materials within 500-miles.

"We want a building that really fits with the landscape of the harbor," said Sandy Crough, sailing club officer.

The design also caters to the growing needs of the club. This past year they taught 265 children to sail; it was their largest group in the history of the club. The new clubhouse will also be 100 percent ADA-compliant (Americans with Disabilities Act).

The future clubhouse is designed to be a very open building, in the design vein of a typical New England boathouse. Three garage doors will be opened in the summer and a series of steps will turn into a classroom. The open first floor will transform into boat storage during the winter.

"Right now we are busting at the seams," Crough said.

The new clubhouse will be about 1,800 square feet. The current building is about 1,300 square feet.

The Sailing Club will undertake a fundraising campaign later this year to finance the renovation of the building. Preliminary estimates are $400,000 to $600,000.

"This is a very exciting project it looks like and a beautiful building," Quigley said.

Jenna Blum coming to town

Kicks off library's 'Next Chapter' program

By Marylou Lawrence
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

COURTESY PHOTO

Jenna Blum is a novelist and a teacher of creative writing.

Admirers of Jenna Blum's novel "Those Who Save Us" will want to know how her new novel, "The Stormchasers," could possibly bear any resemblance to its predecessor and from where did the stories of these two very disparate, terrible events emerge?

On Friday, Oct. 29, at 11 a.m. author Jenna Blum will be at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library to answer her readers' questions and will speak about her two most consuming passions—her work as a novelist and her work as a teacher of creative writing.

In short, both Blum's novels are about characters whose lives are shattered by destructive forces beyond their control. Ideas of sacrifice, atonement, redemption, and moral responsibility lead to the same underlying question in both novels—how far will we go to protect someone we love? But beyond their thematic likenesses, the novels are unrelated, their stories discreet structures where people strive to live reasonable lives.

"Jenna Blum has done it again!" claimed the New York Journal of Books about Blum's latest novel, "The Stormchasers," which is about a young man with bipolar disorder, who is compelled to chase the storms that mirror his mind's interior, and his twin sister, who will go to any length to protect him from his dangerous impulses. Blum's research involved chasing storms for five years.

In 2004 Blum published "Those Who Save Us," a story told from the perspective of two women, a young mother in Nazi Germany and her now 50-year-old daughter who searches and ultimately finds the wrenching truth of her mother's life.

Blum's novels are about characters whose lives are shattered by destructive forces beyond their control.

Critically acclaimed as a remarkable and powerful first novel, "Those Who Save Us" was a "New York Times" and "Boston Globe" best seller, winner of the 2005 Ribalow Prize, a Borders Book Club pick, and a favorite with book clubs across the country. Blum credits book clubs' word of mouth for the tremendous success of the paperback edition.

Before she came to Grub Street Writers as a Master Novel instructor, Blum taught creative writing for five years at Boston University, where she also earned her MFA. She lives in Boston.

Both novels will be available to purchase at the event.

Keeping up with the Joneses

While "keeping up with the Joneses" has a negative connotation – we mean to use it in a positive sense.

At the Cohasset Mariner Office in downtown Hingham we have the good fortune of also covering Hingham in that the same editor also edits the Hingham Journal.

Covering the two neighboring towns and reporting on the issues provides us with some insight that can be worth sharing. It is important to note that Hingham is about three times the size of Cohasset in population. Hingham is also closer to public transportation and Route 3, so the growth and traffic pressures there are far greater.

But with that being said, Hingham will be accumulating quite a nice "nest egg" through the Meals Tax that the town adopted at its annual Town Meeting in April. Hingham has a bunch of restaurants and estimates are the town can expect to gain a revenue stream of approximately $250,000 to $300,000 annually from the .25 percent increase in the Meals Tax.

Hingham selectmen have now reached out to residents for suggestions about what to do with the money.

There is a general consensus not to let it become part of the operating budget but to deposit it into a stabilization fund which would be used for specific purposes.

Hingham selectmen are interesting in creating a tradition about how the money would be spent – with Town Meeting having the final say.

One interesting suggestion raised in Hingham would be to use the money for funding for a building project. Generally, voters must pass a Proposition 2-1/2 override to meet the cost of borrowing for a large building project, because it can't accommodate that need within the yearly budget. That means that often the cost of a building project is added on to regular property taxes.

If the meals tax money is used to lower the override amount, then every meals tax dollar used would replace a property tax dollar, which would then stay in the taxpayers' pockets.

Other suggestions for uses of the funds have been: to cope with swings in snow and ice removal costs, which vary widely from year to year, and for special education costs, which often surge in the middle of a budget year in an unpredictable way.

Regardless of what the funds are ultimately used for, Hingham Town Meeting action is required to create the stabilization fund, and Town Meeting must vote to put funds in and to take funds out. Each of those votes requires a two-thirds' majority, which helps ensure that funds are not spent lightly. If Town Meeting does not put the funds into a stabilization fund, they remain part of the general fund and can be spent on anything Town Meeting chooses.

In 2009, the State Legislature approved a new local option meals tax to provide some relief for towns facing budget shortfalls due in part to local aid cuts. Communities may levy a tax of up to .75 percent on the sale of restaurant meals.

We bring this Hingham issue up because the Meals Tax is going to be on the Cohasset Special Town Meeting Warrant. Cohasset could expect annual revenues of upwards of $100,000 from the tax if voters adopt it. How that money could be used is an important discussion.

Also on the table is a Hotel Tax for Cohasset that could bring in another $40,000 to $60,000.

Creating a fund for special purposes – with Town Meeting approval – can be a good thing. That is essentially what has happened with the Community Preservation Fund that has paid for a significant number of projects over the years.

TM voters to have say on meals, hotel taxes

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In separate articles, Town Meeting will consider implement the local option meals tax and hotels tax. Although the option has been discussed with the Board of Selectmen leading up to previous town meetings, this is the first time it has appeared on the warrant for citzens' consideration.

In 2009, the State Legislature approved a new local option meals tax to provide some relief for towns facing budget shortfalls due in part to local aid cuts. Communities may levy a tax of up to .75 percent on the sale of restaurant meals originating within the town or city by a vendor. The additional revenue supports the town's operational budget.

The local option meals tax is on top of the current 6.25 percent state sales tax on meals.

So far 110 of the 351 cities and towns across the state have adopted the meal's tax, including Hingham.

A $60 meal would cost an additional 45 cents with the .75 percent increase.

So far 110 of the 351 cities and towns across the state have adopted the meal's tax, including Hingham. Hingham approved a .75 percent local option meals tax this past spring.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said estimates for a full year of revenue for Cohasset if the town adopted the tax would be about $105,000, or about $8750 a month.

The other tax for consideration is the hotels/occupancy tax. The town could implement up to a 6 percent occupancy tax on all local hotel and motel stays. Currently 176 out of the 351 municipalities have adopted the tax. Some towns, like Hingham, do not have any hotels or motels. In the area, Braintree has a 6 percent tax; Hull (4 percent); Marshfield (4 percent);, Rockland (4 percent) and Weymouth (4 percent).

In previous meetings, Griffin has said Cohasset could expect to realize from $10,000 to $20,000 annually for each one percent tax. Using the lower estimate, the town could realize about $40,000 annually for a 4 percent tax and $60,000 for a 6 percent tax.

Paving crews adjust the schedule

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

What a difference a week makes — For all of you who thought we were spoofing about paving getting underway, it has really started. On Thursday, Oct. 14th, T L Edwards rolled into Town with their cadre of workers, trucks and specialized machinery. Contrary to what we said before about the planned sequence of work, the paving contractor has his own reasons for rearranging the sequence of events. Well that happened here. The paving contractor began on Sohier Street and worked his way to Beechwood St. and then on to Pond St.

Once these were ground, the crew decided it would be best to move on to Jerusalem Road, starting at Rust Way and going to the intersection of Jerusalem Rd. and Atlantic Ave. This was then followed by cold planing parts of Atlantic Avenue. This was all accomplished by Tuesday of this week.

Two of the photos show the road cold plane grinder as it started up the hill near the Sisters of St. Joseph's facility and another shot taken as the grinder crested the hill.

From there it was on to the intersection of Nichols and Atlantic Ave. where they ground the road to the causeway. After this, the grinder cold planed the area from Cunningham Bridge to Whitehead Road. So finally, there is real action on our roads! After the grinding, the structure crew will work their magic. Their mission is to adjust or rebuild any catch basins, manholes or shut-offs that need to be raised or lowered to meet the level of the new asphalt that will be laid soon. The structure crew came to Cohasset on Wednesday and adjusted all of the structures on Sohier Street and Pond Street. There were no structures that needed adjustment on Beechwood Street.

Cold planing the section of Jerusalem Road from the intersection of Atlantic Ave. to North Main St. will be delayed waiting for the construction work at Jerusalem Lane to be completed. (In fact we are waiting for it to get started.)

Rebar for new footer.

Meetinghouse Pond — The deconstruction of the old pond is complete and the contractor, early this week, put the forms on place to pour the new footers for the wall. As you can see, the new wall and walkway will actually be cast over the old wall and walkway. The contractor chipped out the old footers so he could begin the forming work for the new footers. After the forms were put into place around the inside perimeter of the pond, the rebar was placed. If you are not familiar with the construction term, "rebar" it is the steel that is placed so that it will be positioned inside of the finished concrete structure. The rebar adds considerable overall strength to concrete structure.

By the time you read this, the footer of the new wall will have been poured. The footer is the lower part of the new wall on which the rest of the wall will ultimately rest. Notice how the rebar in the photo is placed inside of the footer and then travels up the side of the wall as well. That is so that the wall will be structurally tied to the footer, making both into one solid structure.

The future of journalism

FOR THE RECORD

GREGORY MATHIS

Don't let the headline fool you. This isn't some Nostradamus-like prediction that will revolutionize the field of community journalism. In fact what I have to say about the future of journalism reveals more questions than answers.

There's no doubt the landscape of the profession and industry has changed dramatically over the past five years with newsrooms across the country trying to figure out how to weave the World Wide Web into the newspaper culture. For some the change has been even more dramatic.

Flashback to 2004 — many newsrooms, including ours, had very little presence on the Web. If someone from another department, in another building, posted a handful of the top stories on the website the day the weekly newspaper came out, we patted ourselves on the back for a job well done. The journalists didn't pay too much attention to the process of posting stories to the websites. There was some computer magic that went on behind the scenes and presto, stories were available for the world to see.

The problem was that those journalists had no clue whom, if anyone, was reading their stories online and many of them didn't care. The print product, our newspapers, still ruled their world.

How times have changed.

Today, journalists in the newsroom control the websites. Editors, reporters, photographers and editorial assistants are charged with producing content for the newspaper as well as our Wicked Local websites. Not only that, we're the ones going through the production process to get that content to appear online. Needless to say, it has been a pretty big transformation for our journalists and newsrooms. And it has been particularly challenging for veterans in the field, many of who were not tech savvy and resistant to embracing the web.

And just taking our newspaper content and putting it on websites is not the answer. Our print audience has different expectations than the online audience and we want to grow and merge those audiences by giving them new reasons to pick up our newspapers and click on our websites. If we figure this out and do it right, our newspaper readers will look to our websites for multimedia presentations, photo galleries, polls, and more interactive content, and our online readers will look to our newspapers for content that is still best served in that medium, including investigative news pieces and features that are well designed.

Once we figure that out, we need to make sure we have the right platforms for our websites to be effective on mobile devices including iPhones and BlackBerries. All of this is being worked on, but as quick as we come up with solutions, the technology changes.

In addition to evolving our Web strategy, we're coming up with best practices to reach out to our readers through social networks such as Facebook and Twitter. And I know once we figure that out we'll have other new innovations to consider.

You don't need a crystal ball to see what readers want is to get the news they're interested in when they want it, and where they want it. Will there be a need for newspapers in that kind of world? We certainly hope so and have put a lot of time and effort into making sure there is.

Will newspapers survive? Let us know what you think by commenting on my blog and voting in the poll. blogs.wickedlocal.com/fortherecord.

HEALTH NOTES

Changes towns make and how we react

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Typically, the citizens of a municipality such as Cohasset tend to classify themselves according to the characteristics adopted by their friends and neighbors. Such perceptions tend to roughly follow such indicators as home values, sites near amenities such as stores schools, water views, and other factors, which are perceived to add or subtract value from a property.

The towns themselves are perceived to have relative values based on the conventional aesthetics of views, media reports, etc. People tend to leave because we all grow and develop new perceptions and therefore needs change. When one's perception of needs no longer fit, some simply leave town, but most tend to heed any suggestions and accommodate. We tend to judge our town by how it fits our present condition and how secure we feel about Town planning for the future.

Governance of a town seldom is subject to changes of form such as number of Selectmen or relationship of the Town Administrator to its functioning bodies, but the emphasis on elements of the job may undergo great change affecting many town functions. We see such changes in our present town structure. The departure of a respected and effective Town Manager is prompting some gentle hints to many Town functions to expect new approaches to dealing with Town problems. Few are the committees and boards, which have received no light-handed advice regarding some element of their operation. The changes and suggestions are well heeded.

The predominant change, which many fail to perceive, is the ratio of students to adults in Town.

The predominant change, which many fail to perceive, is the ratio of students to adults in Town. We simply have more adults in Town than we used to. Also, the number and character of people who live elsewhere in summer — or winter has changed as have the number of students which attend private schools as parents attempt to cope with the Town's administrative adjustment.

So, what requirements should we expect to be addressed in the near future?

Transportation: More use of private busses and volunteer vans and taxi services, for citizens young and old who can no longer drive or convey themselves.

Food Distribution: Daily, large trucks remove perfectly good produce and other food products which have reached their expiration date to food distribution centers which provide it to the most needy leaving a large fraction of our population to settle for inexpensive fast food of questionable nutritional value.

Health Clinics: An increasing number of individuals can no longer afford the treatment of minor medical problems such as back pain. The Health Nurse, generally Mary Goodwin, makes visits to shut-ins two days a week and has a clinic three days at the Town Hall, however she covers only the neediest and we have little knowledge of those who have been missed.

A Solution? But finally, the Town, through an initiative being managed by our newly rejuvenated Cohasset Council on Aging is working to develop, near the downtown area, a community facility to provide a spectrum of services aimed at every citizen of Cohasset. Especially those who may have need for seeking a healthy mature convivial lifestyle.

Next week, we'll talk about the new Building the Town is planning for all Cohasset citizens providing a safe stable and healthy place to relax and enjoy their leisure time in Town.

The Mariner, will feature a new column addressing the adult scene. A new name will be proposed to reflect changes in the way we'll use our time. Hopefully it'll catch on.

Feasting on foliage on recent N.H. trip

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE SMULLEN

A few people from Cohasset joined the Scituate seniors for a bus tour to North Conway, N.H. They drove along the beautiful Kankamagus Highway. Although the color had not yet peaked, there was a lot of golden yellow among the green and now and then some red. The bus stopped at the North Conway Hotel where the group enjoyed a tasty lunch. The dining room is beautiful having a large curved wall of windows. While dining one could look across a valley to some of the New Hampshire mountains. The bus took a different route home, stopping for an hour at the North Conway outlets so those who wished could shop. All in all it was a lovely way to enjoy an October day.

Trudy Salerno, staff member at our own Cohasset Elder Affairs, had planned some great trips for this fall. However, for these plans to come to fruition, enough people are needed to fill a bus. If you feel like you would enjoy one of these trips, please read your VISTA or contact the Center (781-383-9112) to see what is available.

Although the color had not yet peaked, there was a lot of golden yellow among the green and now and then some red.

The Wednesday seminars have continued throughout the month. Linda Hart of Partners Home Care spoke about medication safety – how important it is to take medications as directed. Also your doctor or pharmacist should be consulted as to how any over-the-counter drugs you take may react with your prescribed meds.

Dr. Strecker, who has an office in Cohasset, has spoken to us about the importance of having regular eye exams even if you feel that your eyes are OK. Vision can affect our driving, cooking, reading and more. He spoke about treatment for dry eyes, cataracts and glaucoma. Wearing sunglasses, not smoking and eating green vegetables will go a long way toward good vision. At the close of his presentation he gave complimentary screenings for glaucoma, cataracts and macular degeneration to those who wished.

Occupational therapist Betsy Macholchic talked to us about the aging driver. We discussed skills needed and some signs that may point to perhaps giving up driving. Of course good vision is indeed important. When it is time for license renewal your doctor can give you an eye exam, the result of which can be taken to the registry.

On Wednesday, Oct. 27, the seminar will be on Healthy Eating made Simple.

What a beautiful day this is! This morning I went to the Lightkeepers for coffee. Just outside the front door was a tree with yellow leaves. The sun shining on them made them look like gold. It was so beautiful against the blue water of the harbor and bright blue October sky. The coffee was hot and really good. Muffins, coffee cake and bagels were on hand as well as fresh fruit and hot egg and sausage casserole. There was lively conversation and smiles all around. If you are a senior no longer in the working world, why not come join us? Sadly, next Monday, Oct. 25, will be the last gathering until the arrival of spring. If we don't see you there, perhaps we'll meet at the reopening.

Louise Smullen's column runs monthly in the Cohasset Mariner.

Commission chair Chris Seebeck and Water Commissioner Peter DeCaprio (Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt was absent from the forum due to an out-of-town family commitment) directed discussion away from the past, namely the already signed contract with AT&T and the reduction of the town's easement at 100 Pleasant St.

"I cannot talk about how good or bad past decisions were. I have to deal with the givens and right now the given is the easement has changed," Seebeck said, adding he wanted to see where the neighbors could compromise and how the commission could address safety concerns associated with the Reservoir Road access road.

"I'm trying to do the best I can for the water department and you're trying to do the best you can for your neighborhood. I'm looking for a compromise," Seebeck said.

Ultimately, the decision on whether to used the town-owned swath of land off Reservoir Road for water tank access rests with the Board of Selectmen.

Keeping the issues compartmentalized for both members of the audience and the Water Commission proved difficult. Much of the frustration felt by the neighborhood and other residents stem from how the Water Commission acted in regard to the AT&T contract and reduction of the Pleasant Street easement.

"We trust you to be in the business of water, not in the business of determining the highest and best use of town property," said Peter Whittemore of Elm Court in criticism of the Water Commission's signing of the AT&T contract.

What the discussion kept coming back to was whether or not AT&T is truly unable to use the current easement off Pleasant Street or if they would simply prefer an easier route. The residents wanted to be sure all options with the current easement had been explored before the Reservoir Road access point is seriously considered.

An illustration of the Bear Hill Water Tank Area.

Will the current easement work?

"The only option you're looking at right now is Reservoir Road. We live in that neighborhood, we know it is a busy street that's heavily trafficked by cars and kids on foot. It's a known dangerous corner with or without the addition of the access road," said Bill Doyle of 28 Reservoir Road. "What are the other alternatives?"

Seebeck said he wouldn't be considering another option if he thought the current easement would work. AT&T employees had told him that construction of the cell antenna and associated ground site would be difficult, if not impossible, using the current easement.

Other means of access had been explored, including going through the Middle-High School parking lot and accessing off Norfolk Road.

The residents peppered the commission with questions about the alternative ways AT&T could construct the site — using smaller trucks or bringing in the building in several pieces as opposed to a pre-fab construction.

The Water Commission said they would go back to AT&T and push the issue further.

Residents also questioned if changing the access point simply for a for-profit entity was a good enough reason.

"It's a political question. Right now, you're trading off the comfort of a whole neighborhood for AT&T," said David McMorris of Doane Street.

The commission said they would negotiate with AT&T to fully vet the possibility of access at the Pleasant Street easement.

Regardless of the AT&T contract and potential construction, Seebeck said the Reservoir Road was a preferred access point for the commission.

"It's the shortest distance and it's on town land," Seebeck said. The cost to build the Reservoir Road access point is estimated between $4,500 and $7,000.

Near the close of the meeting Seebeck and DeCaprio tried to determine where the neighborhood was willing to compromise. Some said they might be OK with the Reservoir Road access driveway only being used during the construction period (approximately three months), but would like the daily visits by the water department to utilize the Pleasant Street easement. Stipulated in this compromise was the commission had to show the neighbors they had done all they could to make the Pleasant Street access point work.

Some members of the audience said they would still have issues with the cell antenna project and the Reservoir Road access for construction.

Traffic and safety study

In response to a meeting with the Board of Selectmen and the Reservoir Road neighborhood in August, the Water Commission hired Norwell engineering firm Coler & Colantonio to perform a traffic and impact study for the proposed Reservoir Road driveway.

The study concluded the addition of the Reservoir access road to the tank would not impact the existing traffic and safety conditions. Approximately 600 cars each day travel past the proposed access driveway where there is a 6 percent downward grade. The average speed traveling northbound is 22 miles per hour and southbound 21 miles per hour. The busiest time is between 7 and 8a.m. with a volume of about 60 cars.

Residents had previously brought concerns about the high number of school-age pedestrians who use the area as a cut-through to the schools and fields. The study found the clearing of brush in the area would increase the visibility of pedestrians to approaching vehicles.

The engineers found there were sufficient sight lines at the proposed driveway and recommended the town take additional safety measures, such as posted speed limits signs and limiting the way vehicles can turn in and out of the driveway.

Area residents, by and large, did not agree with the study and still felt the access drive would have a negative impact on safety for neighbors and pedestrians.

Background on Bear Hill access

Since 1889 the Water Department has used a dirt lane off Pleasant Street to access its property on Bear Hill. Before the water tank was built in the mid-1960s, a reservoir sat on top of the hill. The access road ran diagonally located across the property at 100 Pleasant St. for decades with little fan fare.

Earlier this year that easement was altered. It was moved to another part of the property and reduced in size from 30 feet to 12 feet.

The complicating factor at this point is a home has been built in close proximity to the 12-foot easement resulting in what some say is a lessened use of the easement. That's why, in part, the Water Commission is seeking permission to use a swath of town-owned land off Reservoir Road to access the water tank going forward and, more immediately, to allow large trucks to access the water tank area to erect cell antenna on the tank.

Timeline

- July 2008: Request for Proposals (RFP) is issued seeking wireless carries interested in placing cell antennas on the Bear Hill water tank.
- Nov. 2008: The Water Commission withdraws its Town Meeting article that requested an abandonment of the easement at 100 Pleasant St. where the water department has historically accessed the water tank.
- May 2009: An easement relocation plan comes before the Water Commission for 100 Pleasant St.
- July 2009: The Water Commission signs an easement agreement that moves and reduces the 100 Pleasant St. easement from 30 feet to 12 feet.

Every drop counts

Water department improves in area of unaccounted-for water

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

With the water department working toward sound financial footing and the cost of water so high every drop of water that leaves the water treatment plant counts.

Each year the water department is required to report their percentage of "unaccounted-for water" to the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). The unaccounted-for water is a measure of how well a water supply system can account for all the water that it pumps into its distribution system. More specifically, it is the percent of water entering the distribution system not accounted for from service meter readings or from unmetered municipal uses such as fire fighting and street cleaning.

The data is collected by the DEP on a calendar basis, so the 2010 number are not yet available. However, over the last few years Cohasset has shown improvement in accounting for its water.

According to the DEP website, the 2007 Cohasset unaccounted-for water percentage was 27 percent. In 2008, it was 26.9 percent. Then, in 2009, when the Little Harbor project was in full swing, that number dropped to 12.7 percent, according to Water Commission chairman Chris Seebeck.

The decrease, Seebeck said, has been explained to him as a benefit from leaks fixed during the Little Harbor project and due to the leak detection program the Water Department had initiated over the past few years.

In a document developed by the Massachusetts Executive Office of Environmental Affairs and the Water Resources Commission in June 2006, it states the industry standard for unaccounted-for water is in the 10 to 15 percent range depending on the reference consulted. It also states that for many public water systems, a significant portion of unaccounted-for water is not water that is wasted, misused or lost, but water that may be used for legitimate purposes but is not accurately measured, or measured at all.

Examples of unaccounted-for water include, but are not limited to: leakage, meter inaccuracies, errors in estimation of stopped meters, unauthorized hydrant openings, illegal connections, data processing errors, and undocumented fire fighting uses.

Examples of unaccounted-for water include, but are not limited to: leakage, meter inaccuracies, errors in estimation of stopped meters, unauthorized hydrant openings, illegal connections, data processing errors, and undocumented fire fighting uses.

The department's efforts to locate leaks go back to the early 1990s.

According to a report by former Water Commissioner John McNabb that appeared in the June 2010 edition of the Journal of the New England Water Works Association, Cohasset water had 30 percent unaccounted-for water in the mid-1990s. The Commission put a high emphasis on leak awareness, detection and resolution. Because of this attention, the department was able to identify and fix a number of significant system leaks, which dropped the unaccounted-for water to below 10 percent by the late 1990s.

One of the sources of unaccounted-for water numbers is illegal connections and stolen water. While Seebeck said the problem is not rampant it does happen in Cohasset.

"From the commission's standpoint it is not a major issue," Seebeck said. "When we stumble across it we want to make sure it is taken care of."

During his tenure on the board (he was elected in April 2010) Seebeck said there has been one instance of "stolen water" the board has had to deal with. In most cases, he said, the illegal connections occur when a home is adding an irrigation system or an outdoor wet bar. The new connection is made before the water meter thereby bypassing the meter, the only way for the water department to monitor and bill water usage.

The illegal connections are sometimes discovered when the water department gets called to the property for a different problem, or is working in the vicinity, or a resident tips the department off.

Seebeck said once the illegal connection is verified the Water Commission takes steps to bill for the used water. A bill is generated with a charge for the additional connection (all new connections have a start-up cost) and estimates the water usage. If the bill is still not paid, a lien is placed on the property.

"I don't think it is a rampant kind of thing, but it could become more so given the cost of service now," Seebeck said.

GIVE ME A BREAK!
For those family members and friends who are dealing with the primary care of a senior who is living at home, supplemental assistance by a home health aide can provide a healthy and necessary break. Perhaps the primary caregivers wish to go on a well-deserved vacation. Utilizing the services of a health care aide on an "as needed" basis allows them to go forward with their plans. It gives them a breather to socialize with their friends and other family members, go to medical appointments, attend classes or even take a well-deserved nap. A home health aide can act as an effective "backup" for those who cannot always be there for their loved one.
We know how hard is it to take care of your loved one. That's why we offer a wide range of services. Not only can we provide occasional respite care, to let you go see a movie and get your own errands done, but we can also place caregivers on a more permanent basis. If you just can't be there as often as you'd like, then we can take care of the everyday chores, like grooming, bathing, cooking and dressing. You deserve help because no one can do it alone. Call 781-878-2994 to find out more about how we can help you. We are located at 145 Washington St., Suite 11.

Decision 2010

Candidates in the Third Plymouth District race were asked to respond to the following question in 300 words or less:

What should be done at the legislative level to help school departments in the district with the rising cost of special education?

Bradley: 'Circuit Breaker must be fully funded'

COURTESY PHOTO

Garrett Bradley, a democrat, is seeking reelection.

The rising costs to communities for providing special education to schoolchildren in need is a significant issue that is straining municipal budgets across the Commonwealth. In 2000, the state legislature created the "Circuit Breaker," which required the state to reimburse communities for 75 percent of their absorbed costs of providing special education. In the legislature I have always fought to make sure the Circuit Breaker account was fully funded and meeting its intended needs. Unfortunately, as the recent economic downturn has affected state revenues, this account, like so many others, has taken a substantial hit and is no longer meeting its intended obligations, leaving an even bigger strain on our local municipal budgets.

The most immediate action we can take as a legislature to assist schools with SPED costs would be to increase the Circuit Breaker account and get it fully funded and able to meet its 75 percent statutory reimbursement rate. Based on data from the Department of Education, the full annual reimbursement costs stand at around $250 million. In fiscal 2011, the state budget includes just $133 million in this account, or around 40 percent of what is necessary to fully meet the state's obligations.

In order to take the pressure off municipal budgets and school departments, we must make it a priority to fully fund this account and get back to full reimbursement for special education. To do so, I will push to develop a legislative instrument that dedicates a defined percentage of the State Lottery revenue set aside for local aid to be directed to the special education Circuit Breaker account. Additionally, if expanded gaming is approved in the next legislative session, I will work to include a provision that similarly sets aside the appropriate percentage to maintain full funding for the state's special education obligations.

Finnerty: 'Will work to find creative solutions'

COURTESY PHOTO

Tim Finnerty, a republican, is running for the Third Plymouth District.

How can we improve our special education in an environment where costs are rising and budgets are flat or declining? Three ideas are worth exploring 1. Offer more in-district special education. 2. Have the state take on more responsibility for out of district special education, and 3. Offer expedited mediation for disputes relating to special education.

Appropriate in-district special education is generally preferred by families and is also less expensive than out-of-district because it can be provided in our own local schools. In-district programs do not require out-of-district transportation or room and board. If a student needs help with some but not all classes, a partial inclusion program may be appropriate.

In district education is not available or appropriate for some special education students. These students require an out-of-district program. The out-of-district programs tend to be far more expensive because the needs of the student are greater and some of the schools are for profit. The State should take on more responsibility for funding out-of-district special education. Unfortunately, the state just reduced Circuit Breaker funding to our towns from 70 percent to 40 percent. The State is in a better position than individual school districts to provide a consistent level of services to students across Massachusetts and to negotiate lower costs with out-of-district providers.

Agreements between families and school districts are sometimes resolved by lengthy and expensive litigation. A considerable amount of money could be saved and redirected to a more productive use if disputes were resolved in mediation or arbitration.

If I win your vote on Tuesday Nov. 2nd. I will work to find creative solutions to the challenges facing our community and special needs families.

Chambers: 'What constitutes education?'

COURTESY PHOTO

Carlton 'Al' Chambers, an unenrolled independent candidate, is running for the Third Plymouth District.

This year cities and towns struggled with the disastrous requirements in unfunded mandates for educational spending imposed by the State.

The demands of unfunded mandates will continue to escalate unless thoughtful revision of the process is done and the likelihood of the current Democratic Assembly acting forcefully is unlikely.

At the heart of the issue lies the question "What constitutes education?" Massachusetts voters have always been generous in funding for schools. Communities with an outstanding educational record have been rewarded with higher home values. Presidents and Governors wanting to be remembered as a leaders in education have increased programs exponentially and accompanied the demands with the siren song, "We will tax for you and reimburse you as required." Following the great social legislations 40 years ago, the three Rs became supplemented by busing, breakfast programs, special needs programs, drug rehabilitation, probation counseling, remedial reading, second language assistance, bipolar care, charter schools, etc. Both State and Federal authorities have used public schools as dumping grounds for social issues and many programs are unsuitable for administration by public schools.

It is time to redefine education and what falls outside of giving a student a good learning experience. If the special needs program demands taxpayer contributions beyond twice the average town cost per student (usually $8,000) the State should pay the bill.

School committees should institute a Blue Ribbon panel to propose legislation limiting exposure to mandates to twice the average student cost, and requiring the state to fund the balance. Legislators should be petitioned by all municipalities in their district to respond to the cry for proper funding and to make the hard budget decisions necessary to complete their own mandates at the State level by amending its tax codes to fund the mandates.

Laughs make moms feel better

Writers turn to comedy to deal with breast cancer

By Lenny Kyle
LKYLE@CNC.COM

Those diagnosed with breast cancer respond in a variety of ways. Three moms in Scituate got together and found their own unique way. They wrote a play about their experiences with breast cancer and it is a comedy.

"I didn't want to give in to the terrorism of breast cancer treatments. I fight with funny," said Lisa Rafferty, one of the co-authors of the new play, "The MOMolougues: Pink Ribbon Overdose."

Rafferty, along with two other moms, Jane McGovern and Pamela Ahl, wrote a comedy to share laughter in a respectful way, "to get us through the ups and downs of treatment.

The play will debut on Wednesday, Oct. 27 at The Hard Rock Café in Boston. Tickets are $30.

"It was very therapeutic, an outlet for us while we were going through the ordeal of breast cancer treatment" said McGovern. "It is a memoir of our shared experiences, the radiation treatment everyday and this was a coping mechanism because we all felt the same way."

McGovern, a mother of three, said, "I wanted to be a positive role model for my children, to show them to keep a sense of humor and accept the trials and fate during my treatment of breast cancer. Hopefully survivors can find that humor, be with other survivors and share their experiences."

"We are not poking fun; we are merely sharing our experience. We tried to take something so tragic and turn it on its end."
Pamela Ahl

"(That) by writing this play, I healed more on the inside," said Ahl. "Scars on the outside heal, we go on raising our kids but the fear on the inside lingers. We all know to some degree. You, the survivors, are not alone…when God gives you those moments – share ahead. Share the ridiculous moments, if you allow yourself, it is like someone has given you permission to share and laugh."

"This play may not be for everyone, but I hope it is part of the healing process," said Rafferty. "Hopefully people, who come to see the play, will recognize some part of their own experience, through the writers' experience," said Rafferty.

Ahl said, "It's not a doom and gloom thing, it is quips and a flash of Polaroid funny. We are not poking fun; we are merely sharing our experience. We tried to take something so tragic and turn it on its end."

"The play took six months of collaboration of writing and putting together," said Rafferty. The play contains breast cancer lingo, where women are "in a club with others who know that lingo and can share their experiences with laughter."

"Once we started sharing, it was like a dam broke…. we laughed, we cried," said Ahl. "They say that knowledge is power, well, sharing experience is healing."

"Lisa was the architect, "said McGovern. Rafferty has had theater/director experience with two earlier plays she wrote about the funny experiences of being a mom titled, "The MOMologues" and "The MOMolgues2: Off To School," prior to getting her diagnosis of breast cancer.

The play was performed in front of an invited audience in Scituate in early December 2009 and was received with a positive reaction. "We had planned for an audience of 40 but nearly 100 showed up," said Rafferty.

"There were other survivors with family and friends. Based on the reaction of that audience, we tweaked the play a little to include more about the doctors, chemo nurses and treatment," said McGovern.

One hundred percent of the proceeds of the admission will be donated to the Ellie Fund. The program provides support services for women fighting breast cancer in Massachusetts. The services are free and range from childcare, transportation to groceries and housekeeping.

The Ellie Fund is named for Eleanor (Ellie) Popkin, a 30-year resident of Newton who passed after a nine-year battle with breast cancer. Her sons, Jeff and Elliot, started the fund to honor her fight with hope.

On the road to 'Recovery'

ACS program helps breast cancer patients with the next step

By Lenny Kyle
LKYLE@CNC.COM

The American Cancer Society's Reach to Recovery program helps survivors of breast cancer cope with the trauma of diagnosis, surgery and treatment.

"In the beginning, we prepare patients so they can deal with friends and family, so they may be able to talk to them. It makes it easier," said Mary Ficociello of Weymouth, a former coordinator for the South Shore chapter of the Reach to Recovery program. Ficociello is a breast cancer survivor herself who has been active for nine years in the Reach to Recovery program.

"I did lose a breast, but I gained new vision," she said.

Ficociello became involved with the program because of "fear of the unknown, not knowing who to turn to and to be able to give back to others in need."

Ficociello said the experience has been very rewarding. "Communication is a big part of the recovery process."

"Newly diagnosed patients are faced with a horror and loneliness when first being diagnosed," said Ruth Juster, who is the current Reach to Recovery coordinator. Juster, a Weymouth resident, has been a volunteer for five years and is an eight-year survivor. She stills meets with survivors on a regular basis.

"The program allows former patients, who understand, an opportunity to give back to these new patients. All volunteers are intensively trained and have yearly update training," said Juster.

"Survivors are matched to volunteers according to the treatment, age, marital status and diagnosis," said Juster. Volunteers help in a variety of ways from phone calls, meetings for coffee, e-mails according to the patient needs and desires.

"Patients need more than emotional support," Juster said. "It is comforting for a new survivor to know that there is someone who is willing to help them [survivors] with their own needs. Many new survivors must cope with this crisis and still take care of their own families."

"Patients need more than emotional support. It is comforting for a new survivor to know that there is someone who is willing to help them [survivors] with their own needs."
— Ruth Juster, current Reach to Recovery coordinator

The volunteer helps the survivor with the immediate emotional distress as well as informs the patient about the variety of information available for financial and legal advice, and transportation needs.

There is an abundance of literature available to families as well as the survivor, such as coloring books for young children to help them understand what "mommy" is going through. One book is titled "Mom and the Polka-Dot Boo Boo" by Eileen Sutherland, which is a gentle story explaining the condition. There are also books for the spouse of a survivor.

Founded by Terese Lasser in 1952, nearly one million survivors of breast cancer have been helped by carefully selected and trained volunteers who are breast cancer survivors themselves. The American Cancer Society accepted the Reach to Recovery program in 1969. Reach to Recovery operates in all 50 states in the United States and nearly 100 countries worldwide.

The South Shore chapter of the program covers towns from Quincy down to Wareham along the coast of Massachusetts. There are currently four or five volunteers available to help and as many as 12 patients receiving assistance. Most of the volunteers work full time jobs and take care of their own families in addition to helping the new survivors.

Ficociello said she is "surprised with all the publicity and public awareness that many do not know about the program. It is important for newly diagnosed patients to know about the program and become engaged."

Hingham artist helps kids cope with cancer

creative expression, ' allowing participants to identify and reduce their stress level. Each balloon represents a feeling one might have. The book emphasizes that it's all right to have more than one feeling at a time.

"The Moon Balloon" features sun, stress, peace, tear, love, giggle, butterfly, and angry balloons. Participants are asked to create their own drawings of how they feel in relation to the feeling each balloon stands for.

The balloons in the book are designed so that each participant can interact with them, putting his or her own images and symbols in the balloon's basket and all over the balloons. 'Entering' a different balloon opens up a new avenue of communication.

The creation of "Helping Children Cope" follows the recent opening of the Dana-Farber Brigham & Women's Cancer Center (South Shore Cancer Center) in clinical affiliation with South Shore Hospital.

During tours of the new cancer center, Kembel said she was struck by the number of families who were affected by some form of cancer and had young children. "A number of parents asked how to talk to their children in the midst of related concerns. That's when the idea for the program was born," said Kembel, whose work is in a volunteer capacity. In October 2009, Kimbel and a group of other Friends applied for a small grant through the Canton-based Blue Hills Community Health Alliance and the Department of Public Health. The Alliance receives its funding from the Caritas Norwood Hospital, Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates, South Shore Hospital, and the Weymouth MR diagnostic center.

The South Shore Hospital Friends of Hope and the Friends of Mel Foundation presented a free workshop for teachers, nurses and guidance counselors at Linden Ponds on Saturday, Oct. 2.

Julie Kembel and author Joan Drescher participated in the workshop: Cancer in the Family, Talking with children about their worries and feelings at Linden Ponds on Saturday, Oct. 2. They stand beside a drawing of a "peace balloon," which Drescher drew with input from children giving ideas about what makes them feel peaceful.

Start-up grant

The Friends of Hope were pleased to receive a start-up grant. It allowed them to recruit 24 volunteers with experience working with children and to give them special training by Drescher.

Trained facilitators use "The Moon Balloon" in the workshop. They blend story and art to help children learn to draw upon the power of their imagination in order to cope with feelings and worries that would be difficult to voice.

Drescher is artist-in-residence at Mass General Hospital for Children and founder of the Moon Balloon Project. This teaches children with cancer to use images and symbols to express and cope with their feelings.

The Friends' program is "a unique application of Joan's specialty, in this ease by helping children who have loved ones with cancer — an older or younger sibling, a. parent, aunt, or other family member," Kembel said.

Drescher has explored how art heals the body, mind, and spirit for the past 20 years. "The role of art in healing is as old as the healing temples of Aesci epius," Drescher said, "and the use of symbols in art goes back to the first cave paintings."

The book helps children use images to express their feelings about "something that is too painful to talk about," she said.

"Art is an incredibly powerful language when words won't come."

– Hingham author-illustrator Joan Drescher, author of "The Moon Balloon."

Drescher's colorful murals are found in major hospitals in the United States and Canada. The author of 25 children's books, she first envisioned the Moon Balloon 15 years ago. This colorful, creative, interactive journal is a resource for working globally with families and children who have experienced disasters as well as helping the healing process for those faced with family illness.

'Powerful language'

Drescher created "The Moon Balloon" in conjunction with her hospital murals when she saw how "the lives of children with cancer could seem out of control," she said. "This was a way to help them express themselves. Art is an incredibly powerful language when words won't come."

The same is true for children who are not ill themselves but have family members who are.

Kembel said she feels fortunate that a friend introduced her to Drescher at the time the grant money was received. "It was a perfect fit," she said.

"The Moon Balloon" is used as a resource by parents, health care professionals, teachers, and others concerned with bringing emotional healing to children throughout the United States as well as in the Philippines, Holland, Italy, Guatemala, Japan, Scotland, Canada, and other countries. "The book is a good tool to communicate through images with people who speak a different language," Drescher said. "It's like a new language without words. It's a very powerful thing."

Pilot program

An earlier two-month pilot program was successful, according to a subsequent research study. Participating children felt comfortable and drew upon their innate creativity to help them express their feelings while their parents learned how to support their children in sharing feelings and answering questions.

The study found that even a one-time "Moon Balloon" intervention helped children cope with the stresses of hospitalization and illness.

"Parents have been appreciative of the program," Kembel said. "It helps them anticipate how their children will react and how they can respond appropriately."

Art is "an incredible language," said Drescher. She was quick to note, "I'm not solving people's problems, just helping them express their feelings. This balloon has a mind of its own, and I'm just riding in the basket."

Expressing feelings through art

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

The "Helping Children Cope with a Loved One's Cancer" program provides a way for young people ages 4 to 10 to express their feelings when a. family member is diagnosed with cancer. (See related story)

This single-session, small-group program was created by the South Shore Hospital Friends of Hope volunteers. Sessions are offered the first week of the month, October through June, in Weymouth and Hingham, and by individual appointment.

Each program meets from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., and free parking is available at both locations.

The Weymouth program meets the first Tuesday of each month at the office of the Friends of South Shore Hospital, 797 Main St., directly across the street from the new South Shore Cancer Center.

The Hingham program meets the first Thursday of each month at Hingham Public Library, 66 Leavitt St., in the Whiton Room on the first floor.

The program, which helps children express through art what they are unable to express verbally, is offered free of charge. Trained volunteers engage children. in an art and conversation experience that their parents observe and can then replicate at home. "No artistic skill is required, just time, patience, and supportive listening," said Hingham resident Julie Kembel, a Friends of South Shore Hospital board member with, a focus on the Friends of Hope program. "This isn't always easy to do, but it is always rewarded."

Trained facilitators use Hingham author-illustrator Joan Drescher's children's book, "The for the workshop.

Children and their parents are together for the first and third segments of the two-hour program, while the middle portion is separate. The children's session focuses on a special drawing, snack, and game. At the same time, parents are learning the guidelines for doing "Balloon" exercises at home. They also learn more about how children react to a family member's illness according to their individual personalities and stage of development and ways to talk with children about all types of cancer.

Community resources are also discussed and a list of helpful books is reviewed. There is a question and answer period before parents join up with. their children again. The program wraps up with a show-and-tell of the children's drawings expressing their feelings, both. happy and sad, and a special surprise that leaves everyone smiling.

"These workshops provide a supportive environment in which children can express what's true for them," Kembel said. "It's not therapy, but a program geared toward helping parents and children talk together about their worries and fears."

Parents receive a copy of "The Moon Balloon" and a packet of guidelines and helpful resource information for use at home.

Friends of Hope members offer fund-raising opportunities involving talks on topics related to health and wellness in individual's homes in exchange for donations to the program.

"New volunteers are welcome," Kembel said. "Experience in working with children is the key."

Allison Montenegro, Eric Wahlstrom, Morgan Wahlstrom, Emma Fanuele and Claudia Montenegro volunteered at the workshop – "Cancer in the Family: Talking with Children about their worries and feelings." Author and artist Joan Drescher created different balloons based on her book "The Moon Balloon," with input from the children telling her what they feel is stressful, peaceful or what they may wish for. She drew a stress balloon, a wish balloon, and a peace balloon.

FOOTBALL

Edged by a boot

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The running game, ball control, defense and special teams are a staple for the Cohasset football team, but the same could be said for Rockland, and the Bulldogs did it just a little better on Friday night as they edged Cohasset 9-8 on the power of ball control, defense and a big field goal during Cohasset's Homecoming Game Friday night at Alumni Stadium.

Rockland's Mike Driscoll and Tim Fitzgerald controlled the ball, the defense made some big stops and to lead the Bulldogs past the Skippers in a battle of 5-0 teams in a South Shore League battle.

In the early going, after Cohasset scored early, it looked like the Skippers could dominate, but it didn't pan out that way.

Cohasset avoided early disaster when Kyrel Jaundoo recovered a Rockland fumble inside the Cohasset 10 and ran it back 61 yards just a few plays after the Skippers fumbled the opening kickoff and gave Rockland the ball in the red zone.

A 31-yard run by Thomas Flibotte set up his own three-yard touchdown run and two-point conversion pass from Jeff Cavanaro to Robbie Mahoney for an 8-0 lead.

Flibotte had 47 yards in the first half, and was over 80 yards for the game.

Cohasset took the 8-0 lead into the second quarter, bur Rockland came in strong, driving 78 yards for a touchdown that ate up almost the entire second quarter behind strong running by Driscoll and Fitzgerald.

Rockland had a great shot to score with 1:39 left in the half, but Devyn Flipp dropped a pass in the end zone, setting up a fourth down for Rockland.

Flipp made up for the drop on the next play, catching a pass from D.J. Austin for a first down.

Three plays later Driscoll scored from six yards out to cut the lead to 8-6 with 45seconds left in the half. The two-point conversion was no good though, and the Skippers held onto the 8-6 advantage.

Rockland ended Cohasset's next possession with an interception on a bomb to stick close heading into the second half, and that proved to be huge.

Rockland struck first in the second half when Ricky Witt connected on a 24-yard field goal to cap a drive that started at the Bulldog 34 and took up more than eight minutes.

Rockland went strictly with the run on the drive, using Fitzgerald and Driscoll, aided by two Skipper offside penalties to notch the field goal and a 9-6 lead.

Cohasset ended the third quarter on a good note with a 38-yard run by Flibotte to the Rockland 22 just one play after a Jeff Cavanaro to Jack Carrier pass for a first down on a third-and-14 play.

The Skippers couldn't take advantage though, and Rockland took over at their own 25 when Cohasset was stopped on fourth-and 10.

Rockland went right back to the run, but wound up punting after three plays and the Skippers took over at the Rockland 49 with just less than six minutes to play.

Cohasset moved the ball to the 31 after converting a fourth-and 1 with a pass to Mahoney, but the Rockland defense stood tall, stuffing Flibotte and Jake Kissick for no gain to take control at the Rockland 30 with 3:04 left to play.

Rockland was able to get two big first downs in the closing minutes to run the clock and notch the win.

There's still hope for Cohasset to get to the playoffs though.

Rockland still has games with Abington and East Bridgewater on the schedule, with East Bridgewater the Thanksgiving Day game, where things are always unpredictable.

The Skippers, meanwhile, have a week off to prepare for their next game next Friday at Mashpee.

At halftime, Cohasset had the entire senior class on the field for Homecoming.

Rachel Fredey was named Homecoming queen and Mike Monaco was the king.

FIELD HOCKEY

Cohasset field hockey still unbeaten

Skippers extend streak to 14

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Score another for the Cohasset field hockey team.

Cohasset extended their unbeaten start to 14 games on Wednesday with a 2-0 win at Norwell to improve to 12-0-2 (9-0-2 South Shore League).

Kelsey Erler scored the eventual game-winner just three minutes into the game and Olivia Murphy added a clincher later.

Cohasset has one game left in the South Shore League, a make-up game against Mashpee.

Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano said that's an important one.

"I really want the girls to play one game at a time and complete it," she said, adding that her team's streak is something new for many of the players. "A lot of the girls were on the team that was 2-13-2 a few years ago. They know not to take anything for granted, but with this streak, there is a lot of pressure to keep winning. There's no shame in losing, but it is fun to win."

> There's no shame in losing, but it is fun to win."
> Cohasset field hockey coach Laura Giuliano on her team's 12-0-2 start.

Giuliano, understandably is hesitant to talk about going unbeaten, especially with games against strong Patriot League teams like Hingham and Scituate left on the schedule.

Cohasset beat Scituate at home earlier in the season in what was a pretty physical game. The Sailors have been playing some of their best games of the year over the last few weeks and made the MIAA Tournament on Monday.

In the Norwell win, Giuliano pointed out several players who made big contributions.

"Eliza Kinnealey was outstanding on defense," she said. "She made some major plays for us. She was unbelievable. Midfielders Kelsey Erler and Sage Stebbins also had great games. They didn't let a ball past the 25. Caitlin DeAngelis had a great game. She was so skillful wit the stick and Olivia Murphy scored our second goal."

Sci-Coh alum Gillan inspires in Scituate

By Dick Trust
CORRESPONDENT

The cake must have been 3 feet across, half of it vanilla and half of it chocolate. On top was the inscription, "Happy Birthday, Big G."

Big G is Mike Gillan, a former Scituate-Cohasset Youth Football player and senior on the Scituate High School football team, and the entire squad – 40, maybe 45 guys with an appetite from here to the North River – managed to squeeze into the Gillan home on Sept. 28 and help Mike celebrate his 18th birthday.

"The whole team was shooting Nerf guns at each other. Mike was having a great time," said fellow senior Ryan McCarthy, a left guard and defensive end and close friend of Gillan since childhood.

"Mike loved the party," McCarthy said. "His parents were nervous at the start because they didn't know how many people would show up, but the whole team did come. They ended up having to order like 10 more pizzas after everyone showed up, and it was 17 pizzas by the time it was over. We had Buffalo chicken calzone for everybody, too."

Mike Gillan is not big for a high school football player. He's 5-foot-7, but a solid, broad-shouldered 165 pounds.

Registration now open for the fall edition of the Kids Fitness Challenge

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation has opened registration for the 2010 fall edition of the Kids Fitness Challenge held November 15-19. Principals, physical education and health teachers at elementary and middle schools across the commonwealth are encouraged to sign up to take part in the Challenge as valuable cash grants will be awarded to selected participating schools.

"We understand the obstacles that physical education and health departments face today as a result of budget limitations and cutbacks," said Peter Cohenno, program director. "While spreading the message of good health and the positive benefits of physical activities remains the focus of the Kids Fitness Challenge, the subsequent grants are an added benefit that can go a long way to enhance the athletic experiences of the students at the winning schools."

In June, in excess of 24,000 kids from schools across Massachusetts took part in the spring edition of the Kids Fitness Challenge. Since its inception in the fall of 2006, hundreds of schools and more than 125,000 elementary and middle school kids from Provincetown to Williamstown have participated in the program, making it a true statewide event with more than $14,000 in grants having been distributed.

The Kids Fitness Challenge, presented by the Bay State Games with contributing funds from the Boston Bruins Foundation, is a free program designed exclusively for Massachusetts elementary and middle school students. Participating schools and students engage in a 30 minute segment of physical activity from November 15-19. Schools can also use an existing program or event, such as a field day, that is scheduled to be held in the weeks preceding or proceeding the dates of the Challenge. The only constraints are that the students must be aware that they are participating in the Kids Fitness Challenge, must meet the 30 minute activity requirement, and have 100 percent student participation. Following the event, a teacher or principal needs only to contact the Bay State Games office to report that the Challenge has been completed, and the school will then be entered into a drawing to win one of four $500 grants. The grant is awarded to the winning school to support health and physical education programs.

To register online, to receive a brochure or for more general information about the Kids Fitness Challenge, please visit baystategames.org, call the Bay State Games office at (781) 932-6555 or e-mail Peter Cohenno at peter@baystategames.org.

South Shore High School Cross-Country poll

(Last week's ranking in parentheses)

Boys Top 5	Girls Top 5
1. Pembroke (1)	1. Weymouth (1)
2. Weymouth (2)	2. Notre Dame (2)
3. Marshfield (4)	3. Hingham (3)
4. Norwell (NR)	4. Pembroke (4)
5. Duxbury (3)	5. Norwell (NR)

This Week's High 5

Steve Sollowin (Weymouth) The first of three local performers to take top five places in the Championship race at Brown, Sollowin also raced tooth-and-nail with runner-up John Murray of Shrewsbury, finishing in 15:10.4, the 5th fastest time ever run by a Mass. Runner at Goddard Park. Neither Sollowin nor Murray could hold pace with St. Benedict's Edward Cheserek, the Kenyan phenom dominating in NJ, but both held their own and clearly did the state of Massachusetts proud. The Weymouth team took 8th, and senior (and fellow-captain) Steve Connolly (40th, 16:37) was a big reason why.

Joel Hubbard (Marshfield) Right on Sollowin's heels was Hubbard, whose 4th place run in 15:18 was another in a long line of eye-opening performances from the Ram junior. Teammate Kevin Thomas (10th, 15:34) wasn't far behind, making the Rams a strong candidate in the DIII EMass race. Perhaps more importantly, the rest of the squad looked very strong in the Varsity Boys DII race. Nathan Robinson, Craig McLaughlin, and Craig Decesare led the way to a 15th place finish, which would have been closer to 4th had the twin towers joined them in that race.

Wesley Gallagher (Pembroke) Rounding out the top 5, Gallagher was only a tenth of a second slower than Hubbard, but his bus ride home was probably a little sweeter than either of his local competitors. Pembroke's boys took home the team title once again, this time handily beating Sachem East (NY) and Brookline, perhaps the best DI team in Mass. Gallagher, as he has most of the season, led the way, but Brendan Adams (13th, 15:42), Ryan Kelley (15th, 15:42), and Ryan Moran (26th, 16:20) held down the fort for the big repeat win. This could be the last time Pembroke is challenged until the Nike XC Regionals in New York on November 27th.

Bridget Jaklitsch (Weymouth) What a performance. Last year, a healthy Jaklitsch raced to a solid 19:12 time in the DII girls varsity race at Brown. This year, in question for much of the season, her health seems to have turned the corner, as indicated by a 10th place 18:45 run in the Championship race, only 3 seconds behind teammate Jill Corcoran. Jaklitsch looks poised to give Weymouth the 1-2 punch it needs to take on the state's best, which it already started doing by distancing itself from 5th place Bishop Feehan by 30 points.

Kelsey Whitaker (Notre Dame) I mentioned Whitaker in my preseason preview as someone to watch this season, and hopefully, people have started to. Steady all fall, Kelsey led NDA at the CM Invitational at Franklin Park, taking 6th in the DI race in 19:46, the 10th fastest time of the day. NDA split their forces between CMI and the MSTCA freshman-sophomore invite in Barnstable, which their combined freshman-sophomore team won easily over Norwell, thanks to 2-3 finishes from Olivia Lanagan and Clara King.

Meet to Watch (Week 8):

Hingham at Whitman-Hanson(Tuesday, October 19)- This is how the regular season is supposed to end. While the boys meet should be a great matchup, I'm more excited about two girls teams with matching 8-0 records battling it out for the Patriot League Keenan Division title and the bragging rights that come with an undefeated regular season. In this corner, Whitman-Hanson. A team that graduated its top three runners, and did nothing but reload. Led by twin sophomores Abby and Rachel Baker, the Panthers took 6th at the DII Varsity girls race at Brown over the weekend, and saw freshman Jenny Dimascio join Casey Egan and Kaley Mientkiewicz, creating a solid pack. And in this corner, Hingham, a team that has quietly crept into the conversation as an All State contender on the backs of Julie McConville, Alyssa Lumbert, and Sam Pinkham. McConville won the race, but Whitman-Hanson won the meet 21-37.

Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings Week 6

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

The second half of the season always brings out the best in soccer teams. It's like baseball players in a contract year; they're out there giving it their all day in and day out. For most teams in the top six, they've already qualified for the tournament; the rest are close to it. We had a lot of change this week, including a new No. 1 on the girls' side and a new entry on the boys' side. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Oct. 17.

BOYS

1. Hingham – Two up, two down for the Harbormen last week, granted the two wins did come against weak teams. But two results in two games is what the Harbormen wanted and what they got. It's also what they needed to get into the tournament and remain perfect on the season.

2. Weymouth – The Weymouth boys drew twice last week, once against Walpole, a team ranked in the top 20, and the other against Newton North, a team that had won five straight coming into the game. That's good enough to keep the Wildcats at No. 2.

3. Norwell – The Clippers have all but wrapped up at least a share of the South Shore League. Last week, they picked up a win in the conference and another 0-0 non-league tie against Hanover, a team they knocked off the Inside the 6 chart a week ago.

4. Duxbury – Consider this: the Dragons played four games last week and went 2-1-1, and this was without one of their starting backs. They also lost one of their best midfielders to a broken leg to start the week, and they still managed to put together an impressive string of favorable results.

5. Silver Lake – The Lakers got the respect they deserved after picking up a pair of wins last week to improve to 7-2-4 and 7-0-4 in the Patriot League. One of those wins came against Inside the 6's No. 4 Duxbury. Come tournament time, this is going to be a very dangerous team.

6. Cohasset – Sure, one could argue that the Skippers played two bottom of the South Shore League table teams last week, but they outscored their opponents, 9-1, extending their winning streak to three after a two-game slide. They also fared far better than any of the bubble teams.

On the bubble: Marshfield, Braintree, Hanover, and Carver

Week five rankings: 1. Hingham, 2. Weymouth, 3. Norwell, 4. Duxbury, 5.Cohasset, 6. Hanover

GIRLS

1. Duxbury – For the outsiders looking in, those who may not have known all that much about the Lady Dragons, they now know this: with two wins last week, Duxbury extended its unbeaten streak to eight. The girls came back from an early two-goal deficit to beat Silver Lake, a team that had only lost to Canton, Whitman-Hanson, and Duxbury.

2. Weymouth – Making the biggest jump of the week, the Lady Wildcats went from No. 4 to the No. 2 slot, largely due to their 1-1 tie against the No. 1 team in the state, Whitman-Hanson. The Weymouth girls ended Whitman-Hanson's 11-0 start. They also picked up a pair of 2-1 wins (Newton North and Walpole).

3. Marshfield – The Lady Rams have lost a step over the past two weeks, scoring only one goal in their last four games. Last week, they were held scoreless twice and also lost their first game of the year, a 1-0 defeat to a mid-table Sandwich team.

4. Plymouth South – The best girls soccer team in Plymouth South High School history picked up a pair of wins last week, including one against Falmouth, a team the South girls drew against earlier this season.

5. Plymouth North – A 1-2-1 start is now a distant memory. The Lady Eagles extended their unbeaten streak to seven, and in the process tied Marshfield, a team that held down the No. 1 Inside the 6 spot for the past five weeks.

6. Silver Lake – The Lady Lakers went 1-2 last week, but a very deceiving 1-2. Their two losses came against Canton, one of the best teams in the Hockomock League, and Duxbury, the No. 9 team in the state. In the Duxbury match, Silver Lake stunned the Lady Dragons by taking an early two-goal lead before Duxbury came back to win.

On the bubble: Pembroke, Norwell, Hingham, Rockland and Carver

Week five rankings: 1. Marshfield, 2. Duxbury, 3. Plymouth South, 4. Weymouth, 5. Plymouth North, 6. Silver Lake

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@cnc.com.

Sci-Coh alum Gillan inspires in Scituate

FROM GILLAN, PAGE 17

He has autism, a high-functioning form diagnosed as Pervasive Developmental Disorder. His verbal and socialization skills are limited; he communicates better through the written word. He's a National Honor Society student who's good in math and at the computer.

He has slow reactions for an athlete, but he makes up for it in determination and his love for football. He loves to play it; he's even fond of the long, after-school practices that try the patience of his peers. Above all, he loves being part of a team.

"The best days of his life are when he's on the football field, either playing or practicing. That's when he's the happiest," his mother, Alice, said.

"Having Mike on the team, he's like a point of inspiration," said McCarthy, whose parents and those of Gillan arranged play dates for then-tots Mike and Ryan that was the genesis of their friendship.

"He comes to practice and works just as hard (as anyone else)," McCarthy said. "He gets to be part of a team, which means everything to him. Everyone on the team is a friend. Football is a great sport for camaraderie. We're out practicing longer than anyone else . . . we spend a lot of time together."

That's important for Gillan, whose social life would be minimal, his mother said, were it not for football and the ties that it binds.

Along with McCarthy, Gillan's closest buds on the team are quarterback and co-captain Tyler Park and wide receiver Casey Burns. They were all part of a group of kids who played while in the eighth grade on a combined Scituate-Cohasset youth football team that won a Super Bowl under coach Cole Hawkins. That group, known hereabouts as the Band of Brothers, has grown into seniors.

"He's been playing football since eighth grade, and he's gotten tougher ever since," McCarthy said. "I've seen him take some hits in a game that I wouldn't want to take and he gets right back up. He loves all the practices. The other kids are complaining about them, saying how hard practice is. He never says anything."

When he was in seventh grade, Mike had told his parents that he wanted to play on that Scituate-Cohasset football team with his friend, Ryan, when they got to eighth grade.

"The days he plays football are the best days of his life."
Alice Gillan, on her son, Mike

"I told him, 'You can't play football because you can get hurt,' and that 'opponents would be uncomfortable with you playing because they wouldn't want to hurt you,' " his mother recalled. " 'It is not a good sport for you.' "

He might be deliberate in his speech, but Mike Gillan knows how to get his message across. Toward the end of seventh grade, on April 28, 2005, Mike wrote a letter to his father, Al, professing his wish to play football. Following are portions of that letter:

Every fall, football season begins. People go to the games and watch it on TV. They cheer for their favorite teams. I am one of the people, but this fall I would like for it to be different. I want to play on a football team . . . it is one of my favorite sports . . . it is fun . . . it has lots of action.

My friend Ryan has been playing football for a while. I have been playing on a team with him before. I would like to play on a team with him again.

I think I am good at football. I am strong because I have been exercising and I go to the fitness club. I scored 2 touchdowns in gym. I am a fast runner . . .

It would be great if I could play football this fall. I would work hard to help the team win. I know it would be lots of fun.

The letter did it.

"How could it not?" Alice Gillan said in retrospect. "I know how hard it was for him to write the letter. It was an incredible task. I could see how important it was for him to play football. How could you say no?"

Gillan was given the green light. That turned on a light inside of Mike, gave his life new meaning. The Scituate-Cohasset Super Bowl experience led to his high school freshman football team involvement and the three varsity seasons that have followed.

"I thought it would be a negative environment," Mike's mother said. "I didn't think anything good would come out of it. To see how wrong I was . . . It has made such a difference in his life. He's a better student because he plays football. He's more together. It's the whole package. He's surrounded by the right people – the Band of Brothers, the coaches . . . these kids really get it.

"People don't know how hard things are for Mike," Alice Gillan said. "He has difficulty with expressive language, with motor planning, reaction speed, so football was out of what I considered the realm of what he should be doing because of his disabilities.

"When I first realized how disabled he was, your heart kind of stops and you say, 'How am I ever going to raise this child?' Then you realize there are going to be people to help you in unexpected ways, people outside of your family, some of them strangers.

"These teenaged boys are great examples of that. I don't think most people look at teenaged boys as heroes, but in my heart that's what they are, especially the seniors. They've all been wonderful to him, but especially Ryan, Tyler and Casey."

The reality is, Mrs. Gillan said, "The team needs to be winning by a certain amount for Mike to play, so it makes them work even harder because they realize they can do something even greater and that would be to make sure that Mike gets to step on the field."

Gillan gets into about three or four games a year, usually as a defensive tackle, but in this season of tight games, he hasn't played yet. Third-year Scituate head coach Herb Devine, whose Sailors (4-2) have five games remaining, assures that Mike Gillan, No. 15 in your program, will see action.

"If the game calls for it, we'll get him in," Devine said. "Mike has earned it. He's a great kid, been part of the program since I've been here. It's great to see the kids around him get excited, and Mike is excited about being part of the team. That's all he wants. He doesn't want any special privileges. He's one of the guys and that's how we treat him. I don't think Mike would have it any other way."

Devine recalled that in his first year with Scituate High, "I put him in a jayvee game at Duxbury. It was my first experience with putting Mike in and I didn't know the procedure. He went in and the play came right to him. And he was right there.

"I turned to the kids and asked them 'What do we do?' They said, 'Let him play.' The next play he's in there, his body's in there, bouncing around, and he gets right back to the huddle. He was just one of the guys out there playing.

"For his parents to see that, and for me as a coach to learn a little more about Mikey, it was great. I learned right away that he's part of the team and we can put him in there and he's going to do what he can."

In a recent Athlete Q & A with Tyler Park in The Scituate Mariner, the Sailors' quarterback said his most underrated teammate "is, without a doubt, Mike Gillan. The thing that makes Mike so special is that he never complains about anything. He might not (play) as much as some people would like (him) to, but he is willing to go out and work Monday through Thursday every week. There is no excuse for any other person to quit. Mike is the guy our entire team rallies around. He is one of the main reasons why our team works so hard and has the results that we have."

Said Devine, "These guys respect Mikey for coming out there, knowing he's not going to play much. Mikey's the epitome of what you want in a player. He comes out to practice and help the team in any way. He's there, on the sidelines, Friday nights or Saturdays. He's a big part of our program. Guys like Tyler recognize Mike Gillan and that makes me feel good as a coach."

Gillan has 12-year-old twin siblings, Tommy and Maggie. Tommy plays Scituate-Cohasset football, Maggie soccer, basketball and lacrosse.

They have an older sister, Katie, 20, who captained the Scituate High field hockey and softball teams. She's now a junior at Providence College, studying elementary special education.

College is ahead for Mike, too. He wants to do something in computers, perhaps graphic design or another sector in the field. UMass-Dartmouth, which offers much of what Gillan wants, could ultimately be his choice.

Mike has achieved so much already, on and off the football field. Now he's preparing to tackle new challenges that will take him where he wants to go next. As was the case at his 18th birthday party, he just might be able to have his cake and eat it, too.

FIELD HOCKEY

Cohasset field hockey still unbeaten

For Giuliano, getting an early lead was nice.

"It's always better to play a goal ahead," she said. "But it's still nervous. It doesn't take much for one ball to get down and take a bad bounce. You can't get overly confident."

Cohasset qualified for the South Sectionals last week, and could be the South Shore League champs as well.

They have already had some big accomplishments, including beating Harwich and East Bridgewater.

Along with Murphy and Erler, who have provided a solid scoring touch, the defense has played well and had the benefit of a healthy Whitney Jaffe in the net.

Jaffe has allowed six goals all season, four in a 4-4 tie with Harwich. Overall, she's only allowed goals in three of 14 games.

"She has been tested," Giuliano said. "The defense has been strong, but when she's had shots, she's made the plays."

LIFE AT CHS

NATALIE DIGNAM

Some new faces are roaming the halls and getting a taste (literally, because they of course attended international club!) of American life.

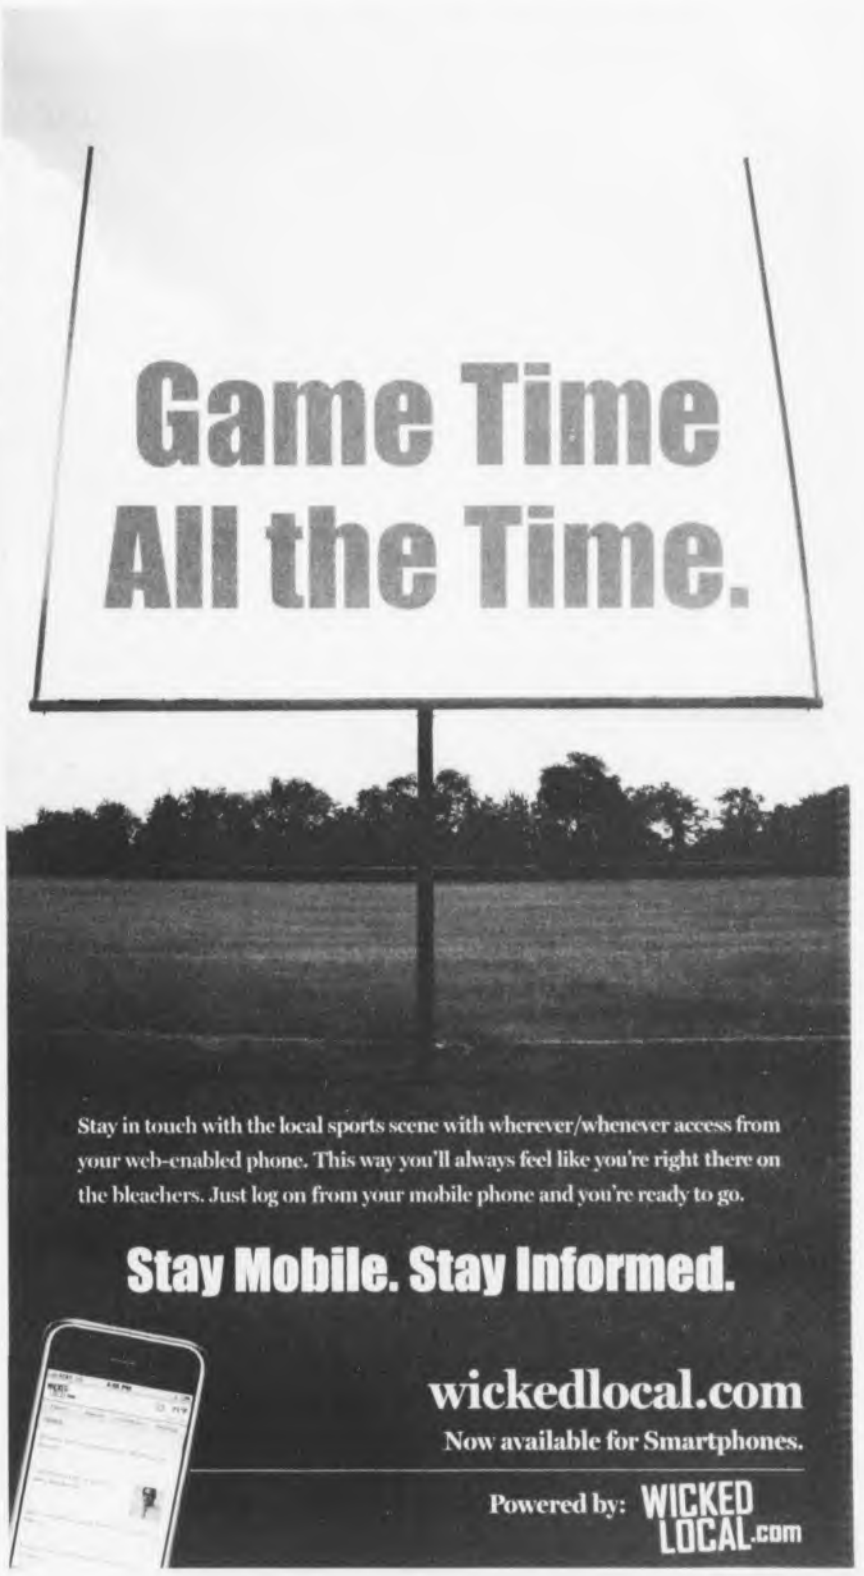
Last week CHS showed their spirit and ended on a great note with their support for the Skippers on Friday. Although the boys lost to Rockland, Highlighter Homecoming was a huge success!

This week CHS went international and welcomed the French exchange students. Some new faces are roaming the halls and getting a taste (literally, because they of course attended international club!) of American life. CHS students have been exceedingly welcoming and have mixed well with the exchange students at in-school breakfasts and independently organized social events outside of school. So far, the students have visited New York City, Plymouth Plantation, and soon they will receive a tour of Boston. Hopefully they will enjoy the remainder of their stay in Cohasset!

SEPAC to present workshop on socially challenged child

Their different thinking style accounts for many of the difficulties parents and teachers have in understanding and assisting these often confusing children.

Cohasset Special Education Parents Advisory Council will presents a program titled "Understanding Socially Challenged Children – and how to relate to quirky and unique individuals." This workshop is to assist the community and teachers in better understanding the socially challenged child and is open to everyone in the community, not just parents, in order to create understanding and inclusion in all activities.



The workshop will take place at Paul Pratt Library in Cohasset on Tuesday, Nov.2. Coffee and bagels will be served at 9 a.m., and the workshop, presented by Lynne Mitchell, will take place 9:30 to 11:15 a.m.

Mitchell is a clinical social worker with more than 20 years experience working with children, teens, schools and families. She has designed and taught numerous classes for parents of children and teens with AS. She has also provided training in how to best meet the needs of students with AS for many school districts in Massachusetts. She is a frequent speaker at the Asperger's Association of New England and at workshops and conferences throughout the area. Mitchell is the mother of four, including a young adult with AS.

Students with social challenges often have a difficult time fitting in with their peer group. The teachers and parents of these children are usually at a loss as to how to teach the ability to be friends, fit into a group and understand how others see you. Their different thinking style accounts for many of the difficulties parents and teachers have in understanding and assisting these often confusing children.

This workshop will focus on three main ways most socially challenged kids think that is different from the rest of their family/class. Remember, "These children are different not less," said Temple Grandin, a highly regarded and socially challenged woman herself. Through a better understanding of the child's thinking process, parents and teachers, as well as friends of these children, will have the ability to address the child's needs in more effective ways, thus helping them meet their often remarkable potential. "Cohasset Special Education Parent Advisory Council's mission is to help foster an understanding through education between the community, the schools and families whose children may require more assistance. Just as you would learn a little about insulin or peanut allergies if your child's friend was a diabetic or had food allergies, we encourage you to learn some about socially challenged children in order to make them feel welcome in your home when it's time for a play date (or dating). This workshop is an excellent way to begin that process," said Diane Herth, president of Cohasset SEPAC.

Cohasset Special Education Parents Advisory Council's website is updated frequently. Visit it at www.cohassetSEPAC.org for more information on upcoming events around the South Shore or to find links.

Anatomy of a triumph

Standing 'O' for Atlantic Symphony on opening night

ATLANTIC OVERTURES

ROY HARRIS

For the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra, last Saturday's 2010-2011 season curtain-raiser met the classic test of a triumphal opening night: an enthusiastic standing ovation from the large Duxbury Performing Arts Center audience. After an evening of musical brilliance, it was the sparkling finale of Dvorak's "New World Symphony" that had brought the crowd to its feet.

But for me the moment that stood out was earlier, and much quieter. Halfway through Aaron Copland's "Appalachian Spring," with orchestra members slightly swaying to the lilting dance of the score, suddenly the mood changed. Under conductor Jin Kim's baton, the audience held its breath with anticipation, and the Quaker "Simple Gifts" theme emerged. No recorded performance – no matter how glowing – could deliver the feel of audience and live orchestra, experiencing this music together.

A simple gift, indeed.

And yet, complex. So many elements contributed to that one moment of revelation (as well as to that standing-O, of course.) Before the performance itself, the hours of rehearsing, certainly. But those musicians, gathering from all over the Boston area, had been escorted to the hall by dozens of ASO Fanfare! volunteers, and then served a feast from the ASO's Whole Foods Market sponsor. Meanwhile, staff members, led by new executive director Ronald Vigue, conducted their own behind-the-scenes concert before the first note was played, creating a party atmosphere in the lobby.

And who paid for all this? The ticket-buying audience, yes. But ticket sales – kept to a low $35 for adults for the ASO's biggest performances – generate less than a third of the cost. That's where corporate sponsors come in. As the concertgoers filed out, still warm from their ovation, they showed appreciation of a different sort for them. Signs identified the evening's three featured companies sponsoring at the generous "Ovation" level: Hingham Institution for Savings, Derby Street Shoppes, and Norwell's Bergsten Music, a supplier of musical instruments and concert support services.

Behind each corporate sponsor, of course, is an individual leader who sees the need for regional classical music — and who cares what would happen if community support flagged, and the music had to stop. So representatives were there in the lobby, talking about how much their association with the orchestra meant for their businesses.

Beyond ticket sales and "Ovation" support, the vital remainder of the ASO's funding comes from the donations of dedicated music-lovers – businesses and individuals, with the occasional major philanthropist among them – all of whom know very well the value of having a high-level, professional orchestra right here on the South Shore.

Next up for the ASO, an "Insights" presentation by Music Director Kim and famed program annotator Steve Ledbetter, Nov. 9 at 7:30 p.m. at Linden Ponds in Hingham. The fall schedule continues on Sunday, Nov. 14, with a 4 p.m. "Musical Friends" performance at the charming James Library in Norwell. It features flutist Jessica Lizak, clarinetist Kai-yun Lu, and cellist Su-Hsien Hsu, in a program designed to introduce children to the fun of playing music together.

ASO orchestral performances return on Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 4 and 5: the traditional "Joyful Noise" concerts, first at Thayer Academy Center for the Arts, Braintree, and then at Cohasset's St. Anthony's Church.

If you have yet to experience the ASO, these are great opportunities to give your regional professional orchestra a try. For the growing band of ASO regulars, meanwhile, it will be time to feel again that sense of oneness with what may now seem to be "your personal orchestra."

That special moment in "Appalachian Spring" is perhaps a small thing, compared to the educational value of the ASO for students, or the joy it brings to thousands during the season.

But for me, last Saturday, that moment was anything but a simple gift.

Roy Harris of Hingham is serving as co-president of the board of the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra, along with Vicki Quinn. For further information, visit www.atlanticsymphony.org, or contact ASO Executive Director Ronald Vigue at 781-331-3600.

Composing a celebration of music

CONSERVATORY NOTES

COURTESY PHOTO

John Kramer, a composer and pianist, has composed a new piece for the South Shore Conservatory's 40th anniversary.

I am honored and thrilled to have been asked to compose a new piece for the South Shore Conservatory's 40th anniversary. This was an exciting challenge for me, as the request was to incorporate a symphony orchestra, chorus, soloists and rock band into one piece. I wanted to create a work that would reflect the breadth of musical offerings available at the Conservatory.

I first set about looking for appropriate text, something that would reflect the mission of the Conservatory and the passion for music that it enables and encourages. Many poems later it occurred to me to have the Conservatory or, more specifically, its students, staff and faculty write the text for me. Thus was born "Music Is…" A mass invitation was sent to anyone associated with the Conservatory, to complete that phrase, and the submissions piled up quickly. "Music is memories, music is my passion, music is a constant companion, and music is doughnuts you can hear" are a few examples of the more than 50 entries I received.

I then sorted the text by theme, rhyme and number of syllables and got to writing. My idea for the piece was to start softly with the orchestra and chorus, and build the music up toward a climax. The music would then cut to the rock band section — this could be imagined as a scene change in a movie — and after that experience return to the quietude of the opening music. As you might imagine, the musical choice influences the text choice and vice versa. "Music is peace" works better as a gentle opening or closing idea then it does as a part of the upbeat rock out section. There were, of course, a few places where I felt a complimentary idea needed to be inserted.

I wanted to create a work that would reflect the breadth of musical offerings available at the Conservatory.

The piece was written mostly in the month of August. After the framework for the piece was established there was quite a bit to do to orchestrate it. Some melodies might sound better with flute than oboe, or perhaps the horn section can be employed for extra punch. This is always interesting work, but you do wish that you could hear it right away, just to be sure that you made the best decision.

Now we have begun rehearsals and it is tremendously exciting to have so many involved in one's own creation. There are a number of steps to the rehearsal process. Individuals are learning their parts and sections are getting together. The orchestra, chorus and rock band parts all meet independently first before getting together collectively. I always love this part of the process. My creative work has mostly ended and I rely on the creative energies of others not just to perform my work, but to breathe life into it and make it real.

I invite you to hear the premiere of "Music Is…" on Nov. 3, 7:30 p.m., at the Duxbury Performing Arts Center. This celebratory piece is part of the Bay Youth Symphony (BaYS) concert that evening.

For more information, visit www.sscmusic.org.

John Kramer is a composer and pianist whose music has been performed in and around Boston, New York, Chicago, Michigan, Pennsylvania and throughout New England. He has taught at South Shore Conservatory since 1998.

WANTED
30 People

30 People Who Have Difficulty Hearing, Especially In Noisy Situations, To Evaluate New and Exciting Open Ear Digital Technology, Risk Free!

Mass Audiology will have Hearing Instrument Specialists available to perform comprehensive hearing evaluations at no charge for the first 30 qualified callers to determine if you're a candidate for this new ultra-modern, open-ear MXW hearing system. Applicants selected will be asked to give their opinion on these remarkable new hearing devices for 2 weeks. These state-of-the-art instruments solve a really big problem by amplifying high frequencies without plugging up the ear canal as in traditional hearing aids, and is virtually invisible when worn. The devices will be fit and digitally programmed on the spot in one of our offices.

Participants who wish to keep their instruments can do so at a tremendous savings due to their participation.

However, if you feel the hearing aids do not improve your hearing, simply return them. The 30 participants also receive free batteries for the evaluation period. A very small, fully refundable security deposit will be required.

Candidates will be selected by October 30th

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
Nov. 1, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Deciding to work out that pesky problem (even though you might have been bored, bored, bored with it) should be paying off right about now. Expect to hear some very welcome news very soon.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Unexpected news might cause you to rethink a previous conclusion. Don't be bullheaded and try to bluff it out. Make the needed change, and then take a bow for your objectivity.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Money-matters should be considered as you continue to work out your holiday plans. This is a good time to scout out discounts before demand for them outstrips their availability.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A calm period early in the week helps you complete most, if not all, of your unfinished tasks. A new project appears by midweek, and this one could carry some big career potential.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Positive results from recent ventures continue to pump up those self-esteem levels, making you Fabulous Felines feel you can tackle any challenge anyone wants to throw at you.

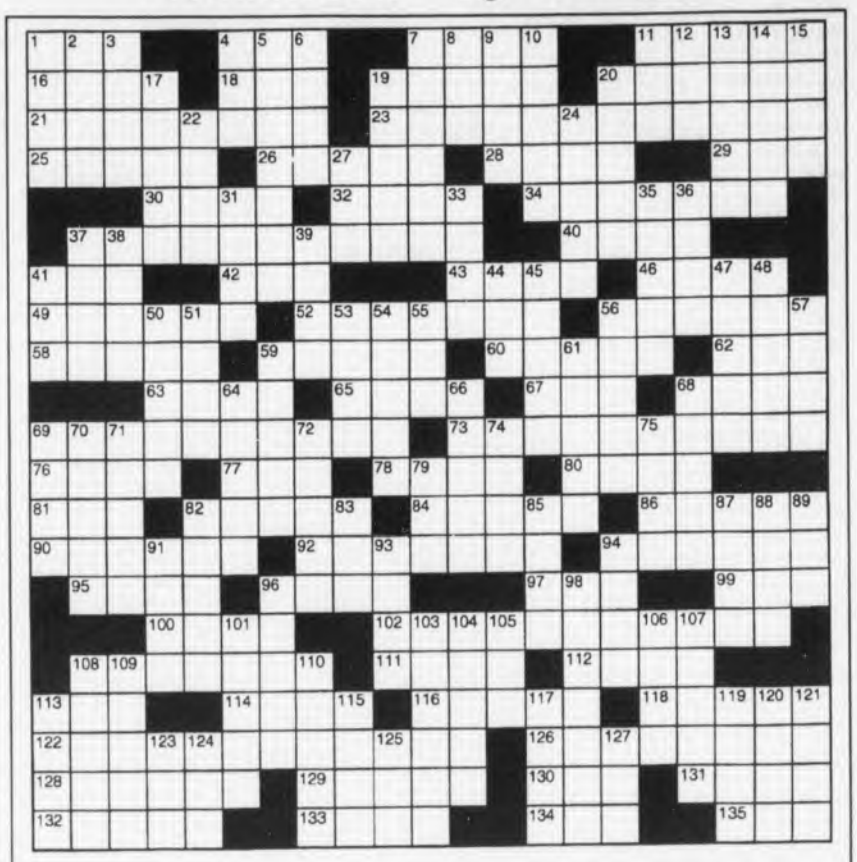
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Family and friends might feel neglected because of your almost total focus on a project. Try to rework your schedule so you can have time for both your loved ones and your work.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Don't be surprised if you suddenly hear from someone from your past who wants to contact you about the possibility of renewing a long-dormant (if not dead) relationship.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to check over what went right and what went wrong with recent efforts. This can provide valuable lessons for projects that will be coming up soon.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Dealing with people who feel they're always right about everything might be a problem for some. But the savvy Archer should be able to deflate their oversize egos.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This week favors a balance between the demands of your work and your need for fun timeouts. Taking breaks helps restore and keep your energy levels high.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) There could be an occasional setback in what you're working on. But look at them as lessons on how to do better as you move along. More supporters turn up to cheer you on.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Although a more positive aspect influences this week's course, you still need to be sure that those who will work with you have no reason to work against you. Good luck.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

This is an opportunity to explore the history of the Church, the richness of spiritual teachings through Scripture, the relevance and daily application of spirituality, its emotional connections and the place of sacred music in personal and communal relationships to God.

The Abbey provides a spiritual environment to learn, discuss and reflect on the depth of one's spiritual roots. The focus of these Spiritual Formation gatherings is to gain insight into one's own spiritual identity today, create or enhance inner spiritual awareness, and seek knowledge not available during one's early years. Glastonbury Abbey offer courses, lectures and retreats to deepen knowledge of theology and sacred scripture, and to provide opportunities for personal spiritual growth.

The following talks and discussion will be presented by the monks and laypersons in the community of Glastonbury Abbey:

- Br. David Coakley, OSB, "Holy Clamor and Sacred Song: Our Emotions, Our Inhibitions and Our God," will take place Tuesday, Feb. 1, 7:30 to 9 p.m.; or Thursday, Feb. 3, 9:30 to 11 a.m.

Suggested donation is $20 per class.

History meets art: See the world in watercolor

New England Watercolor Society celebrates 125th anniversary in America's Hometown

By Tamson W. Burgess
TBURGESS@CNC.COM

Water put Plymouth on the map almost 400 years ago, when the Pilgrims sailed across the Atlantic to create a new life in a new world.

Water allowed the design of the busy seaport that helped keep America's Hometown thriving for centuries.

And that same water brought here wave after wave of new pilgrims from around the globe, who added the depth, diversity and vibrant color that has kept Plymouth vital and central to the life and times of Southeastern Massachusetts and beyond.

The New England Watercolor Society (NEWS) is now putting Plymouth on the map for artists and art lovers alike.

The Society, founded in 1885, will celebrate its 125th anniversary, beginning next week, with a special Members Invitational Exhibit featuring the best works of generations of watercolor artists. And it's chosen to hold this historic and prestigious event at the Plymouth Center of the Arts, located in a historic building just a few hundred yards from Plymouth Harbor, Plymouth Rock and the very street where the Pilgrims carved out their new settlement.

The by-invitation-only exhibit will feature 142 watercolor paintings by past and present members. The "Signature Members" invited to participate – or the families and galleries that currently own the art – were asked to submit a personal favorite and/or an award-winning piece, creating a significant temporary collection of the best of the best.

In addition to generations of members, the exhibit will honor the Society's place in history as one of the oldest and most prestigious watercolor societies in America.

COURTESY PHOTOS

"West 14th St." by Pembroke resident Becky Haletky.

The free exhibit will run from Oct. 20 through Nov. 14. The public is also invited to a reception to be held from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday, Oct 23, featuring acoustic jazz by None of the Above.

The following weekend, at 1 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 30, Scituate artist Nancy Sargent Howell and Plymouth's own Andrew Kusmin, both past presidents of NEWS, will offer a gallery talk, and at 1 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 7, Frederick Kubitz will provide a painting demonstration.

"The New England Watercolor Society is the organization to which New England artists, especially, aspire to become members," Kusmin explained during a recent interview at the Plymouth Center for the Arts. Kusmin is the longtime president of the Plymouth Guild for the Arts, which owns and operates the Center, and served as president of NEWS from 1997 to 2002. For Kusmin, who worked for years as a dentist before making the transition to life as a full-time artist, membership in NEWS holds special meaning.

"In my case, it made me say, 'I am an artist,'" Kusmin explained.

These days, most states or regions have a watercolor society, he added, but NEWS is one of the oldest. To become a member, an artist must have three pieces of art accepted into four of NEWS' juried shows (including one biennial national exhibition) within a 10-year span.

When planning began for this special show, Kusmin said, the possibility of holding it in Plymouth spiked interest and then snowballed. Plymouth holds a definitive place in history, he explained, because "everyone knows Plymouth, Mass." And both the long-established Plymouth Guild for the Arts and the 3-year-old Plymouth Center for the Arts share the mission and mandate to bring cultural events to Plymouth that were previously unavailable, he added. Plymouth is also a doorway to the Cape, and holding the NEWS exhibit there is also a nod to the Cape's active art community.

The entire main floor of the art center will be dedicated to the NEWS show, according to the Guild president, including the large Russell Gallery, all three rooms in The Lindens and the length of the connector annex.

"It's a special opportunity to see the works of an earlier generation," Kusmin noted. "Most of them are not displaying anywhere anymore. It's a glimpse of art history that doesn't happen often."

The opportunity to host this anniversary show is both an investment in Plymouth and a gift to the community, Kusmin added, as well as a chance to experience art that would not otherwise be available outside the big cities or in this part of the state.

"Plus, we get to share the gift, the Center and our community with visitors from the rest of New England," he said.

The show opens Wednesday, Oct. 20, and runs through Sunday, Nov. 7. The Center is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and from noon to 4 p.m. Sundays. Kusmin said the Guild also hopes to add some evening hours specifically for this exhibit. The public is also invited to a free reception at the Center from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 23 – a great time to meet some of the artists, he noted.

He and his fellow past president of NEWS, Nancy Sargent Howell, of Scituate, will offer a gallery talk at 1 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 30, and watercolor artist Frederick Kubitz will present a demonstration at 1 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 7. At 5 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 24, Music at the Center will also host a concert, "Fall into Autumn with Smooth Jazz." Tickets are $20, reduced to $18 for seniors and groups of three or more.

"I just want everyone in our part of the state to be aware that a show of this quality – a totally unique show – is happening right here in Plymouth," Kusmin said.

Election Tuesday

Town Clerk expects 50 percent turnout

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A slow return of absentee ballots has Town Clerk Marion Douglas predicting a mediocre turnout of 50 percent.

"I hope I'm really wrong on that and we get more voters," Douglas said.

In the last mid-term election in 2006 a total of 69 percent of registered voters cast ballots. As of Monday afternoon, the Town Clerk's office has sent out 236 absentee ballots and had received 141 back. In 2006, 364 absentee ballots had been returned by Election Day. Absentee ballots are typically a good indicator of voter interest in the election.

"I hope I'm really wrong on that and we get more voters."
— Town Clerk Marion Douglas

"If we get a nice day that might bring out more voters, you never know," Douglas said.

The races for Governor, Congressman and State Representative are among the most heated statewide and locally.

Both precincts (1 and 2) vote at the Town Hall auditorium and polls will be open from 7a.m. to 8p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 2.

There are a total of 5,496 registered voters in Cohasset; of those 1216 are Democrats, 1210 are Republicans and 14 are Libertarian. More than 50 percent (3050 voters) in Cohasset are not enrolled in any political party.

Among key contested races is the race for governor as Democrat Deval Patrick is running against Republican

Griffin closes chapter

Reflects on five years in Cohasset

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Starting Monday, Town Manager Bill Griffin will no longer have to wear a tie to work.

And he's looking forward to that.

Today (Friday) is Griffin's last day in his office overlooking Cohasset Common and marks the end of a 34-year career in town management including a five-year stint as the municipal head of Cohasset.

"I think I was able to restore respect for the town manager position and allow the town to refocus on its priorities."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

From challenges to accomplishments, to long meetings and collaborative processes — a relaxed and reflective Griffin talked about it all when the Mariner sat down with him in his final week.

Griffin, 57, is retiring from public service to begin a new stage in his career. He has spent his entire career in the confines of a town hall. Beginning next week he will find himself as the property manager of a sprawling waterfront condominium community on Buzzards Bay.

"The view from my office won't be as nice as looking out at the Common, but the views from the property are equally as nice," Griffin said, smiling. The new opportunity not only offers the chance to do something different, but also give him more time at home (no night meetings!) with his wife.

Senior Center project maturing

Feasibility study completed

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

After several stops and starts, hurdles and challenges, the new senior center is back on track and ready to move forward. If all goes well, the center could be open by Fall 2012.

A contingent from Elder Affairs was at the Selectmen's meeting on Monday night to offer an update on the project.

"The last time we were hear about six or eight months ago we were met with a lot of questions and, to be honest, we did not have the answers," said John Campbell, president of the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs, a non-profit group dedicated to supporting seniors in town.

Since that time the Council on Elder Affairs has gone out and found the answers to the key questions (see sidebar).

A memorandum of understanding has been signed by the Cohasset Swim Trust and the town to enable the land swap between the two entities. The targeted siting for the new building is adjacent to the swim center parking lot located off Sohier Street.

According to population projections in 2020 one in three residents will be 60 or older.

State legislative approval has been secured to transfer over to the Swim Trust a piece of land controlled by the water commission.

Soil tests, perc tests and a complete feasibility study have been completed.

The result is a fleshed out proposal of a senior center that meets the needs

Different appetites for meals tax

Selectmen support meals tax; restaurant owners do not

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The town might be hungry for additional revenue, but do the voters have the appetite for the local option meals tax?

The question of adding .75 percent tax to the current 6.25 percent state meals tax will be considered on the floor of Special Town Meeting (Monday, Nov. 15).

The Budget Planning Group has debated the meals tax for hours and at the conclusion requested the question be placed before the voters. If the meals tax passes muster at Special Town Meeting it could bring in an additional $35,000 in revenue (four months worth) to this fiscal year's budget. The Board of Selectmen ultimately recommended the meals tax, but the vote was not unanimous.

In separate articles, Town Meeting will consider implementing the local option meals tax and hotels tax. Although the additional taxes have been discussed with the Board of Selectmen leading up to previous town meetings, this is the first time it has appeared on the warrant for citizens' consideration.

Yet, local restaurants are not keen on yet another tax to burden their small business and their customers.

"We know the town needs money, but we just wish there was another way," said Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's Home Presence and president of the Chamber of Commerce. "The meals tax targets a very small group of businesses. I don't think this town wants to penalize them or see them hurt."

Evans said there is a threshold where people might begin to reconsider a dinner out or treat their kids to an ice cream cone.

"These businesses are hanging on and you don't want to do anything that might stop people from patronizing these businesses," Evans said.

Two local restaurant owners said the

We Auto Know

by Gene Smith and Jay Gorman

DISPELLING MILEAGE FALSEHOODS

To get the most mileage out of your vehicle, it may help to dispel some common myths. The first of these involves a comparison between the amount of fuel needed to start a vehicle versus allowing it to idle. Since idling costs a quarter- to a half-gallon of fuel per hour, it pays to turn off any vehicle that is going to sit for more than a couple of minutes. Today's vehicles can be driven seconds after starting. Lastly, it is not true that older vehicles necessarily have worse fuel economy than when they were new, and using high-octane fuel unnecessarily will not improve mileage. As long as an automobile is properly maintained, it should get good fuel mileage.

Of course, we all want to get the best mileage out of our cars - it saves money and the environment. And to do that, you do need a properly tuned car. That's what makes preventative maintenance so vital - to your wallet's health and the planet's health. Come on down for a tune up at ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT today. Our ASE Master-certified technicians will be happy to make sure you're getting your money's worth from every drop of gas you put in your car. Call 781-925-3200 today. We are located at 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.

HINT: According to the Consumer Federation of America, if we achieved a 50-mile-per-gallon car fleet in America, this country could save more oil than the entire proven reserves in the Gulf of Mexico.

Norfolk County quarterly RE report

Foreclosures continue to have an impact on the market. A total of 215 foreclosure deeds were recorded, 94 percent more than last year's quarter.

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reported recently on real estate activity in Norfolk County for the quarter ending Sept. 30.

The Registry's electronic recording program continues to expand with 798 documents electronically recorded by 69 different accounts in the quarter period from July 2010 through September 2010. Total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the quarter stood at just under $1.17 billion. This represents a 13 percent decrease from the comparable period last year.

The total number of 3,478 deeds recorded during the period also decreased though by a smaller margin of 12 percent. This number, however, does reflect closings that occurred in the quarter in response to the first time homebuyer tax credit that expired on Sept. 30. The bulk of the tax driven closings occurred just before the reported quarter started. The average sale price of deeds over $1,000 (both residential and commercial properties) showed an increase to $582,635 up 11 percent over the same quarter in 2009.

Foreclosures continue to have an impact on the market. A total of 215 foreclosure deeds were recorded, 94 percent more than last year's quarter. This substantial increase could be the result of the 2009 moratorium on foreclosure sales. Total document recordings were up 1 percent for the quarter.

The mortgage refinance market showed improvement in response to historically low rates by increasing 21 percent on year to year basis with 10,761 new mortgages being recorded in the quarter. Total mortgage value for the quarter stood at almost $4.1 billion. It is important to note that this total mortgage value amount does not necessarily represent the true increase in indebtedness as some mortgages may be recorded multiple times against different parcels of land, are refinances simply replacing existing debt, or are recorded to secure equity credit lines which may not be drawn to their capacity.

The Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. Hundreds of thousands of Registry land records back to 1793 are already available for online viewing. The online index has grown to include records back to 1920 while the Register continues to expand indexing capacity to include earlier records. The Registry of Deeds can be contacted via telephone at 781-461-6101 or on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Resident recognizes Internet scam before sending check

No money exchanged hands, police said. Craigslist is an online classifieds advertising service.

A 53-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police last Wednesday (Oct. 20) that she had advertised a bedroom set on Craigslist for $700. The buyer said a check would be coming from a relocation company. When the check arrived it was for $2700. Additional emails were exchanged and the seller was told to keep that check but to send a personal check for $2000 to the buyer. The seller recognized the transaction as a scam and notified police. No money exchanged hands, police said. Craigslist is an online classifieds advertising service.

OUI arrest

Police received multiple calls about a 2010 Toyota Corolla being erratically operation on Route 3A southbound on Saturday (Oct. 23) at about 1:25 a.m.

The callers reported the Toyota was "all over the road," police said. Police stopped the car on Locust off Beechwood Street. The 61-year-old Cohasset man, who was driving, failed field sobriety tests and was placed under arrest for operating under the influence of alcohol (second offense); marked lanes violation; and negligent operation.

Suspended license

A 25-year-old Cohasset man was arrested last Wednesday at about 1 p.m. for driving after license suspension after a detail officer spotted him driving a Ford dump truck on Beechwood Street and recognized him as having a suspended license for drug violations, police said. The detail officer pulled the truck over and called for a marked cruiser. Police said the man was towing an unregistered trailer, which had no license plate.

The Cohasset man was charged with operating after license suspension (subsequent offense) and for a number plate violation.

A 61-year-old Hull man, who registered the Cohasset man's dump truck, is being summonsed to court for allowing improper operation of a motor vehicle.

Warrant

At 11:41 a.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 20), police arrested at 24-year-old Weymouth woman, who is a former Cohasset resident, on a default warrant for larceny over $250. A police officer, who was working a detail on Beechwood Street, recognized the woman, who was a passenger in a 2004 Nissan, as having an outstanding warrant. He pulled the car over and asked for a marked cruiser. She was arrested and brought to the station and then taken to Quincy District Court.

Warrant

A 47-year-old Cohasset man was arrested last week on an outstanding warrant for malicious destruction of property over $250, police said. At 5:35 p.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 20), an officer spotted the man, who is known to police, walking on Elm Street at the harbor. The officer stopped the man, confirmed the warrant and made the arrest.

Deceased deer

In response to a complaint, the Environmental Police checked out three men who had been seen loading a dead deer into the back of a pickup truck last Thursday (Oct. 21) at about 1:24 p.m. on Beechwood Street. The caller provided Cohasset police with the plate number and they notified the Environmental Police, as hunting season has not started.

As it turned out, the men were picking up a dead deer that had been struck by a car, police said.

SHS football team

Police investigated a report of about 25-30 boys walking in to the woods off Beechwood Street last Friday (Oct 22) at about 4:41 p.m. As it turned out, the group was the Scituate High football team that had no game and was conducting a team exercise. There was no alcohol and the group was just socializing, police said.

Summons

A 37-year-old Marshfield woman is being summonsed to court for driving an uninsured motor vehicle, police said. A detective ran a random registry check on the plate of the 1999 GMC van at about 8 p.m. on Friday (Oct. 22) that was traveling on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). The computer revealed the plates had been revoked.

Halloween prank

A trio of teens from out of town was caught playing a Halloween prank at a residence on Norfolk Lane last Friday (Oct. 22) at about 10 p.m. A concerned caller notified police after seeing the teens try car door handles at a neighbor's house. As it turned out, the boys had put silly string and streamers on a car; they were not attempting to enter vehicles, police said. There was no damage and the boys said they would clean up the mess, police said.

Protective custody

Police took a highly intoxicated, 33-year-old Scituate woman into protective custody at 1:45 a.m. on Saturday (Oct. 23) after finding her asleep inside a parked, 2007 Chevrolet pickup truck off Hull Street. Police said the pickup was off the road and was shut off. The occupant showed signs of intoxication and was taken into protective custody; she was held for 12 hours, police said. Her truck was towed.

Car egged

A caller wanted it logged that her car was egged when she was parked outside of Dependable Cleaners on South Main Street on Saturday (Oct. 23).

Red canoe

The red canoe reported missing earlier this month turned up near the shore on Gammons Road on Saturday (Oct. 23). The canoe appeared to be the one that had been reported missing earlier this month from a Beach Street home in the police news. Police said the canoe appeared to have floated over there somehow.

Potholes

Police investigated the operation of a "suped-up" 2002 Honda reported to be "swerving all over Route 3A." The call came in at about 5:18 p.m. on Saturday (Oct. 23). An officer got behind the Honda to observe its operation. The car is very low to the ground and the driver was swerving to avoid potholes and "every nook and cranny," police said.

Drinking pedestrian

A caller reported that a man was walking back and forth in front of the caller's house on Jerusalem Road, drinking alcohol from a paper bag at about 1:04 p.m. on Sunday (Oct. 24). When police arrived, the man had headed toward Nantasket Liquors in Hull. Cohasset police notified Hull police who were going to deal with the man who is known to them, police said.

Garrett Bradley, 40, a Democrat, is running for reelection for state representative for the Third Plymouth District.

- Political figure you admire: Abraham Lincoln. He was a lawyer, legislator and true public servant. He provided critical leadership during the most difficult time in our country's history. He was a politician who brought people together and unified our country. He ended slavery, fought a war and then reached out to the south to begin the process of rebuilding our nation. He also reached out to members of different political philosophies and parties. He didn't dismiss good people or good ideas simply because they came from a different side of the isle. This type of leadership is something to be admired and emulated in today's political atmosphere.

- Favorite quote: "The dictionary is the only place where success comes before work." — Vince Lombardi, football legend.

- What can you laugh at most about yourself: I may be the worst dancer ever. It's not for a lack of trying. Heather and I have been to scores of weddings and events in our 13 years of marriage and she actually thinks I get worse with age. She claims I look more like I am boxing than dancing. Thankfully, I have not passed this gene on to my 6-year-old son Will. At a recent family wedding, he tore up the dance floor with Heather while I watched from the sidelines holding her purse. I've promised my daughters I will take lessons before they get married.

- What have voters told you is their biggest concern? Without a doubt as I talk to voters, the number one issue on their minds is jobs and the economy. And in the historic recession we've been in, the most critical assistance government can lend is to create jobs. I am proud to have sponsored legislation that helped create jobs at the Hingham Shipyard, the Derby Street Shoppes and the South Shore Hospital Bone and Muscle Center in Hingham. These successful projects have provided hundreds of jobs for local residents. I have also strongly supported business tax credits, streamlined permitting, health care cost relief for small businesses and a reduction in the corporate tax rate, all in an attempt to spur job growth. Together these measures have led Massachusetts to an unemployment rate of more than one percent below the national average and in our communities we are below the state average as well. As successful as these measures have been and will continue to be, I will not be satisfied until every person who wants a job has a job. If reelected, I will continue to work tirelessly on this effort.

- What will be your top priority/first course of action if elected/reelected? If honored once again with the faith of the voters to represent them, I will work tirelessly to create new jobs, address the issue of spiraling health care costs, give communities more tools to deal with municipal health insurance costs and maximize federal education dollars while maintaining high education standards. But my top priority, as it has been since the day I was elected, will be to remain accessible, open and responsive to EVERY resident, to never forget who I work for – the taxpayers – and to restore people's faith in their government through an honest and respectful effort on their behalf every day. As a longtime resident of this community, I have a special appreciation for its character and representing it has been one of the true honors of my life. Since day one as your State Representative I have maintained regular office hours, visited senior centers and town halls and attended thousands of events. This has allowed me to hear and understand the concerns of my constituents on a regular basis. If re-elected, I look forward to hearing from residents so that I can continue to provide effective, independent leadership for our district.

Carlton 'Al' Alan Chambers

- Residence: Hingham.
- Education: BA Hartwick College.
- Occupation: Former banker, current Realtor, substitute teacher Weymouth Public Schools.
- Family: Divorced, five children, five grandchildren.

- Civic involvement/public service: South Shore Hospital, Board of Directors, Chairman/Finance Committee; Chairman, Industrial Development Committee, Hingham and Norwell; board member, Hingham Youth Soccer; board member, Hingham Youth Hockey; Massachusetts Medical Reserve Corps; Citizens Emergency Response Teams; Volunteer firefighter; Director Quincy Savings Bank; president Class #14 Hingham Citizens Police Academy.

Al Chambers, 69, is running as an independent, unenrolled candidate for the Third Plymouth District.

- Political figure you most admire: President John F Kennedy for achieving the office in spite of impossible odds caused by religious and sectional prejudices. He served with elegance and grace and established a cultural level of excellence that has never returned to the Executive office. I have never forgotten the promise of his 1000 days.

- Favorite quote: "There is no dignity quite so impressive, and no independence quite so important as living within your means." — Calvin Coolidge, President and Governor of the Commonwealth.

- What can you laugh at most about yourself: The foibles of old age. Those voters in favor of term limits should consider the value of electing Representatives in their "golden years." No pension accumulation, no hanky panky and the wisdom of life experience.

- What have voters told you is their biggest concern? The ability to stay current with financial obligations including taxes, education expenses for children, necessary charitable donations and living expenses in the face of uncertain income projections.

- What will be your top priority/first course of action if elected/reelected? Attend faithfully the subcommittee meetings dealing with the budget process, and voice the fiscal concerns of the District's citizens. Vote for appropriations that stay within the balanced budget proposals.

Tim Finnerty

- Residence: Hingham.
- Education: St. John's University School of Law.
- Occupation: Invests in Massachusetts high-tech companies.
- Family: Married, three children.

- Civic involvement/public service: Trustee, East Williston Public Library; Volunteer Firefighter, Plandome Fire Department; Recipient of American Legion "Firefighter of the year" award; Coach — baseball, lacrosse, soccer.

COURTESY PHOTO

Tim Finnerty, 48, a Republican, is running for the Third Plymouth District.

- Political figure you most admire: I admire Winston Churchill, because he led his country through WWII and on to victory against a larger, better funded and better equipped opponent. He came to power in 1940 when it became clear to all that the threats to Great Britain that Churchill had asked his predecessor to acknowledge and address came true. As a Republican running for public office in Massachusetts I understand how difficult it is to fight a larger, better funded, better equipped army. If elected, I will work closely with all elected officials to do what is best for our towns and the Commonwealth.

- Favorite quote: "Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country." — JFK

- What you can laugh at most about yourself: I started knocking on doors this summer wearing a suit and tie. After weeks of extreme heat I shed the jacket and continued wearing the tie. When the heat continued I shed the tie and continued to walk through the district in shirtsleeves. With temperatures in the 90s many residents encouraged me to get out of the heat. So I did. I went to the beach and continued to campaign. Now when I am out campaigning people see me and say "I know you, I met you at the beach this summer!"

- What have voters told you is their biggest concern? Residents tell me that their biggest concern is "jobs, taxes and government spending." People speak of jobs, taxes and spending as one thing. They recognize that these issues are three pieces of the same puzzle. Bigger government must be supported with higher taxes. Higher taxes cause employers to close or move to other states that offer a more welcoming environment. Residents of our district recognize that we need our elected officials to understand that higher taxes are not the answer. Higher taxes in Massachusetts have been credited with giving New Hampshire one of the lowest unemployment rates in the country at 5.8 percent. The unemployment rate in Massachusetts is over 50 percent higher than the unemployment rate in New Hampshire. Another important number to watch is the number of jobs gained or lost. The numbers for September show that Massachusetts lost an additional 21,000 jobs while low tax states like Texas gained tens of thousands of new jobs. Tax policy does impact jobs.

- What will be your top priority/first course of action if elected/reelected? If I am honored with the support of voters on Nov. 2nd I will thank the other candidates for participating in the political process. On Nov. 3rd, I will begin to draft several pieces of legislation. I will reach out to new representatives and reelected representatives, Democrats and Republicans to build support for legislation that will reduce wasteful spending, rollback the sales tax to 5 percent, (if ballot question 3 does not pass), improve transparency on Beacon Hill and provide our towns with the flexibility they need to meet their obligations to town employees and taxpayers in our district. The Selectmen in Hingham and Hull have written letters to our state representative asking the legislature to stop cutting local aid and to reduce unfunded mandates. I join the Selectmen in their request. It is time for a change on Beacon Hill.

Return of Cat Dam

Selectmen vote to pull NOI from ConCom

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It's been more than three years since the Board of Selectmen hosted the first of several controversial neighborhood discussions on Cat Dam – a 50-year old mechanism that limits tidal flow in inner Little Harbor.

At that time the neighbors were at odds over how much flushing the body of water truly needed. Now, three years and almost $20,000 later, it's clear the neighbors are still in disagreement over how to move forward.

In 2008, Town Meeting approved spending for an engineering study of Cat Dam and the surrounding area with the end result being brought forward to the Conservation Commission as a Notice of Intent (NOI). A NOI is presentation of information to the Conservation Commission that addresses the operation and maintenance of the tide gates, among other things.

The issue most significantly affects the surrounding neighborhood of Inner Little Harbor (Nichols Road, Little Harbor Road, Jerusalem Road), but it is the town that has paid for the consulting engineer to develop the Notice of Intent at a cost of $17,000.

Over the past two weeks, the Board of Selectmen has received two letters regarding Cat Dam, each signed by a group of residents. One letter requested the Selectmen to pull back the NOI to allow for more discussion and review of, in particular, the proposed operation schedule. The other letter requests the Selectmen to allow the process to continue before the Conservation Commission.

Many residents of the neighborhood were in attendance at the meeting.

Before opening the floor for discussion, even among the board, Selectmen chair Karen Quigley laid out the background of the issue and tried to curb the discussion before it began.

She suggested the neighbors had the opportunity to present their viewpoints and at this point it was an issue for the Conservation Commission, the permitting authority. She favored letting the process continue before the Conservation Commission.

Yet, other board members overruled her and a discussion was taken up.

Selectmen Fred Koed said he found it ironic the NOI was submitted by the Board of Selectmen, but he had little knowledge of its content.

"We have a responsibility to know what was submitted," Koed said, adding it was the board's duty to improve the submission and allow discussion on it.

Quigley questioned why the Board of Selectmen should treat this NOI differently than previous NOIs submitted on behalf of the town (Strait's Pond, Jacob's Meadow).

"When those other NOIs were submitted, there wasn't the controversy there is with this one," Koed said.

Selectman Lee Jenkins said the issue really belonged in the hands of the neighbors, "it is not really a town issue."

Two representatives from each neighborhood group were permitted to speak.

George Chamillard of 400 Atlantic Ave. said the town realistically had time to review the submittal since no substantive change to the operation schedule would be made until March.

"Our view is with that time our concerns could be addressed. .The data presented does not jive with (the town's consulting engineer's) recommendations," Chamillard said. The associated letter from his group explained they felt not all information was considered and balanced in the ultimate recommendation for tide gate operation. The group also requested the advisory committee of residents be re-instated to work with the consulting engineers to bring forward an "acceptable proposal."

For the other side, Steve Brown of 275 Jerusalem Road said the issues were already before the appropriate board – the Conservation Commission.

"The argument is being made on a technical basis and it is the ConCom that has access to technical advice," Brown said.

After some additional discussion, the Selectmen voted 3 to 2 in favor of pulling the NOI from the Conservation Commission. As a result, the Conservation Commission will not longer consider the current NOI.

There was no discussion on how to move forward, or revise, the NOI.

Cat Dam flashback

Cat Dam is a 50-plus-year-old mechanism that limits the tidal flow of water in inner Little Harbor. It is located on Nichols Road. The structure is unique in town in that although it is town-owned it has historically been maintained by the surrounding neighborhood.

Over the last few years within the neighborhood there has developed differing opinions on how often the gates should be allowed to open — some want increased flushing while others say there is enough. The conflict brought the issue before the Board of Selectmen for several lengthy and often heated debates between 2007 and 2008.

Over the winter 2008, a committee put together a proposed schedule for the opening and closing of the dam. Before the Selectmen could approve or deny the suggested schedule, the new schedule was implemented for approximately two weeks.

When any change is made to a body of water, the Conservation Commission is obligated to get involved. When the issue came before the Conservation Commission, they issued the town an after the fact notice of intent — a formal request to the town to provide more information about the dam and its adjacent water bodies. Professional engineering services was required including information about the water quality, monitoring of Little Harbor, and an operations and management schedule.

In a narrow vote — 81 in favor, 77 against — Town Meeting approved the allocation to move forward with the notice of intent and hiring of a professional engineer.

A Request for Proposals was sent out, the town received two bids for the services, and hired CLE Engineering of Marion, Mass. for a $17,000 contract.

The Conservation Commission began reviewing the proposed Notice of Intent developed by CLE Engineering in late September.

Selectmen support meals tax; restaurant owners do not

profit margin on their small business is getting narrower as their costs rise and their prices can't go up accordingly.

"As a business owner I think it's terrible. I can't raise prices, or at least I feel like I can't," said Lilly Sestito, owner of JJ's Dairy Hut and JJ's Junction. "It's bad enough to have the 6.25 percent state tax."

The local option meals tax is on top of the current 6.25 percent state sales tax on meals. A $60 meal would cost an additional 45 cents with the .75 percent increase.

Over the past few years many vendors began charging a gas surcharge and paper goods have doubled their cost, Sestito said.

The effect might be subtle, but she said she has noticed that regular customers who have come daily in the past are now coming two or three times a week instead. "People are cutting back," Sestito said.

Jennifer Warshaw, owner of 5 South Main and Cohasset Confectionary Company, said she understands the town needs the money, but the question of fairness does come into play.

"The restaurants are expected to carry the burden. Everything should be raised across businesses to be more fair," Warshaw said, pointing out already this year the restaurants have taken a hit due to the increased cost of town water.

"The clothes shops aren't really affected by that, restaurants are," Warshaw said. "People are just offended at more taxes."

Warshaw said she thinks there are places in the town budget and operations that could be streamlined.

"Everything in this town should be looked at," Warshaw said. "There is a growing population in this town that can't afford more taxes."

The Board of Selectmen were split 3 to 2 on supporting the meals tax, but the majority did recommend approval.

"I don't have a problem with additional taxes if we are also looking at our own operating costs," Selectmen Lee Jenkins said. "I don't think it fair to increase taxes on people that already pay real estate taxes and it puts a stress on local business."

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said it didn't feel like the right time to implement the meals tax.

"I'm hesitant in this economy where people are really struggling to raise taxes," Quigley said, adding it could be considered at Annual Town Meeting in the spring.

Selectman Paul Carlson said it was incumbent on the town to raise additional revenues to help balance the budget. "I don't like raising taxes either, but we need more of a cushion than we have now."

Both Quigley and Jenkins voted against recommending the meals tax.

So far 118 of the 351 cities and towns across the state have adopted the meal's tax, including Hingham, Quincy, Milton, Boston and a number of communities on Cape Cod. Hingham approved a .75 percent local option meals tax this past spring. They are currently considering a mechanism to dedicate the funds to a specific purpose.

Hotels tax

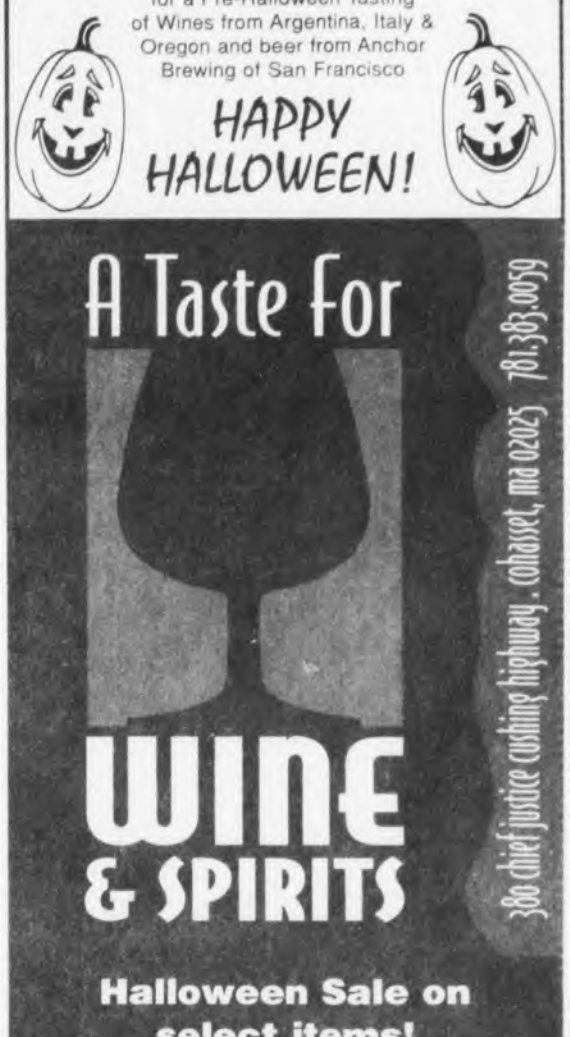
The other tax for consideration is the hotels/occupancy tax. Under state law, the town could implement up to a 6 percent occupancy tax on all local hotel and motel stays. This local option tax has existed for quite awhile and Cohasset previously implemented the tax in the 1988, but the tax was revoked the following year.

Currently 176 out of the 351 municipalities have adopted the tax. Some towns, like Hingham, do not have any hotels or motels. In the area, Braintree has a 6 percent tax; Hull (4 percent); Marshfield (4 percent);, Rockland (4 percent) and Weymouth (4 percent). The vast majority of town has either the four percent (90 towns) or six percent tax (84 towns).

The Department of Revenue does not give specific projections for the hotel tax if there are two or less hotels in the town. They do however give a range. For each one percent of tax Cohasset could expect to receive $10,000 to $20,000 annually. Using the lower estimate, the town could realize about $40,000 annually for a 4 percent tax and $60,000 for a 6 percent tax.

The Board of Selectmen voted against recommending the hotels tax for approval for Town Meeting. Selectmen Paul Carlson and Ted Carr voted in favor of the hotel tax.

Focus groups for 'super search'



Cohasset School Committee has engaged the New England School Development Council to assist them in the search process for a new Superintendent of Schools.

An integral part of the process involves parent and community participation in focus groups. The groups are designed to obtain participant input about the attributes, experience and knowledge that the new superintendent should possess. The groups also provide an opportunity for participants to identify immediate tasks that the new superintendent should address.

The focus group sessions for parents, community members, school council and PSO, etc. will be conducted in the Cohasset High School Library at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, Nov. 9. The event will last approximately 1 to 1 1/2 hours.

All those interested in participating should call Jane Pescatore in the business office to register for the session. The number is 781-383-6108. Focus groups are designed to serve a maximum of 25 participants; therefore, it is important to register. Cohasset School Committee and NESDEC hope that many parents and community members will be able to participate.

Bringing talent to the table

Community Garden Club puts on 'Tablescapes' event

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Tables bring people together.

Whether it is for a meal, a chat over coffee, or a game of cards, a table is the place to share ideas, laughs and food.

The Community Garden Club is hoping 25 decorated tables in one room will bring a lot of people together next weekend.

On Nov. 4, 5 and 6, the Garden Club will transform the second floor of the Our World Museum for their "Tablescapes" showroom.

More than two dozen tabletops of different sizes and shapes will be decorated by merchants in Cohasset, Scituate and Hingham, as well as members of the Garden Club.

"Some will be dressed up for the holidays, others will center around a specific design. others will be funny, sentimental or historic. There will be an entertainment value to it," Garden Club president Janice Todd said.

Arlene Ferreira, owner of Country House Furniture and Interiors, is the chair of the Tablescapes event.

"It's a chance for the merchants to use their creativity and bring their talents to the table," said Ferreira. As the owner of Country House Furniture and Interiors on Route 3A she is designing for a small room setting table incorporating both seashells and starfish. A garden club member will be creating a tea party scene.

Cynthia Gallo-Casey, owner of the The Roman Table in Scituate Harbor, is planning a "under the Tuscan sun" table. Her shop specializes in European tableware and table linens.

"We have a lot of ceramics from Italy and Portugal, so I wanted to do something that reflected the spirit of my shop," Gallo said. She also wanted to do something different than a seasonal table.

The table will be adorned with hand-painted ceramics from Italy and set for an intimate dinner for four.

"If people have traveled in Italy this table will be something they will recognize. The ceramics are very distinctive," Gallo said.

The Tablescapes premise is not entirely new to Cohasset. About 18 years ago the South Shore Art Center used a similar event as fundraiser, Ferreira said.

The Tablescapes event is the club's biggest fundraiser this year. The money raised goes to support the Community Garden Club of Cohasset's ongoing activities.

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is a club with longevity. The group celebrated its 50th anniversary in 2009.

The club has recently set up a box at the Recycling Transfer Facility where residents can recycle their used printer cartridges.

They routinely do community outreach in the schools through the junior gardeners program and at the Golden Living Center nursing home through the garden therapy.

The Community Garden Club designs and maintains the gardens at the Lightkeepers' Residence, the Historical Society (Paul Pratt) building and Constitution Park (next to the post office).

They also offer three scholarships to graduating seniors who are pursuing a degree in science.

The Community Garden Club is already looking into building a garden for the senior center.

Currently, the Garden Club has a healthy membership of over 150 members.

"We're big and we're eclectic," Todd said. Each member brings different strengths, interests and talent to the organization. "We have a lot of fingers in a lot of different pies in the community."

The objective of the Community Garden Club is to promote interest in gardens, their design and horticultural perfection; to promote interest in conservation of natural resources; and to conduct formal programs for the advancement of those issues.

Their littermates have all been spoken for. If you'd like to meet them, we have open hours from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays, and 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays. You can also call Shirl at 781-925-3380 to arrange an appointment. Check out the website at www.hsar.org to meet our cats and check out the Kittendales calendar.

The shelter is at 50 L Street, Hull. The mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA 02045. If interested in the monthly low-cost spay neuter clinic, call Mary at 781-925-3121 for details. Note: James and Jerry are identical, hence the one picture. Thanks to our many supporters.

To Be Or Not To Be? on Facebook

By Marylou Lawrence
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

One has to wonder if Mark Zuckerberg, the founder of Facebook, had an inkling that in March 2010 more people would visit Facebook than Google, and that in the same year Facebook would become both the new email and the new telephone for over 500 million users – that is, one out of every 14 people in the world now has a Facebook account.

Diane Danielson's workshop, Facebook for Beginners, will illuminate the mystique of the Facebook phenomena on Wednesday, Nov. 3, at 10:30 a.m., as part of Paul Pratt Memorial Library's Next Chapter series. Danielson will talk about how Facebook works and demonstrate its use on two levels – as a social tool to keep abreast of community, family, friends, and important issues, and as a professional tool to reenter the workforce, to network, to create an image, and to market oneself or one's business.

A guru in the field of social media, Danielson is a new media consultant who works with companies to integrate social media into their business development and marketing programs. She is a popular speaker on the topic of social media and online networking; founder of the Downtown Women's Club, a national in-person and online community for business women; and co-author of "The Savvy Gal's Guide to Online Networking (or What Would Jane Austen Do?)," a guide of the nuts and bolts and secrets that businesswomen need to build professional relationships through the use of technology.

The following excerpt is taken from a conversation with Danielson about her upcoming workshop at the library.

Why should I – or anyone – learn about Facebook? "It is the communication tool that is not going away. Although new social networks will try to compete, Facebook's size and scope assure that it will remain the preferred social network. For example, the elections this year are being run on Facebook. I go to Facebook when I want to know what a candidate is really all about or what my friends think. Facebook is also where I post my opinions of issues and why I think the way I do. Facebook simply gives more voice to the individual."

COURTESY PHOTO

Diane Danielson's workshop, Facebook for Beginners, will illuminate the mystique of the Facebook phenomena on Wednesday, Nov. 3, at 10:30 a.m.

Tell us more about its scope. "Facebook enables us to build both social and professional networks. For example, last year a Cohasset mom set up a group to help the schools choose healthy foods. People could comment and contribute and become a part of the process.

"Companies use Facebook to engage with their customers. They can receive feedback and interact directly. They can also resolve problems, test market ideas, and run their Facebook Pages like 'mini-interactive websites.

"You can also use Facebook as a tool to get back into the workforce – it's great for reconnecting with contacts who already know you. And, incidentally, one of the fastest growing groups of users is grandparents who want to stay in touch with their families."

For more information about Danielson, visit www.dianedanielson.com.

This workshop is free and open to the public; pre-registration is not necessary. Participants will be given copies of Danielson's PowerPoint presentation.

Next Chapter is funded by grants from the Social Service League of Cohasset and by a federal Institute of Museum and Library Services grant awarded by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners.

Funding for cancer research behind 'Power of the Purse'

By Lenny Kyle
LKYLE@CNC.COM

The American Cancer Society Cancer Action Network (ACS CAN) and Making Strides Against Breast Cancer members and volunteers are working together to support advocacy for cancer research funding. The organization's "Power of the Purse" campaign urges Congress to step up research funding because Congress controls the purse strings.

The American Cancer Society (ACS) dedicates more money to cancer research than any other private, not-for-profit, non-government funder of cancer research in the United States. As of Oct. 21, 2010, the ACS is funding 952 current multi-year grants totaling more than $475.9 million nationwide. However, ACS is currently able to only fund the top 15 percent of all grant requests.

"ACS CAN advocates policy change for adequate funding for cancer research in Massachusetts," said Marc Hymovitz, Director of Government Relations for ACS CAN. "There are thousands of programs across the country and what they have in common is, they all have the potential to provide patients and doctors with the next major step in treatment and the prevention of cancer."

In the past 15 years federally funded research has had major breakthroughs in the treatments and prevention of cancer, such as Gledvec – used to treat leukemia and Gardasil used to treat HPV and prevent many types of cervical cancer, " said Hymovitz.

"When there are cutbacks to federal funding there are serious consequences," said Hymovitz. "All research projects are sustained by funding and when funding is reduced, researchers who have been working on a project may have to stop a project in the middle of the research because of the lack of funding. Up and down funding impacts many research projects. Another danger of reduced funding is we could lose a whole generation of researchers. Younger researchers will go elsewhere for occupations because there are fewer research projects out there."

The Making Strides for Breast Cancer program has organized an annual six-mile, one-day walk near the Boston Esplanade for the past 18 years, taking place in early October. The noncompetitive walk unites communities to honor and celebrate breast cancer survivors, to educate women about prevention and early detection, and raise money to help people stay well, get well, find cures and fight back against the disease. Last year approximately 40 thousand were in attendance and they raised just under $3 million for the event.

"Making Strides for Breast Cancer uses ACS CAN as a legislative umbrella for lobbying efforts. They [ACS CAN] are our sister affiliate of the American Cancer Society," said Diana DeLeo, who is the Director of Special Events for the New England division of the American Cancer Society.

"If you look at the history of breast cancer and cancer as a whole you can see how funding dollars have been applied to help women get early detection through mammography," said DeLeo. Of each dollar raised 87 cents goes directly the cause in the form of early detection, prevention, research and patient services.

There are options open for concerned citizens who wish to help. "First is let your voice be heard. Become an advocate and let your congressman know that federal funding is needed for cancer research. Second, volunteer your time to help ACS CAN or become a member for Making Strides Against Breast Cancer. Third, participate or sponsor someone walking in the annual Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walk in October," said Hymovitz.

Learn more about fighting back with Making Strides for Breast Cancer at acscan.org/making strides.

For more information about advocacy, volunteering or becoming a member contact the American Cancer Society anytime, day or night at 1.800.227.2345/cancer.org.

Helping breast cancer survivors feel beautiful

The physical and emotional road to recovery after mastectomies and reconstructive surgery holds many detours. After months of recuperation there comes a wonderful time when women feel vibrant and they're ready to enjoy the day-to-day of work, family and activities. Often wearing something as simple as a t-shirt or a pretty party dress can be daunting because owning the proper fitting and right type of bra is elusive. Though the recovery garments and visits to the hospital or pharmacy for them are no longer required, the search for a bra or bathing suit that fits well and looks natural can be a major inconvenience and not the most uplifting experience.

Bloom Lingerie Boutique on Water Street in Hingham is changing this situation from a sterile, perfunctory task to an upbeat, actually enjoyable step. Bloom made a commitment when they opened two years ago to become certified fit specialists for women who have undergone mastectomy and reconstructive surgery. It requires proper education, hands-on training and selecting the best merchandise available. Bloom co-owners Melinda Wojcieszak and Wendy Ferullo have met their goal. They've taken the time to complete the required training and learn about all the specialized lines, and they have created a very pretty, comfortable, and respectful environment for highly personalized fitting and merchandise selection. By this winter, they will carry the well known, fine quality Amoena and Anita lines. Some of the bras actually come in lovely, feminine sets and the price points are not much different than the more renowned high-end lines, which range from $50 to $80. In addition, Bloom will also carry attractive camisoles and stylish swimwear that are made specifically for post-mastectomy and post-reconstructive surgery.

Wojcieszak explained, "Providing local access to personalized post-mastectomy fitting and pretty lingerie for women who have endured and fought so much was in our long range plan. This is a logical extension of our business, and we're so pleased to be able to make the process convenient and enjoyable for the first or the 50th fitting for women who deserve to feel like their natural, beautiful selves."

Bloom's objective is to make the experience of shopping a celebration of life, femininity, strength, and beauty. "Most women like to wear beautiful lingerie for special occasions or just to feel special on a regular day. We want to give women who have undergone mastectomy and reconstructive surgery very attractive choices that fit their personal style and help them come back to themselves." By looking at some of the options, one wouldn't know they are for this reason. In fact, some of the items we carry are multipurpose.

THIS QUESTION IS NOT BINDING

Shall the state representative from this district be instructed to vote in favor of legislation that would allow patients, with the written recommendation of their doctor or other registered caregiver, to possess and grow marijuana for the patient's medical use?

YES

NO

Town Clerk expects 50 percent turnout Tuesday

Charlie Baker, Independent Tim Cahill and Green Rainbow candidate Jill Stein.

Also at stake is the 10th Congressional District left open by the retiring of Democratic incumbent Bill Delahunt. Democrat Bill Keating and Republican Jeff Perry won their respective primaries in September. Also running for that seat are three independent unenrolled candidates — Maryanne Lewis of Scituate, Joe van Nes of Martha's Vineyard and Jim Sheets of Quincy.

Locally, Republican state Sen. Bob Hedlund, whose district includes Cohasset and much of the South Shore, is running against Independent Paul Kearney of Cohasset. Also, Republican District Attorney Tim Cruz of Marshfield is running against Democrat John Shea, a Marshfield native and retired member of the Marshfield Police Department.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, a Democrat, is being challenged by fellow Hingham residents Republican Tim Finnerty and Independent Carl "Al" Chambers, Sr.

Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey, a democrat, is running against independent John Coffey.

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti (democrat) is being challenged by Republican William Farretta.

Democrat incumbent Martha Coakley is running for Attorney General, and trying to unseat her is Republican James Mckenna.

For Secretary of State, incumbent Democrat William Galvin is running against Republican William Campbell and James Henderson, an unenrolled candidate.

Running for treasurer is Democrat Steven Grossman and Republican Karyn Polito.

For auditor, the Democratic candidate is Suzanne Bump, with Republican Mary Connaughton and Green Rainbow candidate Nathanael Alexander Fortune also running.

Other races include Fourth District Councillor and County Commissioner.

The questions on the ballot could impact Cohasset and other local towns significantly. Question 1 asks to repeal the Massachusetts sales tax on alcoholic beverages and alcohol.

Question 2 considers the repeal of the Chapter 40B, the state's affordable housing law.

Question 3 calls for reducing the state sales tax rates from 6.25 percent to 3 percent.

A non-binding question rounds out the ballot. It asks voters whether they would like to instruct the representative from the district to vote in favor of legislation that would allow patients, with written recommendation of their doctor, to possess and grow marijuana for their patient's medical use.

On Tuesday, Nov. 2 the polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Voting will be at the Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., for Precincts 1 and 2.

For further information, contact the Town Clerk's Office, 781-383-4100.

Lewis for 10th Congressional seat

We are endorsing Maryanne Lewis, who is an independent, unenrolled candidate, for the 10th Congressional District.

We believe she will provide a clear voice and a fresh perspective — so badly needed in Congress.

A former Democrat who served for eight years as state representative in the 11th Norfolk District (1995-2003), Lewis, 47, stands out among the candidates, and it's our view that she has the experience, savvy and toughness to get things done in Congress.

Lewis said she is no longer a Democrat because the party grew too liberal for her tastes.

"I'm not beholden to any party," Lewis said during an interview with our editorial board. "I always enjoyed a centrist profile, even before I had a 'D' beside my name."

Lewis said her number one issue in this candidacy is "jobs, jobs and jobs."

During her tenure on Beacon Hill, Lewis helped to create jobs through establishing and/or reforming tax policy so that Massachusetts could become "a more user-friendly business state." She was the first woman to chair a committee in her first term in the House. She was not afraid to take on the issues and was not afraid to fight for what she believed in, no matter what party got in her way. She's the first to tell you she may not have been the most liked, but that she was well respected by her colleagues.

As a congresswoman, Lewis promises to:

- Support extending the Bush tax cuts and eliminating the estate tax
- Create incentives for our district's 14,000 small businesses to hire and make capital investments, as well as encourage cooperation and partnership between the federal government and our region's private sector – particularly in the areas of alternative energy research and development.
- Protect our precious coastline while continuing to intelligently develop potential maritime, environmental and renewable energy job opportunities.
- Eliminate and guard against the over-burdensome and out of touch regulation of our local businesses – especially in the fishing industry.
- Protect our Second Amendment rights and crack down on illegal immigration.
- Support our veterans and military at every level and ensure that when we do commit troops to a military campaign that it is for the right reasons.

Lewis said her entire family lives in the 10th Congressional District and a number of them work in the lobstering industry and other small businesses. If elected, she said she would work to reduce or eliminate regulations faced by fishermen and lobstermen in the district.

The mother of two teenagers, Lewis — who is a lawyer and runs her own consulting practice — is outspoken, and not afraid to voice her opinion. We were impressed with her depth of knowledge on the important issues facing the 10th District and the country. Lewis' forthright manner, determination to make a difference, and proven leadership skills put her ahead of her opponents.

If you believe Capitol Hill is broken and are tired of all the partisanship, then we urge you to support Maryanne Lewis; we believe she is the right voice for our district.

Keep thinking 'Pink'

October, the month of the year dedicated to breast cancer awareness, comes to an end Sunday. But the battles being fought against this disease will go on well past the 31st.

So, too, must the effort to raise money for the research that develops new and more effective breast cancer treatments and offers real hope for a cure.

Throughout the month, through GateHouse Media's "Paint the Town Pink" campaign, we have published news and feature stories on breast cancer in our newspapers and on our websites. We kicked off the month by literally going pink in the pages of our newspapers and adding a pink hue to your Wicked Local homepage. We've kept the coverage of this health issue going for five weeks, tying a familiar pink ribbon to all of our breast cancer coverage and proudly displaying it in each newspaper's flag.

Our "Pink" content has ranged from news stories on the latest treatments and the encouraging statistics that show more and more people are beating breast cancer, to features on groups and individuals contributing to the cause through fundraising efforts.

We have written profiles on people bravely battling the disease now, and those who have conquered cancer but remain committed to spreading awareness and offering support to others undergoing treatment and recovery.

But by far our most compelling and inspiring content this month has come from those of you who have shared your personal stories with us. Breast cancer survivors and those of you touched by the disease through a family member or friend reached out to let us know in your own words what you are going through, what you have been through, and how you have coped with cancer.

Your stories have been cautionary tales, stressing the importance of annual mammograms and reminding us all that screening and early detection is the best advantage you can have heading into the battle against breast and other cancers.

You've inspired and touched us with your stories of perseverance and encouragement to "never give up" and to find strength and comfort in faith, family and friends offering support.

Those stories, those words of hope and healing, will remain with us and our readers long after we turn the calendar to November; helping to ensure breast cancer awareness is a year-round reality.

If you missed any of the breast cancer coverage in our newspapers this month, we encourage you to check it out online on our Wicked Local websites. Click on the Paint the Town Pink "hotlink" at the top of the homepage and be inspired.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

An open letter of thanks to the citizens of Cohasset

Greetings all.

During the spring and summer months, many of you may have seen me around town doing quite a bit of walking at first then running. I have been training for a marathon which was just held on Oct. 17th in Lowell, called the Baystate Marathon. I had never run any sort of race in my life but was faced with needing to lose a lot of weight for many reasons, and decided, some would call it crazily, to try to run a marathon. In addition, many of you may also be aware of my transition from male to female.

To date, I have lost 107 pounds this year alone since I began dieting on Jan. 2 along with training for the marathon since March. At the marathon I was indeed able to finish! My time was 5 hours, 48 minutes, 39 seconds. It was one of the most incredible days of my life. As I crossed the finish line I was overwhelmed with emotion and an incredible feeling of accomplishment. The support I have received has been amazing.

As such, I wanted to thank everyone for all their incredible love and support during my journey and my transformation this year. I was, and continue to be, overwhelmed by all the words of encouragement, the hugs and the high fives during many of my runs. The cheers helped so much, more than you can ever know.

This has been the best year of my life, and I am happier and healthier than I ever have been. I am so peaceful and content now, and just feel so right. It is such an amazing thing to feel after many years of confusion. I am blessed and I feel strongly that the way so many in our town have embraced and supported me has helped allow this to happen for me. It just shows how awesome our town is! Please accept this thank you to all of you from the bottom of my heart and from my very soul.

Humbly and with much love and thanks,
Michelle Figueiredo

Leveling course along the roadside

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

First things first — Since paving is uppermost in most of your minds, the good news is that there was lots of paving done this past week. As we mentioned previously, the paving sequence started with Sohier Street, which was completed last Wednesday. The original plan was to pave Beechwood Street and then Pond Street However, intermittent rains started, so the paving operation was moved to Jerusalem Road to lay down a leveling course of paving.

The leveling course is a thin layer of asphalt that is placed over the construction trenches that may not have had enough paving on them. Leveling is generally done only where needed and in our case is mostly on one side of the road. This course of paving is not as fussy as the topcoat so it can be placed on a damp road. (Note - the fresh asphalt is about 280 degrees so it tends to vaporize any little bit of water that is on the roadway.) However, the rains started up big-time so all paving was halted about mid-day on Wednesday. As we go to press on Wednesday afternoon, we plan to pave Beechwood Street and Pond Street on Thursday. Then, paving will resume on Jerusalem and Atlantic with the leveling course on Friday. Of course, this is all weather dependent, so we'll just have to see how much we can get done.

As you might imagine paving the intersection of Sohier Street and Ripley Road was very confusing for the motorists. If you have a familiarity with traffic flows in the village you can imagine what closing this intersection does to traffic. Some of the necessary detours are quite lengthy. But, everyone seemed to take it in stride, for which we thank everyone.

Following the leveling course, a structure crew will descend to raise all of the shut-off valves and other devices in the road to their final height. Please drive carefully when these are sticking up all over the road. And then, presto, the pavers will return to work their magic to pave these roads. We might also mention that there are a few side roads that need a final coat of asphalt, which will be laid as the adjacent main road is paved.

We have mentioned before, but it bears repeating, the section of Jerusalem from Atlantic to North Main will be ground and paved after the small construction project on Jerusalem Road at Jerusalem Lane is completed. The engineers tell us that this construction work will have started by this Friday and will be finished in about two weeks.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Sohier Street gets smooth.

This course of paving is not as fussy as the topcoat so it can be placed on a damp road.

Meetinghouse Pond Project — One interesting feature of the renewed Meetinghouse Pond on the Common is the addition of a large underground reservoir/pump chamber. The "old" fountain was a "once through design." That is, all fresh water entered the pond via the fountain. To keep the pond from overflowing, no more water could be fed into the fountain than that which was lost by evaporation.

This was so that the water level would not rise to the point where the pond would overflow. Under some conditions, this provided for very little circulation of the water in the pond. The new pond will have a 4,000-gallon reservoir buried underground. Water from the pond, once it reaches certain level, will flow into this reservoir, and then will be pumped back into the pond via the fountain. Thus, the engineers created a constant circulation loop to keep the water fresher.

Last week and this week the underground reservoir was installed at the southern end of the pond alongside Robert Jason Road. We have included several photos of this preformed concrete structure as it was being installed. A giant hole was dug, leveled and a gravel base was installed. A large truck-mounted crane lifted the bottom half into place, where its final position was adjusted and leveled. You can see from the pictures this was not a trivial structure.

The top half was then moved so that the crane could position it on top of the bottom half.

In the photo of the bottom half you may notice a black line located along the top of the wall sections. This is actually a very pliable gasket material that will effectively seal the bottom to the top when the top is lowered by the crane and positioned into its final resting place. The gasket will make the reservoir watertight at the seam between the top and bottom halves.

The last photo shows the final burial site after it was covered over with topsoil. Two access manholes are built into the top of the reservoir so that the pump and level control equipment can be maintained and adjusted.

Keep commenting in line, online

FOR THE RECORD

GREGORY MATHIS

Among other very important freedoms, the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution ensures the right to free speech and freedoms for the press that allow for the exchange of ideas and opinions. Those values have been a cornerstone for our American society since the days of the Founding Fathers.

As the media, specifically newspapers, have moved into cyberspace, we've been tested by an online community that now has the ability to anonymously comment on stories, blogs, etc. Don't get me wrong, we want people to comment on stories. If it were as simple as people weighing in on various topics of interest and keeping the discussion civil and respectful, it wouldn't be an issue at all.

But some people are downright nasty and disrespectful. Some even lie, or distort the truth so much it becomes an issue of libel. While freedom of speech and press do exist, there are laws to protect people from being wrongly accused of something, or from being personally attacked so that it causes harm.

Rules for online commenting (from our online 'Pool Rules')

- Keep it clean.
- Stay on topic.
- Be honest and accurate.
- No personal attacks. Don't bash anyone based on their race, creed, heritage, or sexual orientation.
- Don't say anything here you wouldn't say in front of your mother at the dinner table.
- Use the 'Report Abuse' button when you spot a rule violation. (Don't report comments just because you disagree.)

While we absolutely want and seek reader feedback and comments, allowing people to take potentially libelous and harmful shots at town officials, mayors, or anyone for that matter, anonymously makes many in the industry cringe.

Our group of newspapers shies away from using anonymous sources in stories. Being able to attribute facts, quotes, and opinions to sources willing to go "on the record" gives our stories credibility and carries more weight with our readers.

We require people sending letters to the editor to supply us with their name, address and phone number for verification of the letter. We value letters greatly because those willing to provide their real name as well as other personal information have credibility. That doesn't mean we run every letter. Some letters include facts that are questionable and can't be verified and some cross the line of libel or poor taste. Even though the letter writer is making a potentially libelous statement, the newspaper can be held accountable for being the vehicle in which the libelous statement was disseminated.

Those kinds of rules and restrictions haven't all found their way to the World Wide Web, and maybe never will. Policing letters for a newspaper is a little different than policing everything being said – good or bad – on the Internet. So, commenting online is a bit of a free-for-all. We have some safeguards in place, including minimal registration requirements and a function for readers to report abuses. We don't require people to use their real names, but we can pinpoint computer IP addresses, so if necessary we can go in and ban a commenter from posting comments from that computer. And if someone reports an abusive comment, we have the ability to remove that comment or disable the commenting function for a particular story.

But we don't remove every comment we get an abuse report for. Some people report abuse simply because they don't agree with the comment. Unless it's profane, libelous or in such bad taste that it would make a reasonable person cringe, we keep the discussion going. And quite often, it is our readers who help us keep the conversation on track and above board by responding to an abusive commenter.

Do we need a Bullying Task Force?

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

What grabs your attention? For example, do we need a Bullying Task Force? Cohasset, like all other communities in the Commonwealth, are being called upon to address the issue of bullying. As such, our school administration has been charged with the responsibility of creating policies and procedures to address the issue as it pertains to the schools and school activities. We can learn from Duxbury. On Nov. 10, the Bullying Task Force of the Duxbury Public School System will conduct a public meeting to inform the public of and to seek a solution to bullying and other inappropriate behavior, a challenge that involves everyone.

According to Bill Campbell, a resident of Duxbury, whose daughter lives in Cohasset: "Some parents believe that bullying is a school only problem. While it is true that the school can become a focal point for bullying activity, it is not the only place it can occur. With the advent of cell phones and the Internet, it can occur at all hours of the day and night beyond the view of school administrators.

"We all want to believe and trust our children and will vigorously defend them when they are accused of wrongdoing. However, unfortunately, we oft times learn later they have betrayed our trust. While we are disappointed, it is they who suffer the consequences. Trust is an easy thing to lose, but very difficult to regain. Young people can unwittingly learn unacceptable behavior; for if it worked once it will again. A recent national survey revealed that 60 percent of young people in grades seven to nine who have been identified as bullies, will be arrested for another crime before the age of 24. This is a startling statistic worth noting. Some feel the affluence of Duxbury insulates us from these types of behavior. Sadly, it is the affluence of Duxbury that breeds the sense of entitlement that fosters unacceptable behavior. The Duxbury Schools may take the lead addressing these problems. However, their role is limited (and hampered) by legal and confidentiality constraints and we need to respect and accept this. Therefore, the cure for bullying along with tobacco, alcohol and drug abuse begins at home. The church, athletics and other activities can have a guiding impact on young person's development. However, it is never more important than an involved family at home. It is there that they learn appropriate behavior as well as respect for others. If at times, they act inappropriately, it may be a reflection of what they see at home and we unconsciously teach them.

"Children want to be loved, admired and respected and will go to great lengths to achieve all of it. We, as members of the larger community, need to constantly reinforce these feelings of security and acceptance."

Parents sometimes tend to classify themselves according to the characteristics adopted by their friends and neighbors. Such perceptions tend to roughly follow such indicators as home values, sites near amenities such as stores, schools, water views, and other factors that are perceived to add or subtract value from a property. Then towns are perceived to have relative values based on the conventional aesthetics of views, media reports, etc. People tend to change because, we all grow and develop new perceptions and therefore needs change. When they no longer fit one's perception of his needs some simply leave town, but most tend to heed any suggestions and make beneficial changes. As such, bullying within Cohasset needs to be considered.

Governance of a town seldom is subject to changes of form such as number of Selectmen or relationship of the town administrator to its functioning bodies, but the emphasis on elements of the job may undergo great change affecting many town functions. We see such changes in our present town structure. The departure of a respected and effective town manager is prompting some gentle hints to many town functions to expect new approaches to dealing with town problems. Few are the committees and boards that have received no light-handed advice regarding some element of their operation. The changes and suggestions are well heeded.

The predominant change that many fail to perceive is the ratio of students to adults in town. We simply have more adults in town than we used to. Also, the number and character of people who live elsewhere in summer or winter has changed. In the context of change to improve our condition, in bullying as in everything else, we need to look to ourselves.

Column to focus on senior issues

SENIOR CORNER

STEVE BOBO

Thus begins a new weekly Mariner column. The name will surely change as the functions of its subject will change to reflect a new reality about how we treat our older citizens; what we think about them; how they are handled and as we learn about the wealth of experience and wisdom they have garnered during life on this planet.

We are in a time of change and to be fully receptive to the many changes being wrought about us, we will need the mature thoughts and insight that can be brought to us by our seniors.

This column will describe planned programs to be implemented in the development of programs for the new Willcutt Commons campus; programs designed for both young and old alike; involving virtually every type of activity primarily aimed at maintaining skills and activities of mind and body over life spans that are growing and destined to become even longer. The programs will cover medical and health issues, nutrition, motor skill sets like driving and playing sports, and many other pursuits.

The first program will take place on Wednesday, Nov. 3, 11 a.m. to noon. Featured at the program will be a program titled "Role of the Hospitalist," presented by Dr. Elena Dekkers, South Shore Hospital, who will discuss the role of the hospitalist during in-patient stays. If you or a loved one is hospitalized, chances are your care may be coordinated with the help of a hospitalist.

Town Manager Bill Griffin shares a laugh with Susan Kent, right, and Donna McGee, who served on the Town Manager Selection Committee that narrowed the search down to Griffin and two others.

Griffin reflects on five years in Cohasset

Robin. He also has two adult children, Patrick, 27 and Molly, 22.

Five and a half years ago Griffin came to a much different town. He was hired at the end of a controversial year when the community at large questioned its faith in town government.

"When I came to Cohasset it was a very, very tumultuous time here, not all having to do with the previous town manager," Griffin said.

So, the first order of business was turning chaos into calm – a process that he names as one of his chief accomplishments. At his very first Selectmen's meeting a shouting match broke out between a resident and board member. The next day he fielded call after call from residents assuring him that the meeting was not the norm.

Little by little though the town began to prove that to him – and Griffin was able to prove to the town — he was different.

"I think I was able to restore respect for the town manager position and allow the town to re-focus on its priorities," Griffin said.

He names his openness to collaborative and cooperative efforts as one of the keys to his success as a town manager. The ability to maintain a working relationship with most people, under sometimes controversial and difficult circumstances, is a quality that has kept him in good stead with the vast majority of Cohasset.

Under Griffin's guidance the town moved toward better financial practices. Free cash is no longer used to offset the operational budget, debt service as a percentage of the budget has decreased and a capital stabilization fund was created to fund capital improvements.

"That kind of fiscal discipline will benefit the town in the long run," Griffin said.

His legacy will continue on in Cohasset through the people he hired while he was here. Griffin had the opportunity to appoint many department heads including, Elder Affairs Director Coral Grande, Police Chief Mark DeLuca, Recreation Director Ted Carroll, Fire Chief Bob Silvia and Town Manager and Selectmen's office Administrative Assistant Jennifer Oram.

"We hired some very good staff and I'm very proud of that," Griffin said.

Griffin came to Cohasset from a town administrator position in Bourne that was marked with controversy and a rocky relationship between him and the selectmen. To his (pleasant) surprise that has not the case in Cohasset.

"Even though the board of selectmen has changed so much since I've been here, they all have been great to work with. They have all been very respectful of the position and I've always appreciated that," Griffin said.

But, there have been challenges along the way. Cohasset's small size has necessitated him to take on issues that had been delegated in the larger towns and cities he managed. He was responsible for more procurement issues than he had done in past positions.

"We have a very good staff, but a very small staff. The town manager has to do a lot of different things," Griffin said.

The budget, as with all communities throughout the Commonwealth. was an annual challenge.

Ellen Warner of the Assessors Office gives Town Manager Bill Griffin a hug during last Friday's reception in his honor.

He does leave the town with some regrets, including challenges, like Treat's Pond, where a solution is no closer than it was when he came on. Although he jokes about the headaches those issues have caused him along the way, he said it's hard to leave without a resolution.

"There are important issues out there that don't seem to have an answer. (With Treat's Pond) it's been five years and no progress has been made. That's disappointing," Griffin said.

Of course Griffin can't leave without offering advice to his successor and the community at large.

"I'd urge (the next town manager) to utilize the talents and interests of the community," Griffin said. "They have knowledge and skills that are enormously helpful."

During his tenure Griffin has worked closely with the Capital Budget Committee, the Advisory Committee, the Budget Planning Group, the Water Planning Group and the Board of Selectmen. In particular, the Budget Planning Group, founded last summer, has been instrumental in budget projections and solutions.

In the same token, he hopes the community stays involved in the town's business and lends their expertise whenever possible.

"I hope the town extends the same degree of respect to the next manager as they did for me," said Griffin. "I really do love this town."

Gigi Mirarchi of State Rep. Garrett Bradley's Office presents Town Manager Bill Griffin with a Proclamation at this going away party.

of the community now and the future, Campbell said.

"I know you know we do need a new senior center. But it is so important for everyone to understand that the senior services we supply today are not the services we will need to provide tomorrow," said Coral Grande, director of Elder Affairs.

According to population projections in 2020 one in three residents will be 60 or older.

"This plan accommodates for those needs and for the future needs of the community," Grande said. "The person who is healthier, happier and lives longer is going to remain a contributing member of society."

The feasibility study set out the parameters and cost of the project. Joe Rizzo of Court Street Architects, one of three firms that do the vast majority of senior center constructions in the state, The 13,000 square foot building will house a 200-person function room (with dividers), commercial kitchen, staff offices, several activity rooms, supportive day care facility, exercise room, billiards room, computer lab, screened porch and terrace.

"What we're stressing in this design is flexibility as much as possible," Rizzo said. There is room for an expansion and change as the needs of the community and seniors evolve and increase.

The second floor will house four affordable and moderate-priced apartments.

The building will be a wood frame and the exterior designed with materials as low-maintenance as possible, Rizzo said.

The estimated cost for construction and furnishing is $6.475 million. Other add-ons to consider is geothermal heating and additional apartments on the second floor.

The project has already made significant strides toward funding. The Social Service League has pledged $1 million from the Mary Hooper Trust Fund of which the League is the trustee. In her will Mary Hooper put aside $25,000 to build an old age home in Cohasset. The building will be named Willcutt Commons in honor of Mary Hooper's father. Elder Affairs has also received $220,000 in Community Preservation funding.

A $1.5 million capital campaign (including in-kind contributions) will be undertaken. Other potential sources include $1 million from the Community Preservation Fund and close to $3 million from the town. Both those sources would need Town Meeting approval and involve borrowing.

The feasibility study also outlined the projected operational cost and revenues of the new senior center. Expenses were estimated at $76,000, with revenues (apartment and room rentals) expected to be $70,000.

The senior center is currently located in a portion of the South Shore Community Center and pays a rent of $14,000.

The feasibility study was paid through private donations to the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs.

"I'm not surprised with the cost, but it is considerable more than previously considered. It will be a challenge in these economic times to come up with the funding," said Selectmen chair Karen Quigley. She asked that they get some momentum going and some assurances the funding needed will be realized before getting too far along in the project.

The sense of the Board of Selectmen was to continue to working toward the goal of a senior center.

Donations to the building of a new Senior Center can be made in one of two ways. First, through the non-profit Friends of Elder Affairs at 3 North Main St., Cohasset, which is tax deductible. Second, a donation can be made directly to the Town of Cohasset treasurer specifying the check is for the Senior Center Building Fund.

Disturbing precedent set by selectmen majority

COMMENTARY

STEPHEN AND MARJORIE BROWN

By this vote of three to two, the majority of the BOS implied that a group of neighbors has the right to control a public asset. If you live on Cohasset Harbor, should only you get to decide what happens in the harbor?

On Monday night three of the five Cohasset Selectmen (Koed, Jenkins, and Carlson) voted to withdraw the Notice of Intent (NOI) ordered by the Conservation Commission (CC) for the operation and maintenance of Cat Dam. The Selectmen were responding to a group of neighbors who had expressed "significant concerns" about the NOI's proposed operating schedule for Cat Dam. The Board of Selectmen (BOS) did not decide how, when, or if they would comply with the CC order once they withdrew the NOI, and therefore, they did not indicate what the next steps will be.

However, some of the Selectmen did discuss their opinions that neighbors should suggest a schedule, and one Selectman stated that since this was about the environment, then the neighbors should decide. This comment appears to be in direct contradiction to the laws of our state and town, i.e. the Wetlands Protection Act and the Cohasset Conservation bylaw. Land that is subject to tidal water action is under the jurisdiction of the Wetlands Protection Act. Authority for decisions affecting this land and these waters is given to the CC and the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

Cat Dam is owned by the Town (not the neighbors). The Town has an easement to operate and maintain the Dam. Below the low water mark in tidal areas, the state owns all land and water outright. Parts of Inner Little Harbor do not belong to the abutters, any more than all of Cohasset Harbor belongs to its abutters. By this vote of three to two, the majority of the BOS implied that a group of neighbors has the right to control a public asset. If you live on Cohasset Harbor, should only you get to decide what happens in the harbor?

The BOS made this decision to withdraw the NOI without waiting for the advice of Town Counsel, and for the time being they have taken the process away from the public venue that was ongoing at the CC. At the CC hearings any citizen can submit scientific data or make comments. The CC has access to many scientific resources, and they can modify the conditions requested in the NOI. In addition, if any one is unhappy about a CC decision, then they can appeal the decision to the DEP and/or district courts.

The group that requested BOS involvement has privately hired a lawyer and environmental consultants. It appears that the majority of the BOS is open to the idea of letting some neighbors make recommendations based on their hired consultants' ideas which are likely to defend their clients' particular needs. While this group represents the majority of abutters, the Wetlands Protection Act does not allow water body management to be subject to popular vote. The care of the environment should not be decided by the majority, but rather by the best science available and the arm's length objectivity of the CC and DEP.

Unless the BOS decides to allocate more money to hire another objective environmental consultant (who is not already under private contract with a group of neighbors) to write a new NOI, and then submit this new NOI to the CC in a timely fashion, the BOS will be putting the Town in jeopardy of an enforcement action from CC and a DEP appeal. Chairman Quigley highlighted that the CC is the only town entity that has regulatory jurisdiction in the matter. The majority vote of the BOS shows a disquieting disregard for the legal process and the protection of the environment.

It's useful to know how we arrived at this point. In the spring of 2008 a change was implemented at the request of neighbors that came to the attention of the CC. As stated earlier, neighbors cannot change a body of water without CC's approval. As required by the Wetlands Protection Act, the CC then ordered a retroactive NOI that was "based on a defensible and scientifically based understanding of the system" in order to "begin the process (of) addressing the impairment of Inner Little Harbor."

The BOS at that time voted to provide the NOI. The Town Meeting approved the funds to hire an environmental consultant to write the NOI. A Request for Quote was issued by the Town Manager, and he selected the lowest bidder. The NOI was to be based on past scientific studies — of which there have been many over the last 20 years, some costing the Town money and all indicating an impaired environment with poor water quality in Inner Little Harbor compared to the tidal Main Little Harbor.

The NOI was completed by the environmental consultant (with two formal sessions asking for input from interested parties). It was presented to the public at a pre-submission hearing; and finally it was submitted to the CC and filed with the DEP. Since the submission, there have been two public hearings, and a third one was scheduled for Nov. 18. This whole process has cost the Town money and taken approximately two and half years, but it is the correct and legal process.

More transparency needed with water tank proposal

COMMENTARY

MARTHA OGRODNIK

The water tank is just that, a water tank; it is not an antenna platform. It was designed to hold water. It was not designed to hold a cluster of telecom equipment.

The article in the Mariner of Oct. 22nd titled "Bear Hill forum draws a crowd" indicated that the installation of cell antennas on the Bear Hill water tank could bring in revenue of upwards of $40,000 per year. I think it is important to note that, as of right now, there is only one contract in place and the rent is $1,800 per month ($21,600 per year). The revenue amount is important because this seems to be the only thing the Water Commissioners are focused on in terms of purported benefits to the town; but along with this revenue are necessary costs, which will obviously offset the rent revenue. As a ratepayer, I am concerned with any costs that the Water Commissioners incur, and this part of this project must be more transparent since it appears that the Water Commissioners do not fully appreciate the potential costs involved over the term of the contract.

In terms of costs, all we had heard from the Water Commissioners is that the cost of the project would only be $4,500 for a gravel road and a gate. At the forum, however, they said the road would probably cost $7,000. The so-called safety study (which apparently cost about $1,500) indicates that the proposed access road off of Reservoir Road will be paved, but the Water Commissioners have said all along that it would be gravel. Further adding to the confusion, the diagram presented at the forum and included with the Mariner article indicates that it will be both — a gravel road with a paved apron entrance. According to the Stormwater Management Bylaw, a full Stormwater Permit is required for "any construction or development activity on an undeveloped parcel of any size that will increase the impervious surface area." Since the Reservoir Road location is an undeveloped parcel of land and unless the apron will be constructed out of some form of permeable pavement, then it would seem that the Water Commissioners face yet other costs.

The water tank is just that, a water tank; it is not an antenna platform. It was designed to hold water. It was not designed to hold a cluster of telecom equipment. Ongoing maintenance costs of the tank will only increase if antennas and cables and wires are added to it. Physically attaching anything to the tank, whether by welding, bolting or otherwise, will also require more frequent inspection of the interior of the tank to check its structural integrity and that of its protective coating. This will necessitate that the tank come off line and be drained, which involves significant cost, not to mention reduced water pressure and firefighting capabilities while the tank is off line. The Water Commissioners simply have not been forthcoming with the town on the real costs involved here. The water tank is one of the most important pieces of equipment in the water distribution system, and it is one of the most expensive pieces of equipment to maintain. Why would anyone want to make it more expensive to maintain when there are other alternatives to this site?

This is not just a matter of simply attaching cell antennas on a water tank as the Water Commissioners would like us to believe. This is a major telecommunications center and power plant — a commercial project — in a residentially zoned area, not to mention overlooking the Middle/high School. During the forum, the Commissioners appeared to commit to providing a full cost/benefit analysis for this project; as ratepayers and citizens of this town, we should demand nothing less and we should rightfully expect a fully transparent vetting process. Perhaps with such transparency and a true accounting of the reasonably anticipated costs the town can avoid a repeat of the same cavalier attitude that lead to budget problems and the recent necessity to vote for the special assessment. Of course, however, we wouldn't be experiencing the Water Commissioners' cavalier attitude towards the costs involved had they not entered into a contract for which they had no authority to do so in the first place. This project has nothing to do with the distribution of water in Cohasset, that is where their authority lies.

BOYS SOCCER

Tied up

WWASSERS@CNC.COM

In the bigger scheme of things, it was something of a meaningless game, but there was a bit of a playoff feeling on Wednesday night when the Cohasset boys soccer team made a visit to neighboring Scituate on Scituate's Senior Night.

As a non-league, out of division game at the end of the season with both teams having qualified for the MIAA Tournament already, this was a game played for pride and the opportunity to get some solid competition before the playoffs.

In the end, goals were met in some sense, with both teams notching a point to help their seeding in a 0-0 draw fueled by solid defensive play and great goaltending on both sides.

"We talked about not getting another 0-0 game," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said with a bit of a smile. "These were two very good defensive teams. When you get teams like that, this is going to happen."

Willis had nothing but positives to say about both sides.

"Travers Craven played out of his mind," Willis said. He Cohasset's Madigan O'Neil.

Cohasset Youth Field Hockey had a banner day on Sunday when more than 200 girls from five towns and 11 teams converged on Cohasset to play in a Youth Field Hockey Jamboree.

The event was organized by Beth Marsden, who through her work with the youth program is a reason the high school team is doing so well this season.

The high school team, who are undefeated and the South Shore League champions, were involved in the jamboree, playing an exhibition game. The junior varsity also played an exhibition.

Teams came from Franklin, Easton, Westwood, Derby Academy and Cohasset and played five or six 20-minute games.

FOOTBALL

They'll be ready

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Playing football in the South Shore League can feel a bit like playing in the much maligned BCS of NCAA football.

In other words, it isn't the most perfect system there is.

Like the BCS, the playoff picture is decided by conference as much as skill, and in the South Shore League, with eight teams, one playoff berth and a lot of talent, in many cases, nothing short of perfection is good enough.

At the moment, newcomer to the league, Rockland, controls its own destiny and playoff hope.

The Bulldogs edged Cohasset 9-8 two weeks ago and followed with a controversial come-from behind win over Abington on Friday night.

While Cohasset isn't out of the chase, a Rockland loss to Abington would have been a big help.

That said, the Skippers are ready to get back on the field tonight at Mashpee.

"Monday felt like the pre-season," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "They were out to lunch. As the week progressed things picked up. The kids are ready to go."

Afanasiw was at Mashpee scouting on Friday night, listening to Abington/Rockland on the radio on the way home.

"They're bigger than we are," Afanasiw said of the opponent. "That's no different than most weeks. If we play them the way we're capable, we should find success."

Cohasset will have to focus though, especially with the long bus ride to Mashpee.

"My last two times there we've been beat 56-0," he said. "I've asked people, and they can only think of one win down there.

"Based on what I saw, they have a good running game, two

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Last night while I was watching Scituate and Cohasset play to a 0-0 draw, the third 0-0 tie I've seen in recent weeks, and the second I watched this week, I had a few ideas to spice up the game.

Now this is no shot at soccer purists who love defense and more defense. I know they are out there, especially at the international level, where a 0-0 tie is almost worshipped, but personally, I like scoring - lots of scoring.

I think that's one reason why lacrosse has become such a phenomenon in recent years.

Yes, there's the poking people with sticks thing, which is secondary to the game by the way, but here's also a very real chance that you could see 15 or 16 goals in a given game.

A great game by a goalie can be allowing 15 goals, but making three big saves down the stretch.

I watched a game last season where a goalie allowed 17, but still looked like the best player on the field after making 22 saves.

Back to the point, here is a six-step program to spice up soccer.

They might work, they might not.

They won't be adopted by any team anytime soon.

Or any league, but I'm tossing it out there.

Here are my new rules.

If you like them, feel free to start a new league and name it after me.

1. I'll call this the big boot. Players can now kick field goals, like football and rugby. The catch is that it has to be on the run, from outside the 30-yard line and outside the hash marks. The problem here is that some teams may have to install football uprights, and of course it encourages long kicks. To make it more interesting, if a kick misses, the ball should immediately be replaced at mid-field and the opponent gets a free kick from there. The clock continues to run. In the final five minutes of a tie game, the kick is allowed from the 20.

2. This is the open it up rule. In the last five minutes of a tie game, one player from each side comes off and the teams play 10 v. 10 for the remainder. Leagues can opt for a 9 v. 9 option as well.

3. Eliminate offsides. Is there a more infuriating call than a goal taken away due to an offside violation? My answer is no. That's why the rule is gone. If a team wants to cherry pick, good for them. Good luck. It works in basketball. One of my favorite plays in the Celtics vs. Heat game the other night was Nate Robinson getting the layup after a quick turnover and a perfect pass. An opposing defense can always elect to defend that player.

4. When possible, add a one foot high board around the field. Balls that might go out of bounds are now still in play. Leave open space on the corners for corner kicks. Throw ins, which will still be part of the game just come from behind the board – watch that first step kids.

5. Bigger nets, shorter field. 'Nuff said.

6. I call this the extra ball option. If you've ever watched the kids TV show Icarly, you'll hear a voice out of the blue say "Random Dancing" and everybody dances. In my vision, at random, up to three times a game for one minute intervals, a second ball is dropped on the field and whatever happens, happens. Sounds crazy, but some teams actually do this type of drill in practice.

So now you have my new rules for scoring in soccer. Try them out. Tell me what you think. Enjoy.

A few more thoughts for coaches, who I will admit, know way more about the game than I do, are these.

Emphasize scoring. Give gold stars and candy to top scorers. In a close game, feel free to bring that goalie up to use those powerful boots to add to the offense, or just bring in an extra offensive player.

I tried that years ago on a youth team I coached and it worked pretty well. I see lacrosse goalies do it pretty regularly.

And finally, for all the playoff teams we have, especially Scituate, work on those PK's for the playoffs. I'm betting that you're going to have a game or two come down to it.

To each and every team, here's a good luck wish for the playoffs.

Here's hoping you keep me busy the next few weeks.

That one I mean.

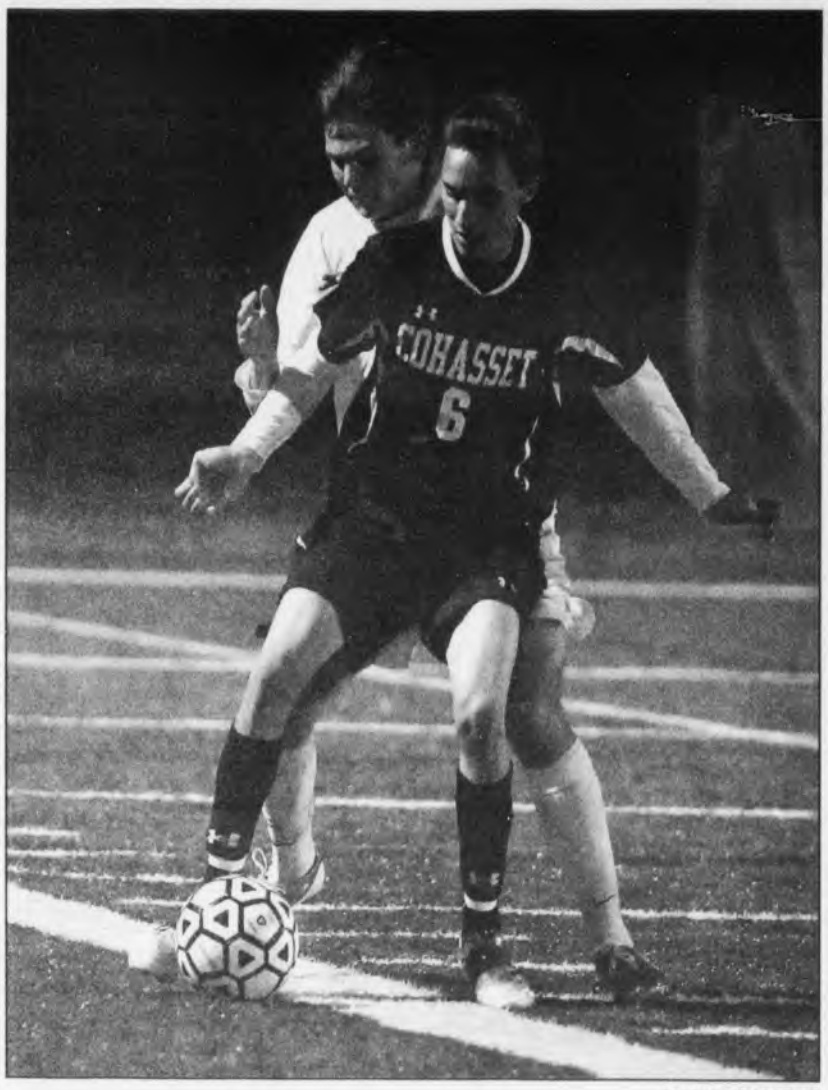
or three really good athletes and a good strong line. They're well coached and don't make mistakes. This will be a big test for us. We'll have to see how we respond after a long bus ride. They're going to come right out at us."

Over the week, Afanasiw said another leader has emerged.



"Jake Kissick has stepped up this week," he said. "Jake is a fierce competitor, but this week I talked to the captains and told them that we're not out of the playoff hunt. There's still a chance. Jake has taken it on himself. He's given pep talks and has lifted the kids. He's shown a lot of intensity."

As for that BCS analogy, the numbers back it up.

"We were 9-1 last year and Abington was 9-1. Abington didn't make the playoffs," Afanasiw said. "In this league it's do or die. We have eight teams and only three non-league games. Four if you don't have a bye week. Most of the season is pressure packed."

Afanasiw said his charges are excited about the game.

"They'll be ready," he said. "They play good, fundamental football and they're smart kids. They're very strong willed. They'll be ready to go."

didn't score tonight, but in the last two games before that, he had two goals and an assist."

Willis also enjoyed the way goalie Sam Richardson played.

"Sam played well," Willis said. "And Jonah Adkins controlled the ball all the way through. Anders Goetz did a good job up front. Scituate is a good team. They get up in front of you. If you have a window, you have to shoot and do it quickly. They close up very quickly."

Willis said Div. 2 Scituate (7-4-6) was as quick as anyone they've seen recently.

"We haven't played defenders that quick in at least a week," he said. "The speed of the game was good. Their defenders are quick. They're a D-2 tournament team."

Cohasset added the extra point to move to 10-3-2 for the season, and still have an outside chance of a South Shore League crown if they get some help.

The Scituate/Cohasset games have been tight the past few seasons, with two teams that know each other battling hard.

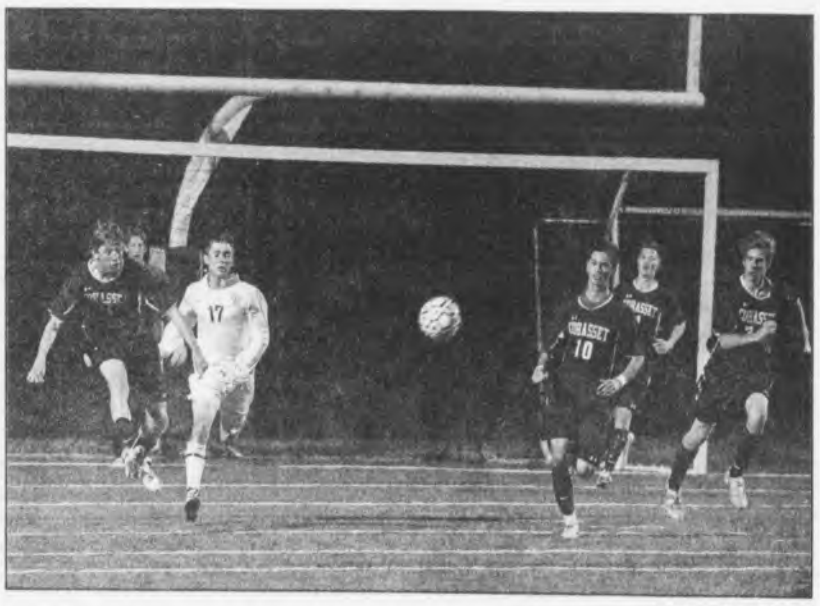
"The last three years we've played, six games have been decided by one goal or have been ties," Willis said. "We know each other. We scrimmage in the summer."

Willis said he'd prefer a win, but will take the draw.

"I don't like ties," he said. "But I'll take the point. It was a good game. Overall it shows where we are and what we need to improve on."

Scituate coach Jamie Forde had similar feelings.

"This was our fifth 0-0 tie," he said. "We have six ties overall. It was a good game. We moved the ball well. I the first half we hit the post and their goalie (Richardson) made some nice saves."



In other Cohasset soccer news, last season's star goalie Will Wise made a bit of news at Bowdoin College when he joined the soccer team and shut out No. 3 ranked Williams to help his Polar Bears to their highest-ever ranking (No. 5).

According to Willis, Wise wasn't planning to play soccer. He's there to play lacrosse, but due to a couple of injuries to goalies, he was asked by coaches to join the team.

Wise did, and found himself in net against Williams, where he went on to shut them out.

Since then, he still hasn't allowed a goal.

Bowdoin is 10-1-2 this season and ranked No. 5 in Division 3.

Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings Week 7

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

The regular season is drawing to a close as most teams wrap up the regular season this week and the rest the week after. Last week, a number of teams Inside the 6 battled each other, and the results had a positive impact for some and a negative for others. We have a new number one and two other changes on the boys' side, and a new entry, a familiar face, on the girls' side. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Oct. 24.

BOYS

1. Weymouth – The Wildcats have climbed up this ladder all season long and finally earned the number one spot after an impressive week on the pitch. Wins over Norwood, Milton, and Needham by a combined score of 8-0 combined with Hingham's first loss of the season, send the Wildcats to the top, and it's going to be tough to knock them from this spot from here on out.

2. Norwell – The loss column is still empty for the Clippers, and that's certainly a good thing. The Norwell boys posted two more victories last week to improve to 11-0-3, all but wrapping up the South Shore League title in the process. It's scary to think what this time will do in the postseason.

3. Duxbury – The Dragons continue their tear. Last week, they bounced back from an Oct. 14 loss to Silver Lake and picked up two wins, a 2-0 decision over Whitman-Hanson, which put Duxbury into the postseason tournament, and a 4-0 victory against North Quincy two days later.

4. Hingham – Taking the biggest slide of the year, the Hingham boys dropped out of the number one position and fell three spots after losing their first game of the season, a 2-0 defeat against Silver Lake. It's hard to fault the Harbormen, but you can't overlook the play of Weymouth, Norwell, and Duxbury last week, three teams that combined to go 7-0.

5. Silver Lake – A week that started on the right foot for the Lakers, knocking off previously unbeaten Hingham, 2-0, followed by a 5-0 win over North Quincy, ended on a down note. The Lakers lost, 1-0, to a struggling Marshfield side.

6. Cohasset – The Skippers are finding it hard to push up from the number six spot, but they continue to play great soccer. They went 1-1 last week, losing to East Bridgewater, and then beating Mashpee, 4-0. All it will take for the Skippers to move up the ladder are a couple more wins and hoping that Hingham or Silver Lake falters this week.

On the bubble: Scituate, Marshfield, Braintree, and Hanover

Week six rankings: 1. Hingham, 2. Weymouth, 3. Norwell, 4. Duxbury, 5. Silver Lake, 6. Cohasset

GIRLS

1. Duxbury – A 1-1-1 week may not seem like enough to keep the Lady Dragons atop the rankings, but they faced New Bedford and the No. 1 team in the state – Whitman-Hanson. They came back to tie New Bedford, only lost by a goal to W-H, and then capped off the week with a 4-0 win over North Quincy to improve to 12-3-1.

2. Weymouth – The Lady Wildcats had a perfect week, going 1-0-2 to remain in first place in the Bay State Carey division. The Weymouth girls are making a strong push to dethrone Duxbury and take over the number one spot for the first time this year.

3. Marshfield – Key injuries reflect Marshfield's recent slide. The Lady Rams did record two clean sheets this week – a scoreless draw against Silver Lake and a 4-0 win over Nauset – but they did suffer a 1-0 loss to Falmouth. After starting the season at 8-0, the Marshfield girls went 1-2-3 over their next six.

4. Plymouth South – The Lady Panthers continue to enjoy their fine season, and they kept on rolling last week to retain their No. 4 ranking. They scored a huge win over Hingham, a team that knocked off Patriot League powerhouses Duxbury and Silver Lake earlier this season.

5. Plymouth North – On the other side of town, the Plymouth North girls' soccer team also kept its momentum going in the right direction. The Lady Eagles did hit a minor snag. In between a scoreless draw against Sandwich and a win over Nauset, that same Nauset team held North to a 1-1 tie midweek.

6. Pembroke – Bouncing back from inside the top six and the bubble, the Lady Titans certainly earned their Inside the 6 return after going 3-0 last week. They beat Scituate, Hanover, and Middleboro to improve to 10-3-2, and they qualified for the postseason in the process and extended their winning streak to four games.

On the bubble: Silver Lake, Norwell, Carver, and Scituate

Week six rankings: 1. Duxbury, 2. Weymouth, 3. Marshfield, 4. Plymouth South, 5. Plymouth North, 6. Silver Lake

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@cnc.com.

3. Marshfield (3)	3. Hingham (3)
4. Norwell (4)	4. Pembroke (4)
5. Duxbury (5)	5. Norwell (5)

This Week's High 5

Mike DiTocchio, Pembroke. It's nice to be good, it's even nicer to be deep, and Pembroke is both. Sitting its top seven runners for its matchup with North Quincy/ Quincy, the senior DiTocchio got to lead teammates Patrick Cunningham and James Coner to a 1-2-3 finish. DiTocchio pacing the way in 14:26. Coach Zopatti's 8-14 runners, champions at the Brown Invitational JV race, would be a good bet for a trip to All States all by themselves. Incredible depth!

Justin Knuth, Norwell. In watching Coach Chuck Martin's team this fall, I have been saying that if they find a solid option at 5th, they will be the favorites to trophy at Div. 4 in EMass, along with Seekonk. Knuth seems to failed to get that memo, instead leapfrogging his teammates and becoming the Clippers' 3rd runner, behind Evan Cannata and Owen Wiggins. Knuth's 5000-meter jaunt at Carver in 17:42 is a remarkable one, since he has not competed for Norwell in their first several invitational meets. Norwell is 6-0 and on track for yet another South Shore League title.

Julie McConville, Hingham. McConville's 19:30 time on the Whitman-Hanson 5000 meter course was enough to win the individual race in the tight dual meet, but W-H came on top, thanks to a strong pack led by the fabulous Baker twins. Hingham lost for the first time in the Patriot League, but McConville, only a sophomore, is quickly becoming one of the region's best young talents. With her at the top, Coach Livvy Kates's squad will be in the hunt for a trip to All States at Gardner, but McConville looks solid for a trip there herself.

Norwell Girls. Like the boys, the Clipperettes are on the verge of another South Shore League title, something that seems to come first nature to them. Vanessa Lyle and Sarah Perfetuo have been given ink in this space this season, but new faces seem to joining in the fun, as Margaret Hayes, Liz Driscoll, and Catherine Steck completed a sweep of Carver to run the record to 6-0. With the new six-division format at EMass, Dover-Sherborn and Bishop Fenwick are favorites on paper, but neither team can run and hide from Norwell's tight pack.

Erica Gagnon, Archbishop Williams. Her short, storied XC career (at least the regular season) came to a close on Tuesday at Pond Meadow with a dominating 20:11 win over Lowell Catholic. Archies improved to 3-4, but Gagnon will set her sights on Franklin Park and Gardner on Nov. 13 and Nov. 20, where she will be a favorite to come away with top 10 finishes in both the Div. 4 EMass and Div. 2 All State races.

Meet to Watch (Week 9):

Patriot League Championship at Silver Lake. Most of the locally ranked teams were on display on Tuesday as the Patriot League sorted out its best teams. Whitman-Hanson won the girls meet, with Pembroke second and Hingham third. On the boys side it was Pembroke taking the honors, followed by Whitman-Hanson, Silver Lake and Hingham. The individual titles went to Pembroke's Heather Connick and Chelsea Savage, followed by Hingham's Julie McConville. The boys race went to Pembroke's Wesley Gallagher, followed by Whitman-Hanson's Tyler Sullivan.

It was almost a triple play for the Cohasset High School boys golf team.

The Skippers won the South Shore League regular-season title with a 13-1 record, ahead of Mashpee (11-3), East Bridgewater (10-4) and Abington (8-6).

Cohasset's Morgan Grasz captured the league tournament individual crown by a single stroke last Thursday, shooting a 1-over-par 35 at Ridder Farm Golf Club in East Bridgewater.

However, the Skippers were nosed out for the team championship by East Bridgewater, which had 114 points. Cohasset was runner-up with 115, followed by Mashpee (120), Abington (124), Harwich (126), Norwell (127), Rockland (127) and Carver (136).

The tournament was shortened to nine holes because of rain. Rockland's John Slieff and EB's Chris Pilkington each shot 36 in the individual tournament.

CHS, SHS welcome French 'penpals'

Exchange students attend soccer and field hockey workouts, play rehearsal and band practice, as well as a myriad of other activities in which our students participate.

On Wednesday, Oct. 13th, 43 Cohasset and Scituate high schools students anxiously awaited the arrival of their 43 penpals (or "correspondents") from the French town of Sucy-en-Brie, home to the Lycée Christophe Colomb just 20 km SE of Paris. At around 6:15 pm, two buses arrived from Logan bearing 43 students, teachers, and five delegates from Sucy and cheers went up on board the buses and in the parking lot, as the third biannual exchange between these three high schools officially got under way following 10 months of intense preparation on both sides of the Atlantic. Although meeting for the first time in person, these students had been acquainted for many months through the wonders of technology and greeted each other like long-lost friends.

For the next 12 days, each French student would share the home of his or her American correspondent, as well as his or her busy schedule of school, sports, music, dance, play practice, and recreation. After reporting to either CHS or SHS each morning for the first class of the day, the French students embark on daily excursions with their own teachers, covering sites from New York City to Boston's Freedom Trail and Black Heritage Trail, to Cambridge, Salem, Plymouth, and even Martha's Vineyard. Each evening, the American correspondents await their return and fit in as much "exchange" as possible before returning to school the next day. Exchange students attend soccer and field hockey workouts, play rehearsal and band practice, as well as a myriad of other activities in which our students participate. Over a weekend spent with their host families, CHS, SHS and Sucy students would attend the CHS homecoming football game and dance (with cheerleaders, just like on TV!), visit corn-mazes and college campuses, and purchase Celtics gear and Harvard sweatshirts during the essential shopping trips to Boston.

The students' arrival coincided with that of five delegates from the town government of Sucy-en-Brie who came to explore Scituate and Cohasset and, ultimately, to sign a pact of friendship and cooperation with the Town of Scituate. The goal of the pact is to extend the exchange between France and the South Shore to include cultural groups, interns, senior citizens, Rotary Club members, and more. The official Sucy delegation stayed for 5 days in the homes of members of Cohasset and Scituate faculty members and residents.

In Cohasset, the Sucy delegates were at the South Shore Arts Center on Friday, Oct. 15 to meet artists and other town representatives interested in the exchange. In Scituate, Front Street was lined with French flags and receptions took place at the HS and the Scituate Maritime Center. The visit of the delegates culminated in the signing of the agreement between Scituate and Sucy at the G.A.R. Hall in Scituate on Saturday, Oct.16th. Residents and students of Cohasset joined Scituate students, families, business people, and town representatives to witness the historic signing of the pact take place on an 18th century table provided by the Scituate Historical Society. Significantly, the pen used to sign the agreement was crafted by the late Mr. George Fortin, long-time CHS French teacher and advocate of student exchanges.

In February 2011, the roles will be reversed — the French students will host the Americans for 12 days of excursions, activities, discovery, and the official signing of the friendship pact at the Sucy town hall. The CHS and SHS students and their teachers will be accompanied by a delegation of representatives from the South Shore. Individuals or organizations wishing to be part of the delegation should please get in touch with Mrs. Beth Marat (bmarat@cohassetk12.org) or Mrs. Patricia Jacquart (pjacquart@scit.org).

It is significant to note that exchanges such as this are tradition at Cohasset HS that dates back several decades. The current relationship with the Lycée Christophe Colomb began in 2006 when three teachers from Sucy and three teachers from Cohasset/Scituate began the laborious but exciting process of planning for the first group of 34 students (14 from Cohasset) to come here from Sucy and to host our 34 American students. Since 2006, the exchange has taken place every other year, this being the third and largest group to participate with 43 on each side (25 from Cohasset) plus four Cohasset/Scituate chaperones, not to mention the hundreds of colleagues and family members who are involved.

All are invited to stop by Cohasset High School this Sunday afternoon, Oct. 24th, to see for yourself the wonderful community of families and faculty from both Cohasset and Scituate who will be on hand to wish our French friends "Bon Voyage" and "A bientôt" through a sea of tears and hugs.

For more information on the Exchange and future cooperative efforts between Sucy, Scituate, and Cohasset, please contact Mrs. Beth Marat (bmarat@cohassetk12.org) or Mrs. Patricia Jacquart (pjacquart@scit.org).

Focus groups for 'super search'

Cohasset School Committee has engaged the New England School Development Council to assist them in the search process for a new Superintendent of Schools.

An integral part of the process involves parent and community participation in focus groups. The groups are designed to obtain participant input about the attributes, experience and knowledge that the new superintendent should possess. The groups also provide an opportunity for participants to identify immediate tasks that the new superintendent should address.

The focus group sessions for parents, community members, school council and PSO, etc. will be conducted in the Cohasset High School Library at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, Nov. 9. The event will last approximately 1 to 1 1/2 hours.

All those interested in participating should call Jane Pescatore in the business office to register for the session. The number is 781-383-6108. Focus groups are designed to serve a maximum of 25 participants; therefore, it is important to register. THE GREAT HALLOWEEN CANDY BUY BACK!

Money for You - Candy for the Troops!

One area dentist is redefining the phrase "put your money where your mouth is." This Halloween, trick-or-treaters can bring their excess candy to Abington Family Dental Care in Abington and receive $1 per pound ($10 maximum). Dr. Mike Thomas is leading this anti-decay movement by giving away dollars and toothbrushes in exchange for cavity-provoking candy.

"Ditch the candy, that's what we're saying. Visiting your dentist twice a year and brushing and flossing daily are great preventative measures, but doing away with excess sweets altogether would really give your teeth a healthy boost," says Dr. Mike Thomas from Abington Family Dental Care. "Kids can still have all of the fun of trick-or-treating, and now their piggy banks will benefit as well."

HOW TO PARTICIPATE:

Candy will be collected at Abington Family Dental Care at 469 Washington St. in Abington, Saturday, November 6, 2010, from 11:00 am to 2:00 pm. The candy must be unopened. Please no bites. It will then be shipped to our troops overseas.

Dr. Mike Thomas is one of three dentists at Abington Family Dental Care in Abington, which emphasizes general family dental care as well as cosmetic procedures. Dr. Thomas and staff are available to provide more information at 781-878-2190, or visit Abington Family Dental Care on-line at www.abingtonfamilydental.com.

Tosca dinner to benefit JDRF

Tosca Restaurant in Hingham will host a fall-inspired Sunday dinner featuring seasonal drinks and food to benefit the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation at 6 p.m., on Sunday, Nov. 7. The event will highlight a reception with seasonal hors d'oeuvres followed by a four-course dinner paired with a selection of red and white wines. Space is limited and reservations may be made by calling Tosca at 781-740-0080 or in person with a manager at Tosca. The cost is $100 per person and checks may be made payable to JDRF; credit cards will also be accepted. One hundred percent of the funds raised will go directly to JDRF.

The Tosca event is also part of Team Hingham's participation in the JDRF Walk to Cure Diabetes. For the seventh year, families from Hingham who have children with Type 1 Diabetes came together to raise funds to find a cure. Although the walk took place Oct. 2, Team Hingham is still raising funds for JDRF.

Type 1, or juvenile, diabetes strikes children suddenly, makes them dependent on insulin for life and carries the constant threat of devastating complications. Type 1 diabetes is an autoimmune disease in which the body's immune system attacks and destroys the insulin-producing cells of the pancreas. While the causes are not yet entirely understood, scientists believe that both genetic and environmental factors are involved.

June Blair, a Hingham resident whose 16-year-old daughter was diagnosed with diabetes when she was 4 years old, helped to organize this event with Kane and Long. Blair said, "Living with diabetes is difficult and life threatening, and is only controlled through rigorous attention to managing daily care and insulin injections. Unfortunately Team Hingham has been growing, with three new children in town diagnosed within the last 12 months."

For more information about JDRF, call Blair at 781-741-5064 or contact JDRF at www.jdrf.org or call 800-533-CURE.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

ALEXIS KIMBALL

My love for singing started at an early age. Whether whistling to the radio or singing in the school choir, I have always carried a tune in my head and in my heart. It didn't occur to me that I actually had any talent until I was approached by a member of my church congregation. He'd heard me singing and offered to teach me private voice lessons, for free. It turned out that he, Arvid Knutsen, was president of the National Opera Association and had been given a similar opportunity, when he was a child, to further his music career. He told me he needed to repay the gift someone had given to him. I felt honored.

After studying with Mr. Knutsen for four years of high school, I applied to music conservatories across the country. Unlike my classmates, I not only had to write essays and submit applications, I also had to prepare cassettes (yes, we used to use those) and personally audition at most of my choice schools. After a momentous road trip with my mom to the Midwest, I fell in love with the campus at Indiana University. As a bonus, they also had a great business school, just in case I realized that I didn't like my major. Well, I loved my major and completed a bachelor of music degree in vocal performance.

When the time came to start my new career, I hopped on a plane to Rome, Italy, with a few dollars in my pocket and a dream. Eight weeks later, a little homesick and a bit lonely, I returned to the states, back to a bustling metropolis where people spoke my own language. Eventually, with the same dream and a few less dollars, I arrived in the lovely city of Boston. While trying my luck with auditions in this new and overwhelmingly competitive city I heard about a smaller organization, South Shore Conservatory. Their Opera by the Bay company was performing "Amahl and the Night Visitors," so I quickly jumped into the choir and started to make some contacts.

Alexis Kimball's joy is to introduce music to children with a hope that they see their own career path in the making.

It is with great pleasure and enthusiasm that I perform the part of Hansel in Opera by the Bay's "Hansel and Gretel" on Nov. 6, 7:30 p.m., at South Shore Conservatory.

I immediately felt a very warm and inviting invitation to join in this group of singers. This is what music should be like. I hadn't realized that I had lost the love I once had while I was climbing through numbers and singing on stage after stage, stressing about getting a role. I finally felt like I had found a family.

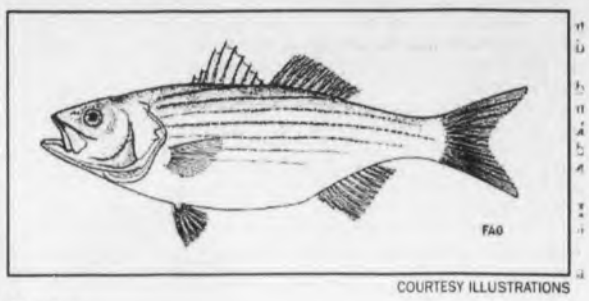
It is with great pleasure and enthusiasm that I perform the part of Hansel in Opera by the Bay's "Hansel and Gretel" on Nov. 6, 7:30 p.m., at South Shore Conservatory, One Conservatory Drive, Hingham. My joy is to introduce music to children with a hope that they see their own career path in the making. And you never know, maybe I'll meet the one to continue the chain in steering a young voice toward a wonderful career. See you at the show.

For more information and tickets for Opera by the Bay's "Hansel & Gretel," please visit www.sscmusic.org. The production will be repeated on Sunday, Nov. 7, 4 p.m., at the Ellison Center for the Arts in Duxbury.

Fish in the Weir River – Part 1

WEIR RIVER ESTUARY

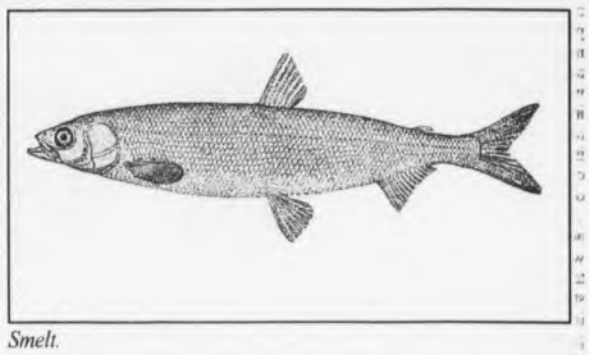
WOODS & VAN HAMM



This is the first of two articles about fish in the Weir River and its estuary leading up to a talk by Massachusetts Fish and Wildlife Commissioner Mary Griffin on "River Restoration" sponsored by the Weir River Watershed Association at 7 pm on Wednesday, Nov. 10 at the Weir River Estuary Center, 333 George Washington Blvd., Hull.

In the Weir River estuary and its associated Hingham and Hull Bays, the colonists upon first arriving to this area would have found many of the same species that we have today. Winter flounder, striped bass, bluefish, Atlantic silverside, ninespine stickleback, mummichug and northern pipefish all were most likely common then as they are now.

However, the freshwater part of the Weir River would have been a very different system than the one we know today and thus would have supported different fish than we have in the river today. Starting from the estuary (where the freshwater and saltwater meet) going upstream to where Foundry Pond is today, the fish that would have frequented this area would have included rainbow smelt. In fact this fishery was so abundant it was considered one of the largest smelt runs in the state up until the late 1990s. Like herring, smelt are anadromous, living their lives in salt water and returning to freshwater streams to spawn. Anadromous fish are important to the ocean food chain.



Herring were also prevalent. Both alewife and river herring would return to spawn in the spring to the freshwater parts of the Weir River, presumably going all the way to the headwaters and into the tributaries. The adults would leave their fertilized eggs and return to the saltwater. Over the summer the eggs would hatch to small fry who would migrate out to the ocean in the fall.

American eel, too, would have also been seen in the Weir River. The American eels have a particularly interesting life cycle, changing shape and size along the way.

Eels from Greenland to Central America all migrate out from their resident freshwater streams in the autumn and return to the Sargasso Sea to spawn and die. Their offspring return to the freshwater streams as glass eels (so called because they are transparent). Some eels are thought to live for up to 30 years.

Other kinds of freshwater fish would have been more prevalent moving upstream into the main stem of the Weir and its tributaries, the Plymouth River, Crooked Meadow Brook, Accord Brook, Fulling Mill Brook, Eel River and Tower Brook. In these cold freshwater rivers besides the young alewife and river herring would be Brook Trout, White Sucker and Tessellated Darter.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF NOV. 8, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your honesty continues to impress everyone who needs reassurance about a project. But be careful you don't lose patience with those who are still not ready to act.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Pushing others too hard to do things your way could cause resentment and raise more doubts. Instead, take more time to explain why your methods will work.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be more considerate of those close to you before making a decision that could have a serious effect on their lives. Explain your intentions and ask for their advice.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might have to defend a workplace decision you plan to make. Colleagues might back you up on this, but it's the facts that will ultimately win the day for you. Good luck.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat's co-workers might not be doing enough to help get that project finished. Your roars might stir things up, but gentle purrr-suasion will prove to be more effective.

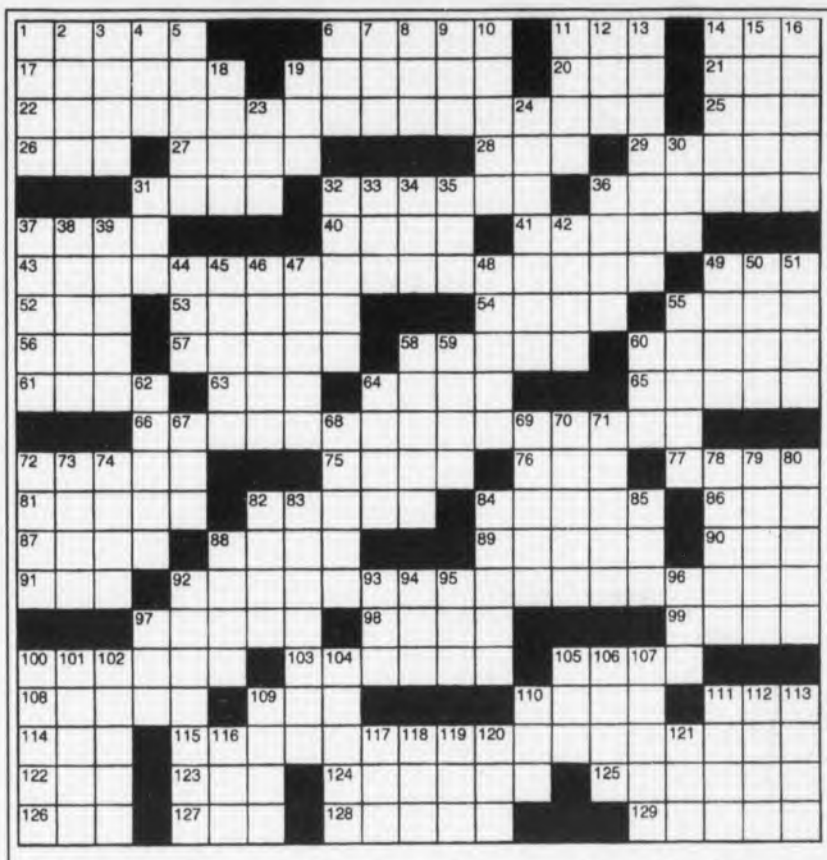
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone you care for needs help with a problem. Give it lovingly and without judging the situation. Whatever you feel you should know will be revealed later.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) While you're to be admired for how you handled recent workplace problems, be careful not to react the same way to a new situation until all the facts are in.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Rely on your keen instincts as well as the facts at hand when dealing with a troubling situation. Be patient. Take things one step at a time as you work through it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your curiosity leads you to ask questions. However, the answers might not be what you hoped to hear. Don't reject them without checking them out.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Be careful not to tackle a problem without sufficient facts. Even sure-footed Goats need to know where they'll land before leaping off a mountain path.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Appearances can be deceiving. You need to do more investigating before investing your time, let alone your money, in something that might have some hidden flaws.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your recent stand on an issue could make you the focus of more attention than you would like. But you'll regain your privacy, as well as more time with loved ones, by week's end.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

ON REVIEW, 'CONVICTION' STANDS

Film Review

AL ALEXANDER

Conviction (B)

Abra (a scene-stealing Minnie Driver) helps Betty Anne (Hilary Swank) with her case.

It's been a tough year for Martha Coakley. First it was Scott Brown denying her "Ted's seat" in the U.S. Senate. Now Hollywood is throwing a wrench into the Massachusetts attorney general's re-election bid by releasing "Conviction" just two weeks before Bay Staters head to the polls.

How damning is this tale of her stubborn refusal to release an innocent man from prison? Well, let's just say if she's smart, Coakley will urge the electorate to wait until after Nov. 2 to see what's shaping up to be a surefire crowd-pleaser jet propelled by Hilary Swank and Sam Rockwell.

They play Betty Anne and Kenny Waters, who are extremely close siblings torn apart by a corrupt legal system that cost Kenny 18 years of his life after being wrongly convicted of the May 1980 murder of Ayer waitress Katharina Brow.

You've no doubt heard about how Betty Anne, a money-strapped high school dropout, returned to the classroom (while working full time) to earn her GED, a college diploma and a law degree, all with the goal of acquiring enough legal training to enable her to uncover the evidence that will set Kenny free.

She found that proof in DNA analysis, and Kenny was freed in 2001, despite the objections of Coakley, who was the Middlesex County district attorney. But not before we hear a perturbed Betty Anne defiantly call Coakley an "evil bitch."

It's a moment so rousing — thanks to Swank and director Tony Goldwyn — you may let go with a little fist pump. They earn that burst of emotion by skillfully depicting an inspiring tale about one woman's relentless determination to see justice done, even at the risk of sacrificing her husband, kids and sanity to get there.

The heart of the film rests in the deep devotion between Kenny and Betty Anne. We watch Betty Anne work overtime to keep her brother's spirits up in the wake of repeated setbacks. Swank and Rockwell handle these encounters with aplomb, as each thrill and disappointment unfolds.

Of the two, Rockwell leaves the stronger impression, simply because Kenny insists on cranking every moment in life up to 11. Rockwell flawlessly captures the suddenness of Kenny's wild mood swings, happy and gregarious one moment, smashing a beer bottle into a fellow bar patron's face the next. And that ability to so seamlessly shift between the light and dark sides of Kenny's personality make it easy to understand why Rockwell is generating so much Oscar buzz.

To their credit, Goldwyn and screenwriter Pamela Gray (the same pair responsible for the art-house hit, "A Walk on the Moon") rarely pull any punches with Kenny's frightening bursts of anger. As a result, you're never quite sure how you feel about him. Which is in line with a film that, like our legal process, asks us to judge him strictly on what he may or may not have done, not who he is as a person.

Swank, fashioning quite a career out of playing poor, marginalized women, also forgoes the warm-and-fuzzy approach in providing her character a razor-sharp edge that can make it hard to empathize with Betty Anne, particularly when she's venting her mounting frustrations on her kids and/or her best friend (and fellow law student), Abra Rice, played by a scene-stealing Minnie Driver.

It's fun watching the two women pore over law books and rummage through boxes of evidence looking for the smoking gun that will exonerate Kenny. And Swank and Driver couldn't be more perfect together, lending dignity and resolve to what easily could have become blue-collar caricatures.

"Conviction" runs aground in its oversimplification of the nuts and bolts of Betty Anne's quest. Too often, Goldwyn glosses over the legalities, failing to adequately explain why the cards are so stacked against Kenny. Nor does he take the time to fully explore the siblings' emotional cores. We see how close and devoted they are, but we don't always feel it.

Also missing is a clear motive for Ayer police officer Nancy Taylor's (an underutilized Melissa Leo) zeal to frame Kenny for the crime. Goldwyn should have provided more than a few hints as to why Taylor coerced two of Kenny's ex-flames (including Juliette Lewis' drunken wastrel, Rosemary Perry) to blatantly perjure themselves. Such scenes would be far more useful than screen time wasted on romanticized flashbacks of Kenny and Betty Anne stirring up mischief while bouncing from home to home as foster children.

These missteps — and others like them — often make "Conviction" feel more like a Lifetime movie than a feature film. But every time you're tempted to give up on it, Swank, Driver or Rockwell lures you back in.

Rated R. "Conviction" contains adult language, nudity, sexual situations and violence.

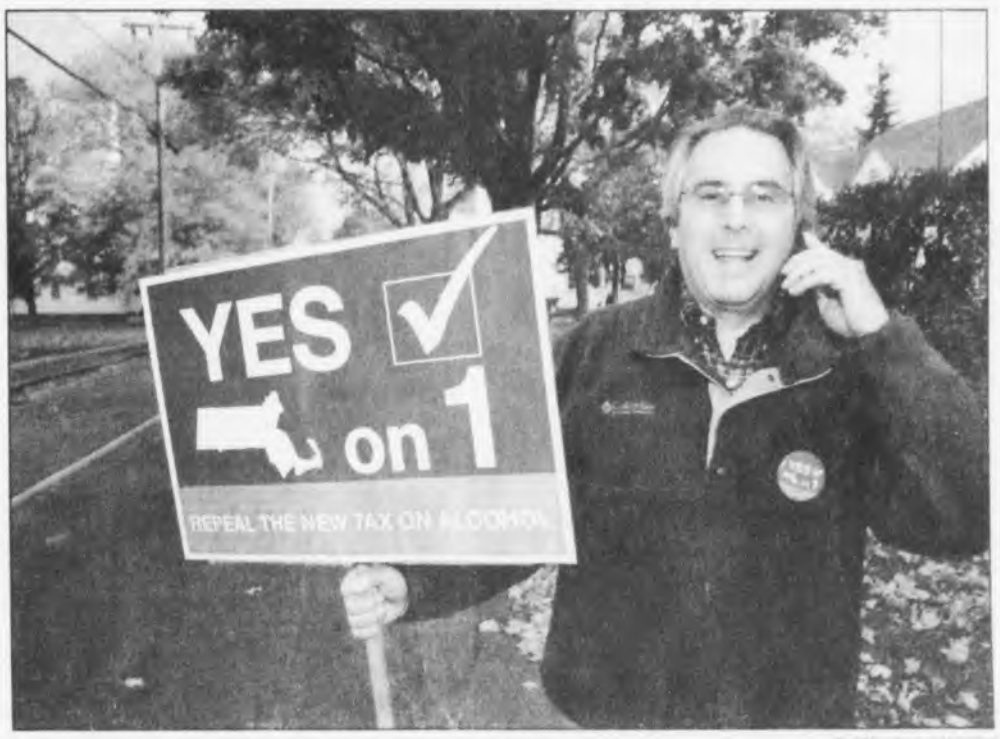
State Election

Busy day at the polls

Local voters liked Bradley, Hedlund, Baker and Keating



By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When the dust settled on the long road to this week's state mid-term elections Tuesday night it was the democrats that largely ruled the day. Statewide results favored democratic candidates nearly across the board, but that wasn't entirely the case here in Cohasset.

Cohasset residents chose Democratic Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating of Quincy in the 10th Congressional District, Republican Charlie Baker for governor (who did not win the statewide election), incumbent Republican Bob Hedlund for state Senate and incumbent Democrat Garrett Bradley of Hingham for state representative.

In a higher than anticipated turnout just under 70 percent of Cohasset voters, at total of 3,822, made their way to the polls on Tuesday. Town Clerk Marion Douglas said voter traffic was

Food pantry needs help

Need is growing, donations are down

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Like the families they serve, the Cohasset Food Pantry is struggling.

The economy is affecting people across the board so while the need in the community is growing, pantry donations are not what they once were.

For more than 20 years the Cohasset Food Pantry has provided essential groceries to those who cannot afford them on their own. From canned vegetables to pasta to paper goods for some residents the food pantry is a lifeline. Some turn to the pantry for a short time, others rely on the food pantry for years.

"Our clients are our neighbors, our friends, our parents, our brothers and our sisters. They are people we know and people who need a little bit of help," said Jane Corry, co-director of the food pantry with fellow Cohasset resident Moira Stansell.

The demand for the food pantry's services has nearly quadrupled since 2008. In 2008, the food pantry had about 20 regular clients. Now, they are providing services to 75 individuals and families in Cohasset. Each week it seems a new person approaches them in need, Corry said.

And keeping up with the demand is becoming increasingly difficult, Corry said.

Clients come to the food pantry every other week and leave with a bag of paper goods, some meat (chicken, hamburger and, if available, hot dogs), canned vegetables and other sundries. They are also given a voucher for

Hedlund hails Greenbush study

Calls for oversight hearing; brakes on South Coast rail project

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Could state Senator Robert Hedlund have been wrong about Greenbush?

Yes – in one sense: The train line's ridership is below even what Hedlund expected.

The Weymouth Republican and long-time Greenbush critic emphatically says: "I was wrong" when reminded about the fact he fully expected that Greenbush would be "over-capacity" by day one.

Hedlund's long-time objections to restoration of the Greenbush branch of the Old Colony Railroad were not over expected ridership, but over its rising cost and lack of benefits environmentally, and in terms of reducing traffic from Route 3 and Route 3A.

"My point was that even if Greenbush met projections – it was not a cost-efficient project when looking at the big picture," Hedlund said. "It was not going to have air quality benefits and not take traffic off the roads."

The state senator — who represents the Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes the Greenbush towns of Weymouth, Hingham, Scituate and Cohasset — is making noise about Greenbush again in light of a recent, in-depth study commissioned by the MBTA on the three-year-old railroad line.

The new study conducted by the Metropolitan Planning Organization on the restored Greenbush Line – which started service in October 2007 – paints an interesting picture.

Police Community Liaison Board announced

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In an attempt enhance trust and maintain a strong partnership with the community, the Cohasset Police Department is proud to announce the Police Community Liaison Board (PCLB), Chief Mark DeLuca said.

The PCLB is comprised of Cohasset residents, police officers, and the Police Chief. The board will meet regularly with its primary goal being to improve communication between the residents and the police department. The PCLB's mission is to form, maintain, and continuously improve communication between the Cohasset Police Department and the community to enhance trust and cooperation with an overall goal of superior police services to residents.

Residents often time don't feel comfortable contacting their local police agency to complain, criticize or simply ask questions, DeLuca said.

Below are the names and e-mail addresses of the resident members. Their e-mail addresses are accessed by them only and will not be shared with anyone else, police said.

MV crashes

- The 41-year-old Hull woman seriously injured in last Thursday's (Oct. 28) accident in front of Shaw's Plaza involving the Ford Windstar van she was driving and a 2003 International ramp truck, has been released from the hospital, police said. She has been cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic. Witnesses on scene reported that the van was exiting Shaw's Plaza and pulled out in front of the ramp truck, which was traveling south on Route 3A. The van was totaled by the impact on the driver's side door. The International ramp truck had minor front-end damage.
- At 2:09 p.m. on Monday (Oct. 25), at 37-year-old Scituate man in a 1997 Nissan Pathfinder was pulling into a parking spot at Shaw's Plaza when his foot slipped off the brake and onto the gas. The Pathfinder, which had to be towed, sustained substantial damage to the front end when it rammed into a light pole, police said. The driver did not report any injuries and was not cited in the mishap, which occurred on private property.
- A Cohasset detective at Tedeschi Plaza witnessed an accident at 1:27 p.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 27) involving a 2007 Honda Pilot operated by a 45-year-old woman from Ireland who is staying in Scituate. Police said she caused minor damage when she backed into an unoccupied 1997 Honda Accord. The Accord was registered to a business in Weston.
- At 7:30 a.m. on Thursday (Oct. 28), a 40-year-old Marshfield man in a 2001 Subaru Forester was headed south on Route 3A approaching the traffic light at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Beechwood Street when he "rear-ended" a 2005 Chevrolet pickup truck operated by a 43-year-old Cohasset woman. The Cohasset woman, who had stopped at the light, was transported to the hospital by ambulance and her truck was towed. The Marshfield man was cited for failure to use care at an intersection and for following too closely. He did not report any injuries and his vehicle was drivable, police said. Police said he reported slamming on the brakes to avoid hitting the pickup truck but slid due to the road conditions.
- At 4:17 a.m. on Sunday (Oct. 31), police responded to calls about a single-car accident near 155 Border St. involving a 2000 Ford Ranger pickup truck that had hit a water hydrant and a stonewall. Police said the pickup was operated by a 17-year-old Cohasset girl, who had a learner's permit but no license; her passenger was a 15-year-old boy. There were no reported injuries. The girl is being summonsed to court on the charges of operating a motor vehicle without a license; failure to drive in marked lanes and negligent operation.
- At 3:06 p.m. on Sunday (Oct. 31), National Grid notified Cohasset police about a utility pole that was broken in half on Lamberts Lane by the Cohasset Golf Club. The police had not received any calls about an accident but retrieved evidence at the scene that included some pieces of an SUV. Through investigation, police tracked the SUV to an 18-year-old Cohasset man and went to his house where the pieces matched the 2003 Chevrolet Blazer. Police said the teen had left a party a 2 a.m. that morning, hit the pole and left the scene. He is being summonsed to court to face charges of leaving the scene after property damage; negligent operation of a motor vehicle; failure to stay in marked lanes and operating an unregistered motor vehicle.

Graffiti

A 61-year-old resident of the 100 Pond Street condominium complex reported on Monday (Oct. 25) seeing graffiti on a garden shed during his afternoon walk. Police said the graffiti, which included the Cohasset phone prefix "383" and illustrations about smoking pot, was both on the outside and inside of the shed. Similar graffiti was also located on a wooden rail fence in the area. Police collected spray paint cans at the scene and will check them for fingerprints that will be kept on file even if they do not match anyone currently in the system.

Bomb drill

The Cohasset police and fire departments conducted a bomb threat drill at Cohasset Middle High School last Tuesday (Oct. 26) at about 9:20 a.m. Police said they conduct a range of drills at all three Cohasset schools throughout the year. The drills provide training for police and fire as well as for school staff and students. Police said it is made clear at the time that the exercise is a drill.

Smashed pumpkins

Police believe a rival football team may be responsible for some smashed pumpkins on the synthetic turf on Alumni Field last Wednesday (Oct. 27). Apparently some pumpkins were taken from the Pumpkin Patch. There was no permanent damage to the field but the area had to be cleaned, police said. Athletic Director Ron Ford has asked for extra patrols.

Harassment

A 44-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police last week that she has been receiving harassing emails of a sexual nature for several weeks. The emails contain links to adult websites. She is not sure if her ex-boyfriend is responsible. The case has been turned over to detectives for investigation.

Construction accident

A 38-year-old Fall River man was injured in a construction-related accident last week at the Cook Estate off Sohier Street. The call came in at about 8:34 a.m. on Thursday (Oct. 28). The man was attempting to bolt an attachment to a backhoe when the hydraulic arm slipped and severed one of his fingers. He was taken to the hospital by ambulance. OSHA was notified and is investigating the accident along with Cohasset detectives.

iPhone stolen

A 53-year-old Cohasset dad reported last Thursday (Oct. 28) that his 14-year-old daughter's iPhone valued at $720 had been stolen the previous day at Cohasset Middle High School. There are no suspects, police said.

Trailer stolen

A caller notified police last Friday (Oct. 29) at 8:45 a.m. to report that his 12-ton tandem axel trailer had been stolen from his property. The trailer is valued at $2,500. The caller did not have a plate or VIN number, police said. They need more information about the trailer to conduct an investigation.

Arrest

A 50-year-old Scituate man was arrested for unlicensed operation and failure to show up for jury duty last Wednesday (Oct. 27) at about 11:42 a.m. An officer on patrol observed a man hanging around in a Jeep Wrangler on Depot Court for about 20-30 minutes. The officer ran the plate and the computer revealed the registered owner was wanted on a warrant for failure to show for jury duty. The computer also revealed his license was expired.

Cash theft

A 24-year-old former employee of Shaw's is being summonsed to court for larceny over $250 after police said he admitted to stealing money from the cash register at the supermarket to support his scratch ticket and video game addiction. Loss prevention called police last Friday (Oct. 29) about the Scituate resident. They said he admitted to stealing money that amounted to about $1400 over the past several months.

Mailboxes

Several mailboxes were knocked over in the Bayberry, Clay Spring Road and Pond Street area on Saturday (Oct. 30), police said. A caller reported a group of youth in the area at around 9:17 p.m. Police saw the group and two boys took off. The officer lost the two boys in the woods. Police have some leads and the incident is under investigation.

Empty house

Police are keeping an eye on an empty house off Beechwood Street after a concerned caller reported last week seeing a lot of recent activity there. Police said the house is in foreclosure. Investigation revealed a side-door had been kicked in but did not find any other damage.

Residents invited to Super Search focus group

Meets Tuesday Nov. 9 at 7 p.m.

As many people in the community are aware, the School Committee has begun the process of searching for a new Superintendent of Schools. To that end, the Cohasset School Committee has engaged the services of the New England School Development Council (NESDEC) to assist in this important task.

Ms. Joanne Rys/Dr. Charles Ferris, search consultants with NESDEC, will be assisting the School Committee throughout the search process. As part of the process, NESDEC will be conducting a series of focus groups on Tuesday, Nov. 9, with a group scheduled for parents and community members at 7 pm. at the middle-high school library. Each focus group session will last approximately 60 to 90 minutes.

Focus groups are an important part of the process because they are designed to obtain the input of teachers, support staff, administrators, School Committee members, parents and community members about the attributes, experience and knowledge they believe the new superintendent should possess. The focus groups also provide an opportunity for participants to identify immediate tasks on which the new superintendent should concentrate.

The Cohasset School Committee and NESDEC hope that residents will be able to participate. Please contact Jane Pescatore in the CPS business office to sign up for a focus group next Tuesday, Nov. 9. She can be reached via email at jpescatore@cohassetk12.org or by phone at 781-383-6108. Information on the superintendent search can be obtained under the School Committee tab at www.cohassetk12.org.

Choices in the Digital Age

By Marylou Lawrence
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Navigating technology in electronic media can be daunting for even the most resolute consumer, regardless of age or expertise. Throw into the vortex the number of digital devices available — many with overlapping programs, wide ranges of prices and monthly charges, and hundreds of apps which could deliver enough content to keep users programmed for the rest of their days.

Though most people recognize the potential these devices have for their personal lives, it's bewildering to sort through all the variables, especially when troubled by misgivings that today's cutting edge find could be tomorrow's fossil. Like Sisyphus, one could just keep plugging away, two steps forward, three back.

Though most people recognize the potential these devices have for their personal lives, it's bewildering to sort through all the variables...

But despair not! Paul Pratt Memorial Library's "Next Chapter" series offers more enlightened alternatives in Barbara Andrews' two upcoming workshops — Current Topics in Technology and Digital Photography Basics.

On Tuesday, Nov. 9, at 10:30 a.m., in the Current Topics in Technology workshop, Barbara Andrews will talk about iPhone, iPad, Smart Phones, iPod Touch, Kindle, Nook, Skype, WiFi capability, and some of the other new devices and services on the market that deliver content to library users; she will unravel the myriad free applications that are available for these devices; and she will explore what's new with eBooks, downloadable audiobooks, blogs, Podcasts, and open source software.

On Friday, Nov. 19, at 10:30, in the Digital Photography Basics workshop, Andrews will describe how to take better digital photographs by exploring all the features available on digital cameras (for example, in addition to automatic features, there are many more options to easily adjust setting for close ups, different lighting situations, etc.); she will cover topics such as file formats, transferring images, storage options, selecting a camera (compact SLR), data recovery, and free services to share photos with family and friends. Owning a camera is not necessary for attendance at this workshop, but if you do have one, bring it along with your manual.

Barbara Andrews established Andrews Consulting to provide training and consulting services to libraries, other organizations, and library users. A librarian and photographer, Andrews has conducted workshops in Microsoft Applications, Technology, Photography, and Networking Tools.

Workshops are free and open to the public; no pre-registration is necessary. For more "Next Chapter" workshop information, visit:" www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Fee hike to raise $7,500

Split vote gives go-ahead

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In an effort to find new sources of revenue the Board of Selectmen voted to increase several licensing fees for the next year.

The increase in fees brings Cohasset in line with the average fee for various licenses in the surrounding area. Based on the records of the Selectmen's office the last time these fees have not been increased since 1995.

The recommendation for the licensing increases was generated from the Budget Planning Group. An analysis was done comparing Cohasset's fees with four area towns (Hingham, Scituate, Duxbury and Norwell). In most of the liquor license fees, Cohasset was significantly (between $350 to $475) under the average of the four towns.

The increase in fees is expected to bring in $7,500 in new revenue to the town.

"Cohasset's fees are considered to be low. It is incumbent on the Board of Selectmen to look at these fees and approve the recommendations. The town will be signing the renewals of these licenses at the end of the month," said Steve Lombard, interim town manager.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said while the recommendation was still an increase the increase was not arbitrary.

"We're bringing them in line with surrounding communities," Quigley said.

Not all the Selectmen were in agreement. Selectman Lee Jenkins spoke against the increases.

"It is hard economic times for the town, but it is also hard economic times for businesses," Selectman Lee Jenkins. He said the burden placed on these establishments was disproportionate to the amount of town services they require.

"They don't send kids to the schools, they require some police or fire assistance, but not a lot. And they already pay property taxes," Jenkins said. "I don't think local businesses as a whole are doing well and I'm not really for this."

Koed pointed out that the fees had remained the same for 15 years and he saw the action as more housekeeping than anything else.

"We're not going to the upper end in the area, we're coming up to the average," Koed said.

The Board of Selectmen voted 2 to 1 (Jenkins against) to increase the license fees.

Both Selectmen Paul Carlson and Ted Carr were absent from the meeting.

All-Facility fee increase tabled

The Board of Selectmen, on the recommendation of the Budget Planning Group, also considered increasing the facility sticker cost $10 across the board (for seniors and all residents).

All Facilities sticker would cost $60 instead of $50 (for seniors over 60 the cost would rise from $15 to $25).

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said there had been lots of discussion on how to raise this fee among the Budget Planning Group.

"We ultimately found it was more equitable to raise each of the fees $10 and keep the senior citizen discount," Quigley said.

Selectman Fred Koed said he favored separate fees for the recycling transfer facility and the beach, but that was not the discussion of the evening. He did support the $10 increase.

For Selectman Lee Jenkins the issue was the town was turning first to increased fees rather than finding efficiency within the operations.

Jenkins said the new scale the RTF installed a couple of years ago was not bringing in enough money to cover its own expense. He said how the RTF collects the refuse needs to be looked at closer as well for perhaps a better way.

"Until every nook and cranny in town operations is looked at I'm not for raising any taxes," Jenkins said.

Quigley's view was this was a user fee to get rid of your trash and with the town potentially facing a budget shortfall they did need to take steps to correct it.

Jenkins pushed again for the actual cost to run the facility, so the board could define what revenues they had already and compare with expenses.

"We not reviewing the cost of the services," Jenkins said.

The board decided to wait until all members were present to vote. The matter will be reviewed again before residents have to renew their stickers in June.

Sewer inks new contract

Plant operator will change Jan. 1

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Starting January 1 the sewer department will have a new operator to control and maintain the sewer plant and collection system.

The sewer commission's contract with Veolia Water, the contracted plant operator for the last two decades, was up for renewal this year.

"We had the ability to renew as is at a significantly higher rate or we could put the contract out to bid," said Wayne Sawchuk, sewer commissioner.

Sewer Commission chair John Beck said Cohasset has been doing business with Veolia for a number of years and, in his opinion, the contract price had escalated to a point where their price was well above the cost to operate the plant.

In response to the town's Request for Proposals (RFP) the sewer commission received three bids. United Water was the low bidder and ultimately got the contract. United Water currently operates both the Rockland and Hull sewer plants.

Beck said he expects the contract to yield a $150,000 a year savings. The new contract with United Water is less than what the town is currently paying to Veolia. Specific numbers on the new contract were not available as it is awaiting acceptance by the Department of Environmental Protection.

"They are qualified and had the lowest price," Beck said, adding both Rockland and Hull gave the company high marks.

The contract is for five years, but contains a clause that allows for 60-day cancellation at any time. This piece of the contract was important to the Sewer Commission, Sawchuk said, because it give the town flexibility down the line.

There has been discussion at the Water Planning Group about combining the operation of the water and sewer systems under one contract in the hope of yielding some savings. An audit of the financials and operations of both the water and sewer departments is currently underway. A preliminary report is expected by Special Town Meeting (Nov. 15).

Logistically, because United Water has other local units they will be able to respond to emergencies quickly, Sawchuk said.

"We think it is going to be great fit," Sawchuk said. "The requirements in the new contract meet the needs of the town today."

The savings, coupled with the new revenue from Little Harbor users, will likely stave off a rate increase for the next five years, Beck said.

United Water is shadowing the Veolia operators to get a feel and understanding of the plant operations and collection system.

The bid proposal was accepted on Sept. 28 and the town then entered into negotiation with United Water. The contract was executed on Oct. 29.

November means holidays are coming

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

HOLIDAY SEASON

Hey there Cohasset. November is here and can it really be the "holiday season?" That's what I keep hearing but my mind has not switched over to that reality yet. The weather has the last few nights and days with some cold weather but hey, we live in New England for a reason, right? A lot of events are coming up in the next few weeks so get out those datebooks and calendars and start planning for some fun times with family and friends. Get ready to enjoy the season of thanks, family and friends. Let's start the column off with an event that is actually happening this weekend, starting tonight.

COHASSET CABARET

The Cohasset Cabaret 10 will be on stage again. New to the cabaret this year will be "Purely Vocals" a terrific women's a cappella group that has performed at many venues on the South shore. Lily Sestito will be back along with her brother Tony Carbone. Barbara Baumgarten is looking forward to entertaining you again. 'Tablescapes' worth a look

Looking for inspiration for tabletop ideas for your next dinner party or holiday party? Look no further. Come to the Community Garden Club of Cohasset's "Tablescapes," a collection of approximately 25 tabletop presentations designed by several stores, such as Crate and Barrel, in the South Shore area. Table linens, china, glassware, flatware, and floral arrangements will be artfully displayed representing a variety of themes, from seaside to birthday to Christmas. Some of the tables will be sentimental, some funny; all will be entertaining.

Held at Our World Museum, located in the lower level of the Cohasset Public Library, "Tablescapes" is on display Nov. 4, 5 and 6 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at a cost of $8.

Tickets for "Tablescapes" are available at the door or at Country House Furniture and Interiors, Darilynn's, Fleming's, Buttonwood Books, Lemon Lime Salon, Paperscapes, and Windsor Tea Shop and Tea Room in Cohasset, La Petite Maison in Hingham, and the Welch Company in Scituate. This will be an opportunity to learn tips on how to create tabletop presentations that will make your party the talk of the town!

Comprised of members from Cohasset, Hingham and Scituate, the Community Garden Club of Cohasset has been serving the local community for more than 50 years. Initiatives range from student programs, such as Junior Gardeners for grades three though five at Deer Hill School, celebrating Arbor Day through tree plantings and scholarships for high school graduates pursuing environmental studies, to senior programs including monthly garden therapy sessions at the Golden Living Center. CGCC also beautifies and maintains the gardens at the Lightkeeper's Cottage, the Cohasset Historical Society and Constitution Park.

The Club sponsors educational programs and workshops, open to the public, such as "Books in Bloom" a design competition at the Paul Pratt Library and promotes conservation and recycling efforts within the community. All of these programs and initiatives are supported through CGCC's annual budget with the generous support of local businesses. A special focus for the coming year is raising funds to create a garden for the senior center, which is currently in its planning stages.

Home Instead SENIOR CARE

GROWTH SPURT
The healthcare industry is growing by leaps and bounds. This is largely due to the rapid growth of the elderly population. In fact, today, ten of the twenty fastest growing occupations are healthcare related. Home healthcare services are primarily provided to seniors. Substantial savings, coupled with the clients' preference to "age in place," have driven the home healthcare segment into one of the fastest growing healthcare services. Close to 59 percent of the home healthcare jobs are in the services categories such as home health aides and personal home care aides. As this country's population continues to age, home healthcare providers will continue to grow their businesses to meet the increasing demand.
Of course, with such rapid increases in the field, there is also a proliferation of underqualified and poorly trained caregivers. That is why you want to hire an experienced provider with a proven record of providing high quality care. We have years of experience and all of our caregivers are carefully screened and thoroughly checked, to make sure that your loved one is getting the best possible care. In addition, we always make sure that any Alzheimer's patients are placed with specially trained caregivers, who know how to deal with this debilitating disease. Call 781-878-2994 to learn more about what we can do for you. Our address is 145 Washington St., Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.
P.S. People with a wide variety of educational backgrounds are necessary in order for the healthcare industry to function.

Success after corporate life

Self-employed resident doing well

By Nancy White

STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Lisa DiTullio has written her second book, Project Team Dynamics, which came out in October. Her first book, Simple Solutions, came out in November 2007.

STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Lisa DiTullio's company, Your Project Office, provides project management training primarily to small and mid-size companies, traditional consulting services looking to standardize project management, and virtual project office support to keep projects on track.

Lisa DiTullio is a project manager extraordinaire.

In the last four years she has accomplished goals many only dream of completing. She has written two books, launched her own business and traveled the world speaking about her passion and expertise.

Despite the risks and hard work associated with her new ventures, DiTullio said she has never been more happy and fulfilled.

In March 2008, DiTullio, after spending 17 years at Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, jumped the corporate cliff and set out on her own. On the heels of her self-published first book "Simple Solutions: How Enterprise Project Management Supported Harvard Pilgrim Health Care's Journey from Near Collapse to #1" DiTullio was getting more speaking engagements, one of her key objectives in writing the book, and felt the time was right for the next phase in her career.

"If there ever was a time to do it, this was the time," DiTullio said. In spite of the economic downturn DiTullio left the comfort and security of her corporate position to strike out on her own. "It was the best decision I ever made."

But, she didn't take that leap without knowing what she was getting into. She made extensive phone calls to people who are in business on their own.

"I wanted to know the good stuff and the bad stuff," DiTullio said. "I went into this with my eyes wide open and recognizing it is always harder than you imagine."

Almost three years later her company, Your Project Office, is doing well. What started as a one-man operation has expanded to DiTullio and two employees.

The business provides project management training primarily to small and mid-size companies, traditional consulting services looking to standardize project management, and virtual project office support to keep projects on track.

"We're thrilled to here despite a depressed economy. In this type of business environment companies are looking for more efficient and effective ways to do business and that's what we provide. (Our services) meet a huge need for a lot of companies," DiTullio said.

Together with the new business venture came more speaking engagements and the opportunity to write a book. This time she attracted interest from a niche publisher, Management Concepts, and worked closely with editors.

In the last two years DiTullio has visited six countries (Colombia, UK, New Zealand, Spain, Canada, Brazil) and countless cities speaking on her methods of effective project management.

"...In this type of business environment companies are looking for more efficient and effective ways to do business and that's what we provide. "

— Lisa DiTullio, Your Project Office

"I was on the road every week in October and it won't settle down until mid-December. Right now I'm very busy booking into 2011," DiTullio said. She speaks at industry-sponsored events ad well as corporate training.

"Through my travel I've realized that the cultures may differ but the challenges (companies) face are the same no matter where you go," DiTullio said.

One of those universal challenges is addressed in her new book "Project Team Dynamics: Enhancing Performance, Improving Results." It tackles the challenges of working within a team.

"It's all about the human side of project management. More often than not the most challenging aspect of a projects is working with other people," DiTullio said. "People are taught how to manage the project, but not how to manage the people."

"Project Team Dynamics" offers practical advice for not only project leaders but also all team members. Some of the key ideas include establishing a strong team dynamic from the get-go, setting clear expectations for behavior and project results, practical ways to resolving conflict, and knowing each project has unique demands.

"The higher the engagement level of each team member the higher the results produced," DiTullio said. Her straightforward strategies apply to those in the project management industry and to any professional in a team environment.

DiTullio works out of her home on Lily Pond in Cohasset. While she says the experience of being in business for herself had been "enormously liberating" it is also incredibly hard work.

She balances all her business endeavors and travel with her blended family of five children. She calls on her project management multi-tasking skills to accomplish and focus her endeavors. And she wouldn't have it any other way.

"There's no greater satisfaction than being in charge of your own destiny," DiTullio said with a big smile.

Lisa DiTullio's advice on getting it done

If you want to write a book...

"Know why you are writing the book. Very few people make money publishing books, so before you invest a lot of time in writing define what it is you are hoping to achieve."

If you want to start a business...

"Recognize it is always harder than you imagine. Use the power of networking to find out what owning and running your own business is all about. Ask about the good parts and the bad parts to get a realistic view of how difficult as well as rewarding it can be."

If you want to work at home...

"It has to be done in a thoughtful way. You have to create a real business environment away from everyone with clear boundaries established. It took awhile for my family to adjust and understand I'm still in the office just like I used to be."

The food pantry, which needs groceries and food items, is now providing services to 75 individuals and families in Cohasset.

Food pantry need is growing, donations are down

Tedeschi's to purchase a gallon of milk and a dozen eggs (the pantry does not have enough refrigerator space for those items).

For years the pantry depended solely on donations from the community and was able to meet the needs of their clients that way. Now they are making trips to Stop & Shop for basic pantry staples like pasta, tomato sauce and macaroni and cheese.

"(This year) for the first time in 20 years we had to buy canned vegetables — we never had to in the past," Corry said. She has volunteered at the food pantry nearly since its inception.

To keep up with the need it costs money. The cost to purchase the meats alone for about two weeks is between $350 and $400.

While historically the clientele for the food pantry has leaned toward an older population, now Corry said they are serving about even groups of elderly and families with kids.

"The people who come here are truly in need they are not coming to top off their shelves or fridge," Corry said. Identification to confirm Cohasset residency and an application are required to become a food pantry client. The clients' privacy and confidentiality is of utmost importance to the pantry volunteers.

"As hard as it is to come here for some people, especially the first time, we try to make it as pleasant as possible. The reason we're here is to help people who need help," Corry said.

The food pantry is non-denominational and it is located in the rear of St. Anthony's rectory building on South Main Street. The pantry relies on a team of volunteers to run efficiently.

Although it pains her to say the pantry is struggling so much Corry is not sure how long this vital service can continue without more community support.

"I'm wondering how long we'll be able to stay open the way things are going," Corry said. "If everyone who could gave a little bit we would be okay."

She is reaching out to local groups for help. Each grade of the St. Anthony's religious education classes are each taking a month and donating food and other goods to the pantry. Corry was scheduled to speak to the Cohasset Rotary Club this week.

Corry welcomes groups of young people (Cub Scouts, Girl Scouts, etc.) to visit the food pantry. She shows them how to check dates on food and lets them stock the shelves with the donations they bring in.

The food pantry is putting together boxes of all the fixings required for a proper Thanksgiving dinner later this month. The turkeys are donated annually by Kinnealey Meats. Right now, Corry can't promise the same for Christmas dinners. The Cohasset Food Pantry does not accept expired or already opened food.

"I'm wondering how long we'll be able to stay open the way things are going. If everyone, who could, gave a little bit we would be okay."

— Jane Corry, co-director

See sidebar for high demand and needed items.

There are several ways and means to give to the food pantry. Donations of sundries are welcome to be dropped off at the pantry between 8:30 and 9:30a.m. on Tuesday mornings, or can be brought to any of the churches in town on Sundays. A box is also set up at Stop & Shop. Donations can be non-perishable foods, monetary or supermarket gift cards.

To contact the food pantry to ask about donating, to schedule a visit with a group, or if you need assistance, call 781-383-6718 and ask to be transferred to the food pantry line.

Water treatment upgrade allocation

The Water Commission will seek a $13,000 allocation from Special Town Meeting in November to execute a series of smaller upgrades to the water treatment plant.

Water Commission chair Chris Seebeck said the upgrade was mandated by the state and described it as safety related. The chemical feeling system at the water treatment plant, called a "day tank," needs additional safety controls to ensure no more than the daily amount of chemicals can be added at any give time.

"We want to be in the practice of being open and upfront in what we are asking for and why we're asking for it," Seebeck said.

The article will also request an increase to the fixed water rate to pay for the capital expenditure. This portion of the article stems from last spring's recommendations from the Water Planning Group as a way to be more transparent about capital expenses. This capital project translates to 20 cent increase the fixed rate, or capital recovery charge, on ratepayer's quarterly bills.

Seebeck said if the water department ends the year with any surplus that amount will be used to pay down the department's existing debt, especially debt not yet bonded.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said she would have preferred for this request to come after the results of the audit, but appreciated it being brought forth to go before Town Meeting.

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously to recommend the article.

A recent study on Greenbush found that ridership numbers have not met expectations. This photo shows the Cohasset Greenbush parking lot on Wednesday afternoon. It should be noted, however, that some commuters ride bicycles to the station and some are dropped off and picked up.

Hedlund calls for oversight hearing; brakes on S. Coast rail

• Ridership is only 60 percent of what was predicted (The Environmental Impact Report predicted 3,320 peak hour riders by 2010; actual peak ridership is 1,934);

• Greenbush is hurting commuter boats (Ridership on commuter boats is down 24 percent since Greenbush);

• 66 percent of Greenbush riders were already using mass transit (15.8 percent used commuter rail, 46.6 percent used the commuter boat; and 3.4 percent used private bus);

• Greenbush has not eased congestion (traffic fell by greater rates elsewhere in the metropolitan region) and the study says the traffic decline has more to do with the recession and high gas prices. The report states: "The opening of the Greenbush line did not appear to have any clear impact on traffic volumes on Route 3 or Route 3A").

Hedlund's objective is not to kill the train line – which, on a purely parochial level, he admits provides a good alternative for residents in his district – but hopes that the lessons learned on Greenbush will force the MBTA to be accountable and make better decisions going forward.

To that end, Hedlund had called for an oversight hearing prior to approval on the South Coast railroad, which is projected to cost $1.4 billion or nearly three times the cost of Greenbush.

Simply stated, Hedlund points out the MBTA could not afford further expansion projects that require large annual operating subsidies. He stressed that projects like Greenbush are hurting other areas of the transit system, which are in dire need of maintenance and repair.

Hedlund recalled then-MBTA General Manager Daniel Grabauskas saying at the one-year anniversary of Greenbush that the rail line had an operating subsidy of $10 million annually, including debt service and operating losses. According to Hedlund, the proposed oversight hearing would determine whether the current operating subsidy is more than $10 million, which he believes is too much given the daily peak ridership of just under 2,000 people.

"We need to think about it in those terms," he said. "The MBTA is the most indebted transit authority in the world. We need to learn from Greenbush and apply those lessons to the railroad expansion to Fall River and New Bedford, if in fact that is going to happen."

Hedlund's amendment to the Transportation Reform Bill that took effect this past summer states the MBTA has to report to the Legislature and justify any capital expenditure; demonstrate evidence of a funding source and how to pay for operating costs.

He pointed out that when then Governor Mitt Romney froze the Greenbush project to review its environmental benefits, conduct a cost-benefit analysis; and determine transportation benefits and need in the region – Greenbush came in dead last when compared to other capital projects. However, Greenbush won out because so much money had been sunk into the project, he recalled.

Going forward, Hedlund would like the MBTA to look at its Greenbush parking procedures and fees – including the ban on overnight parking – to see if that could help ridership.

In published reports, MBTA spokesman Joe Pesaturo said that Greenbush is only in its infancy and as the economy improves, the ridership will continue to grow. He also said the success of a region's public transit system is defined by the number of options it offers.

Pesaturo praised the convenience of commuter rail and noted that trains generally perform at a 95 percent on-time rate and continue to attract more riders in the years to come.

About the South Coast Rail Project:

The South Coast Rail project will restore passenger rail transportation from South Station in Boston to the South Coast of Massachusetts, catalyzing nearly half a billion dollars in economic development every year. The cities of Taunton, Fall River and New Bedford are the only cities within 50 miles of Boston that are not served by commuter rail.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Greenbush revisited

It was an extremely controversial project, largely due to its high cost. Folks were lined up (for and against) on both sides of the tracks.

In fact, in just one week in the mid-1990s we had no less than 35 letters on the train project.

Here at the Cohasset Mariner, we made no secret about our support for restoration of the Greenbush line that ceased commuter service in 1959.

We have not changed our mind. We are glad that our region has commuter rail service and we believe, over time, the rail line will attract more and more riders.

However, with that being said, we welcome Greenbush scrutiny and applaud state Sen. Robert Hedlund for calling for an oversight hearing on Greenbush with an eye toward examining the proposed South Coast rail project, which is estimated to cost about three times more.

While we endured a couple of years of major construction — complete with jersey barriers – we must stress that today, we rarely notice when the train is barreling by below grade.

The new study – commissioned by the MBTA – and conducted by the Metropolitan Planning Organization is interesting reading. With the elections and our coverage of those, we have not had the chance to plow through the study but have gleaned some details that are highlighted in our story in this week's Mariner.

A longtime Greenbush critic, Senator Hedlund admits on a purely parochial level, Greenbush provides an excellent transportation alternative for his district.

However, there are lessons to be learned from Greenbush and perhaps opportunities to improve the railroad service. Hedlund points out that the parking procedures could be improved.

To that end, we would love to hear from Greenbush commuters: what they like about the rail service, what they don't like and what could be done to improve the service.

We will be sending out an email to members of our Readers Advisory Network to get their input. However, comments are also welcome from non-members and can be emailed directly to editor Mary Ford at: mford@cnc.com

We think it is safe to say that much of the mitigation provided as a result of Greenbush has been a good thing.

Our Cohasset Mariner office in downtown Hingham is right next to the tunnel. While we endured a couple of years of major construction — complete with jersey barriers – we must stress that today, we rarely notice when the train is barreling by below grade. We also think the "tunnel cap" is a huge improvement over the old, abandoned right-of-way that existed in Hingham Square for years after rail service stopped. The old right-of-way was simply a mess — full of Dumpsters, parked cars and mud puddles.

Let us hear what you think about Greenbush. Check out the study that can be downloaded from the Metropolitan Planning Organization website. Just google "Metropolitan Planning Organization Greenbush Study" and you will find it.

If you would like to join our Readers Advisory Network, see below:

TAKE PART: The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

Dramatic increase in water rates suggests renaming Lily Pond

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Supports withdrawal of NOI for Cat Dam

TO THE EDITOR:

We are writing to correct some inaccuracies and balance the argument made in Mr. and Mrs. Brown's Commentary in last week's Mariner.

All the neighbors of Inner Little Harbor (ILH) want to have good water quality and maintain the beautiful environment of ILH. In fact, for 35 years, the majority of neighbors of ILH have actively managed the operations schedule (opening) of the tidal gate and also fully funded the maintenance of the tidal gate. Since then, water quality has continuously improved. We will continue to see improvement as residences are connected up to the new sewer system.

The Brown's commentary was about the Notice of Intent (NOI) for the maintenance and operation schedule of the Cat Dam at Inner Little Harbor. They claim that the withdrawal of the NOI by the Selectmen sets a bad precedent. On the contrary, we believe this was the correct action for the following reasons:

From a legal standpoint, the NOI is in violation of the law. The Dam is town owned but it resides on private property. The town has an easement to maintain the Dam but not to alter the water level, as is proposed in the NOI. The NOI is invalid because written permission was not obtained from the landowner(s) whose land will be altered by the changes sought in the NOI.

The Browns' are factually incorrect that "parts of Inner Little Harbor are not owned by the abutters" because the deeds prove otherwise. Much, if not all of ILH is private tidelands owned by individual property owners. These property owners pay taxes on their land and they have rights when other entities want to alter their land, for example, permanently decreasing the water level.

From an Engineering and Science standpoint there are a number deficiencies and inconsistencies in the NOI proposal, including: a) The proposal of "1 gate open" all the time is not a balanced environmental solution as it does not consider the impact on noxious odor control, aesthetics, erosion and safety. As Civil Engineers ourselves, we believe this proposal is dangerous; high peak currents would develop on the outgoing tide, which is a hazard for citizens, for example kayakers and swimmers. b) No alternatives were assessed despite this being promised by the CLE representative. c) Some supporting graphs and data in the NOI contradict the conclusions made about flushing, water quality and water temperature.

Clearly, the withdrawal of the NOI by the Selectmen was the right course of action. The NOI can be modified to provide a more balanced solution for achieving better water quality. Then the appropriate officials and property owners can correctly sign off on the revised NOI.

- To the Cohasset Police and Fire Departments who provided some special attention;
- To the Mariner for providing us with some great publicity;
- And most especially to all the customers who went that extra mile and spent that extra dollar to make this the most financially successful year of the Pumpkin Patch in its eight year history.

Thanks, again to one and all!

We'll see you at the Village Fair (Dec. 4)!

Cat Dam and Inner Little Harbor

SUSAN PLAYFAIR

Historically, the dam between Inner and Outer Little Harbor was constructed to better manage agriculture. Its purpose was to keep water out of Inner Little Harbor, not to keep it inside. On the Sears estate, where our home was the family barn, chicken coops were on the hay meadow that is now underwater except for three days each month in the summer and several months each winter when the tidal gates are lifted. Cows used to graze on portions of our land that are now underwater for the same period of time.

When the Sears family and the Israel Nichols families sold their properties to be subdivided and developed, the concept of creating "lakefront" property out of what had become a tidal estuary took hold. Most families who bought the home sites on what is now Little Harbor Road and the North side of Nichols Road wanted to see water, not mudflats. What they didn't anticipate is the algae buildup that accompanies the creation of relatively stagnant water out of what should be a body of water flushed by the tides twice a day.

Many of us who live on Inner Little Harbor would rather have a healthy harbor, governed by the laws of nature rather than an unhealthy body of water where the tide is controlled by a select group of neighbors. For several years we have been writing letters, attending meetings, meeting with various environmental agencies, and petitioning for a so-called Notice of Intent to be prepared by a recognized Environmental Engineer.

Thanks to a majority vote by the each of you, the sum of $17,000 was spent to hire CLE Engineering, Inc. to prepare a report. The report was recently completed and submitted to the Conservation Commission. Its main recommendation is to remove one of the tidal gate boards to allow partial flushing throughout the year, and to continue to monitor the results. Obviously, the best way to

Counting cars and bicycles

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush ridership — As you may recall, periodically we venture into the Greenbush Commuter Rail Cohasset parking lot and count the number of cars to get a sense of the ridership volume. We know that it is not an extremely accurate way since there are passengers who are dropped off and a few hearty souls walk to the station. We also count any bicycles as a car, since they do indicate ridership. The numbers in the table represent the latest count as well as the counts from previous surveys so you can get a sense of changes over time. The result is quite stable, but is way below the peak ridership of 2008.

Little Harbor Project paving — Late last week the pavers finally visited the shoreline areas of Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue. They worked last Friday and a bit more on Saturday. They were able to complete the shim or leveling coat of paving along both of these roads. If you look at the paving you might think that the pavers did not do a very thorough job of paving some areas. Well, it is the way it is for a reason.

That reason is that paving was only added where the grinding operation exposed bare soil under the road or where additional asphalt is required to better manage the road drainage. This latter reason is really critical to the final quality of the pavement. Sometimes, the existing road is just not shaped correctly to get storm water where it needs to go. The leveling course along with a properly applied topcoat of asphalt can make all the difference in the world how the road drains stormwater.

The structure crew started to raise the in-the-road structures on both Atlantic and Jerusalem this past Monday and Tuesday. They have about one more day's work to be done. Originally, they were to complete their work Thursday of this week but the weather forecast doesn't look too good for Thursday or Friday of this week, so now they are scheduled to complete their structure work on Monday of next week. Final paving should follow on this portion of Jerusalem and Atlantic shortly thereafter.

The fine points of paving an intersection — One small aspect to road grinding rears its head at intersections with traffic lights and preemptive signaling. So, what is preemptive signaling, you ask? The easiest way to tell when an intersection has preemptive signaling is when you approach an intersection and the lights change in your favor rather promptly if there are no vehicles coming from the right or left. There are actually wire loops buried near the surface of the road just before the intersection. These loops have the ability to sense the structure of a vehicle and send a "vehicle present" signal to a specialized traffic control computer, which determines whether the light can change to green for your vehicle.

When the cold planing machine passes over these wire loops, since the loops are very close to the surface of the road, they often get ground up with the asphalt. If this happens, the wire loops must be replaced before the preemption can function again. In the meantime, the affected traffic lights will be set to just operate on basic timed cycles. That is why lights such as Sohier / Ripley Road were set to a regular operating cycle until the loops were restored. As soon as we can, we call the traffic light contractor into town and he restored the loops in the road. Until then, there was no preemption.

The photos show the progression of asphalt grinding as it destroyed a traffic loop in Sohier Street at Ripley Road. The first photo shows what an undamaged traffic loop looks like in the roadway. The second photo is a close-up of the reclaiming machine just before it passes over a traffic loop and grinds it up. The third photo shows the result, a loose broken loop wire sticking up from the roadway.

As an aside, sometimes preemption can be very complicated. For example, the traffic light at Forest Avenue and North Main Street can be preempted in three different ways. First, vehicles in any direction can preempt the traffic light jus as we explained on Sohier Street and Ripley Road. Second, a Cohasset fire truck has special equipment that can communicate with the traffic light controller and cause the light to change in favor of the fire truck. Lastly, and the highest priority above all others, is the train. A Greenbush train approaching Lower King Street from either direction will take over control of the traffic light. It will not release that control until the train has completely passed by Lower King Street.

The broken loops cannot be avoided during grinding. Once the grinding was complete, all loops were restored. Then as you know, the paving was completed for Sohier, Ripley, Beechwood and Pond streets. So, things are now back to normal and these roads are a lot better.

Looking for the write stuff

FOR THE RECORD

GREGORY MATHIS

The content we get for our newspapers and websites comes in all shapes and sizes, in many forms, and from many different areas.

Our journalists generate a large portion of the stories and photographs you see in the newspaper each week or online throughout the day. Professional writing companies and public relations firms contribute some of the content, and much of the rest comes from you.

A very important part of our community newspapers and Wicked Local websites is knowing what you're doing, what events you're planning or involved with, what's going on at the schools, and how the youth soccer or youth football team did this past weekend.

If we do a good job of gathering all that information and getting it into the proper format for the newspaper or the website, we feel we've served you and the community well.

We understand all writers are not created equal. But don't let a fear of not knowing what to do or how to do it hold you back.

Here are a few helpful tips to demystify the process and point you in the right direction when submitting content.

• This isn't Facebook or Twitter, or texting, or Instant Messaging, so "LOL" and "OMG" along with various symbols, abbreviations, and smiley faces don't work when it comes to getting your information in the newspaper or online. Writing something for the newspaper requires real words strung together in sentence and paragraph form. Good grammar is also important. This is especially true for the younger generation, which has grown up trying to cram as many thoughts into as few characters as possible.

• Avoid writing in the first person and including "we" and "us" in the announcement. Think of the audience you're writing for and the medium in which it will be received. Editors edit out "we" and "us," because "we" and "us" would mean the message is coming from the newspaper.

• Keep the writing short and sweet. There is a limit to how much space we have in print, and long releases are tough to read online. Use common words and write succinct sentences. Chose your words wisely and use them appropriately. Don't use a lot of flowery adjectives or big words that send readers (and some editors) running to a dictionary.

• Don't forget to include the really important information in your event listing — date, time and location of the event and always include a contact phone number or e-mail so people can get more information.

• Avoid putting words in bold text, or underlining words or having the word in all CAPITAL LETTERS for points of emphasis. We see this a lot in letters to the editor. While we greatly appreciate your opinion, the additional emphasis will end up being cut.

You can submit content to us in several ways. E-mailing Mary Ford, editor of the Cohasset Mariner, is the quickest and most effective route. But we also get submissions by fax and the regular mail as well. You can find contact information including e-mail addresses, phone and fax numbers on page 2 of your newspaper or by clicking the "Contact Us" tab at the top and bottom left side of your Wicked Local website home page.

We look forward to hearing from you often!

HEALTH NOTES

Begin with compressions in CPR

By Steve Bobo
Special to the Mariner

The New First Aid — A different approach to CPR has been adopted by most doctors and technicians applying CPR in field and accident conditions. Under the new approach, first responders skipped the first steps of the standard protocol: (intubating the patient for ventilation and delivering a shock using a defibrillator). While still attaching the victim to a defibrillator, they did not wait for the device to analyze the patient's heart rhythm, but started fast, forceful chest compressions.

The recently released 2010 CPR Guidelines included a new order of activities: the C (for compression) in ABC now comes first. The American Heart Association says that instead of A-B-C, the correct order for CPR will be C-A-B.

• Begin Compressions immediately.

• Ensure that the victim is Awake.

• Ensure that the victim is Breathing satisfactorily

Continue Care: If the victim is breathing, take care of whatever is keeping the victim from waking up.

An exception will be newborn babies that may require special treatment. The key to saving a cardiac arrest victim is action, not assessment.

"Intubating the patient and waiting for the defibrillator to do its analysis takes time — time a cardiac arrest victim doesn't have," said Gordon A. Ewy, MD, of a CPR study. "In laboratory experiments, we found that the most important factor of survival is to keep the blood moving through the body by continuous chest compressions. Further, excessive ventilations during chest compression may also be harmful."

An exception will be newborn babies that may require special treatment.

First responders applying the new protocol were able to resuscitate the majority (58 percent) of out-of-hospital witnessed cardiac arrest victims, provided they had a "shockable" initial heart rhythm. "Shockable" describes a condition in which the heart quivers rather than beats but can be shocked back into normal beat with a defibrillator. In contrast, the survival rate was only 20 percent in the 3 years before, when the standard CPR protocol was used.

A study, which involved 125 patients, reports the experiences after the revised protocol was implemented in two Wisconsin counties in a collaboration between the CPR Research Group at the University of Arizona and the Mercy Health System in Wisconsin.

"We think one of the reasons that CPR as directed by international guidelines has not worked well is because it is designed for two entirely different conditions: cardiac arrest and respiratory arrest," said Dr. Ewy of Mercy. "What is good for one may not be good for the other. Cardio cerebral Resuscitation is designed for cardiac arrest. Sudden unexpected collapse in an adult is almost always due to cardiac arrest. The new approach is not recommended for respiratory arrest, a much less common situation following, for example, drowning or drug overdose."

As a cause of death, out-of-hospital cardiac arrest is second only to all cancer deaths combined, taking the lives of 490,000 Americans every year. Unlike the impression created by TV shows such as "E.R.", the chance of surviving an out-of-hospital cardiac arrest is usually much less than 10 percent. In spite of periodic updates of standardized international guidelines, survival rates have remained more or less unchanged over the last few decades. Survival rates are better only if an automated external defibrillator (AED) is available and is used soon after the cardiac arrest.

Wilcutt Commons moving along

SENIOR CORNER

STEVE BOBO

Plans for the new Wilcutt Commons Senior Center are advancing nicely. At a meeting with the Selectmen last Monday a pamphlet was presented using an architect's rendering and the latest news relating to construction plans. Additional appearances will be made before the Board of Selectmen after the Elder Affairs Ad Hoc Committee has met with various Town boards and commissions, seeking input and approval for the project.

One of the principal advantages for a Center of this type is the impressive listing of activities to be considered. For example we will have several large and highly adaptable spaces described as 'function rooms'. Others will be designated for exercise, educational, cultural, and other health-related purposes.

One of the principal advantages for a Center of this type is the impressive listing of activities to be considered.

Generally such centers are focused on seniors, but increasingly, it has been found that such places rapidly evolve to venues used by the entire community. The new Willcutt Commons center is being planned with such goals in mind.

Meanwhile, the existing Center from which programs are currently being conducted and supported by our Elder Affairs Director and her staff, include health and wellness programs, outreach to frail elders in our community, congregate meals, volunteer coordination, medical and local transportation, local day and overnight trips to points of interest, as well as information and referral services.

Bradley fends off challenge

Hingham Democrat wins sixth term

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, 40, D-Hingham, faced one of the toughest challenges of this political career.

In an election where "throw the incumbents out" was the battle cry in many states and regions – Bradley fended off Republican Tim Finnerty, 48, and independent unenrolled candidate Carlton "Al" Chambers 69, also both of Hingham.

All three vied for the keys to Third Plymouth District that includes Hingham, Cohasset, Hull and North Scituate..

Bradley won Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and North Scituate. Bradley tallied 6319 votes in Hingham; Finnerty had 4432 and Chambers, 248. In Cohasset, Bradley received 2160 votes; Finnerty had 1449 and Chambers, 70. In North Scituate, Bradley received 752 votes; Finnerty had 545 and Chambers, 53. In Hull, Bradley received 3,254 votes; Finnerty, 1,201 and Chambers, 153.

Unenrolled independent candidate Al Chambers, right, stopped by the Sons of Italy Hall to congratulate Garrett Bradley and his wife Heather on Tuesday night.

Bradley was both happy and humbled when reached at his victory celebration at the Sons of Italy off Route 3A.

"I am very humbled by the results," he said. "And I am thankful to all those who voted for me and who helped me. I am especially thankful to my family for their love and support."

Bradley said he is looking forward to representing all the residents of the Third Plymouth District over the next two years.

He said Finnerty called to concede at about 9:15 p.m. on election night. "I told him how impressed I was with his worth ethic and how hard he worked during the campaign." Bradley praised Finnerty's ideas; he stressed that he wanted to be state representative for the entire district and was open to ideas from all the constituents.

Finnerty decided to jump into the race when he realized Bradley would run unopposed. He could not be reached for comment by press time.

Chambers was grateful for the support he received and praised the press for giving him a chance to be heard. He said he went to Bradley's victory celebration at the Sons of Italy to congratulate him once the results were in on Tuesday night. "I wish him well," Chambers said.

Hedlund celebrates another victory

Kearney disappointed, but glad he ran

By Matthew J. Gill
MGILL@CNC.COM

Incumbent State Sen. Robert Hedlund had a busy schedule on Tuesday, visiting different polling sites in Weymouth, Duxbury and the other towns in the district, and later in the day, offering his input on the state's political landscape on Emily Rooney's "Greater Boston" TV show.

Then, just before entering his campaign party at Poopsie's in Pembroke soon after the polls closed on Tuesday night, Hedlund said he received a text from a staff member working at the Linden Ponds voting precinct in Hingham, and the message reported that Hedlund had garnered a 3-to-1 majority there.

At that point, Hedlund said he knew he'd won.

When all the votes were tallied in the eight towns that comprise the Plymouth/Norfolk County senatorial district, Hedlund received 53,514 votes, about 75 percent, to challenger Paul Kearney's 25 percent, or 17,837 votes.

"First of all, I'm very humbled by the victory I had," Hedlund said on Wednesday. "It was the largest victory in my political career."

Without seeing the final numbers from the polls around the state, Hedlund speculated that he may have received more votes in this election than any other state senator candidate in the state, even Democratic candidates who faced no opposition.

Charlie Baker and Bob Hedlund supporter, Tom Gormley of Cohasset, had both the gubernatorial and senatorial races covered.

Hedlund said he received about 80 percent of the vote in Hingham, and in Weymouth and Hull, he received a vote percentage in the high-70s.

"It was a pretty big victory," he said, adding though, that that excitement is tempered some because he'll return to the State House with even fewer Republican colleagues.

With that in mind, Hedlund said the challenge he and his fellow Republicans will face is covering all their committee assignments, with so few bodies. "It will be difficult to serve as a check on the majority party," he said.

Regarding the state ballot Questions, Hedlund said he was disappointed that Question 2, the affordable housing question, was not repealed by voters.

"I wanted to see 40B overturned," he said. "I've been fighting for reform for over 10 years."

The way the Question was written on the ballot, he said, may have made it difficult for voters to understand.

Hedlund has been elected to consecutive terms as state senator since 1995.

On the flip side of the race is Paul Kearney, his independent challenger from Cohasset, who was disappointed in the results. This was his first bid for an elected office.

"I'm happy we did it, I learned a lot and I met a lot of nice people in the district," Kearney said. "I don't understand if we keep sending the same people to office how we can expect different results."

Although Kearney will not be a senator he plans on staying involved in politics and use one of the unique rights of Massachusetts citizens — the right to file a legislative bill.

"I can still be a legislator without being a legislator," Kearney said. Reforming healthcare to help small businesses and promoting preventive health programs are two of the issues he'd like to tackle.

"I respect my opponent – we might be the only ones out there who both ran a clean campaign…I plan on working with (Hedlund) to try to make the South Shore a better place," Kearney said.

While he said he would not run for office again, Kearney doesn't like to see candidates unopposed and hopes someone will run against Hedlund the next time around.

Reporter Nancy White contributed to this report.

70 percent turnout on Election Day

non-stop throughout the day.

There are a total of 5,496 registered voters in Cohasset; of those 1216 are Democrats, 1210 are Republicans and 14 are Libertarian. More than 50 percent (3050 voters) in Cohasset are not enrolled in any political party.

Statewide, Democratic Town Committee chairman Kevin McCarthy credited a coordinated effort to 'get out the vote' for the democratic victories.

"In Massachusetts this was a victory for the ground troops. The massive Get Out the Vote strategy implemented by the Massachusetts Democratic Party clearly paid off big time, particularly in the Governor's race and in the 10th Congressional District," McCarthy said.

But, locally, David Farrag, Republican Town Committee vice chair, said the results indicated voters were not casting their ballots along party lines.

"Locally, it was a mixed bag. In Cohasset it seems people voted for the person instead of the party," Farrag said. Judging from the votes many cast votes for both Republican Bob Hedlund and Democrat Garrett Bradley. Both incumbent candidates received more than 50 percent of the vote Further, democrat Keating edged out Republican Jeff Perry in Cohasset and district-wide, Cohasset voters favored Baker for Governor over Democrat Deval Patrick.

Local democrats were heartened by the wins statewide.

"Despite massive media expenditures on all sides, the Democratic Party's clean sweep of all state constitutional offices, and all ten Congressional seats, clearly shows the impressive power of an aroused and well organized Massachusetts Democratic Party," McCarthy said.

Farrag said the national Republican victories were bittersweet because Massachusetts did not see the same results, "we expected to see some gains…it's disappointing."

Cohasset was more Republican than the state.

While Gov. Deval Patrick won reelection to a second term – a majority of Cohasset voters supported his Republican rival, Charlie Baker. A majority of Cohasset voters also supported Republican Karyn E. Polito for state treasurer; and Republican Mary Z. Connaughton for auditor, both of whom lost their election bids.

For state Senate, Hedlund soundly defeated his independent challenger Cohasset resident Paul Kearney by more than 1700 votes (see related story). Hedlund also earned the top vote-getter spot with 2,653 votes, or about 70 percent.

In the county races, voters chose Democrat Michael Morrissey over independent candidate John Coffey.

Democratic incumbent Martha Coakley, who retained her position in the statewide vote, received 2019 votes in Cohasset for state attorney general, topping Republican James McKenna with 1720.

Democratic incumbent William Galvin won out in Cohasset earning 2018 votes over Republican challenger William Campbell with 1558.

With the changes in leadership on the national level, Farrag said he hopes the politicians are work together.

"I hope (the politicians) can all sit down and have a coffee together. I think there is a way to compromise without compromising principles. There are some things both parties can agree with and that needs to get done."

Voters considered four questions

Cohasset's votes on Questions 1, 2, and 3 were in line with the state results. In Cohasset the results of the four ballot questions were:

- Question 1 – 2,064 "yes" and 1,525 "no" votes to remove the Massachusetts sales tax on alcoholic beverages and alcohol;
- Question 2 – 1,939 votes against and 1,525 votes in favor of repealing the state 40B law allowing the issuance of a single comprehensive permit to build housing that includes low- or moderate-income units;
- Question 3 – 1,797 votes against and 1,815 votes in favor of reducing the state sales and use tax rates to 3 percent;
- Question 4 — 1,987 "yes" votes to 1,368 "no" votes was direct the representative from the district to vote in favor of legislation that would allow patients, with written recommendation of their doctor, to possess and grow marijuana for their patient's medical use.

Bear Hill: a 'sound project'

COMMENTARY

PETER DECAPRIO

To work effectively, our form of town government requires an informed and pro-active citizenry. The abutters to the Bear Hill tank access road have been passionate, organized and forceful. Good for them. Unfortunately, in the advocacy of a particular agenda, facts are often overlooked, as they have a tendency to undermine arguments.

The abutters' resistance to the proposed access road seems to be that: (1) Water Commissioners have underestimated costs and overstated benefits; (2) the contract is too favorable to AT&T; (3) safety issues have not been vetted; (4) runoff considerations were ignored; (5) alternative sites were not considered; and (6), the Water Commission has overstepped its authority.

1. Rent from AT&T is $1,800 per month, escalating by 3 percent each year beginning in year two. Total costs for us are expected to be less than $10,000. Everything else is assumed by AT&T. The net present value of the contract is approximately $185,000. If we get Verizon too, the net present value increases to more than $350,000. As Water Commissioners, we would be derelict to turn our backs on such a project. Tank antennae are widely used today with little impact on costs. Regardless, our contract with AT&T is explicit: AT&T is responsible for all repairs it causes. We already drain and clean our tanks regularly, the cost of which is small. Our existing schedule can easily be altered to meet state guidelines for antennae attachments with no appreciable increase in expense. Taking a tank offline does not diminish our ability to provide water. AT&T could try and evade responsibility, but our contract has provisions for redress. We will enforce them if needed. To suggest that we haven't considered costs in our analysis is patently false. Finally, data is readily available that shows we are receiving a fair price. There are three publicly traded tower companies in the United States making frequent disclosures regarding lease rates.

2. Our contract with AT&T provides that a 10- by 24-foot area be set aside at the tank. AT&T can ask for additional town property there, for which we would collect additional rent, but we don't have to lease it. Sublease rights are for survivorship (in case AT&T gets bought), and are normal. AT&T can add other carriers, but that was encouraged by us in the original RFP. Such activity will result in more rental income. We also scored the RFP in favor of those that would share facilities. The language in the contract calling for damages for denial of access is after the fact: if the facility is built, AT&T has a right to access it.

3. The Massachusetts DEP has strict regulations regarding attachments to water tanks. We are aware of these requirements – they were incorporated into our original RFP. According to the DEP, we are required to provide certification stating that our water supply will not be affected. The DEP reserves the right to revoke its approval if it determines the proposal does not conform. The DEP has encountered instances where antennae on tanks have compromised a water supply – in one (in Bellingham), welding caused damage, resulting in a tank being off-line for a significant period. Bellingham used a welding technique not recommended. The preferred method (stud welding), has long been used by AT&T and will be used on our project.

The road safety report, completed last month, was performed by a qualified engineering firm using federal guidelines. It showed that an already busy road will not be impacted by our vehicles. The report's conclusions were consistent with those of our own Police Department. Concerns over ice in the winter have been raised and dealt with. In a memo dated Aug. 4, 2010, the town's Safety Officer made recommendations to handle ice conditions that were the same as our engineer's. The town's Safety Officer also recommended a road apron configured the way we have proposed.

Asbestos cement (AC) pipe exists on Reservoir Road. It has been suggested that driving over it is dangerous. We have 53,000 linear feet of AC pipe, (25 percent of all water mains). We drive over it every day – 11,000 feet on 3A alone. None of it has ever been damaged. Sampling standards for AC pipe from the EPA are infrequent because AC pipe is not considered a risk. The World Health Organization has determined there is no reason to develop standards for asbestos in drinking water because risks are so low.

4. The abutters are concerned that eliminating trees and the road itself will cause flooding on Pleasant Street. Bear Hill Tank holds two million gallons of water. It has been drained three times in six years with no impact to homes below. The tank drains to a series of catch basins that take water to Pond Street and then to the ocean. Runoff would drain the same way.

5. The original RFP was for both the Bear Hill and Scituate Hill tanks. Scituate Hill is across 3A, adjacent to Graham Waste. Bear Hill was selected by AT&T for a reason: it provides better cell coverage to the parts of town that have poor wireless reception. Better than the towers on 3A. Frequently overlooked in this discussion is the need of the regional dispatch center. Bear Hill has been identified by the fire department as a preferred site. AT&T will make available at no cost its facility at Bear Hill for the fire department's equipment. If Bear Hill is not available, alternative sites can be developed, but at a cost to the fire department. The point of the dispatch center is to eliminate expense not add to it.

6. Town counsel has repeatedly advised that the development of water department resources as proposed is legal. Indeed, precedents abound. State Supreme Court decisions in Connecticut and New Jersey support counsel. There are 251,000 cell sites in the United States, many of which are on existing utility infrastructure.

There is an inference of bad faith attributed to the Water Department by the abutters with respect to this process. This project has been viewed, vetted, and approved by numerous town officials. Our immediate focus in the department is on cost reduction and revenue growth. Our last two capital projects, while small, have come in well under budget. We will always seek additional revenue opportunities like bulk water sales, but those opportunities are few and the margin contribution from them pales in comparison to Bear Hill. This is a sound project that will produce benefits town-wide for years.

It is important that all residents have a voice. While the abutters have been the most vocal, there are other parties affected, including the fire department, water department customers, and those citizens who simply want better cell service. As public officials, it is incumbent upon us to make sure all sides are represented. Why should someone concerned about better cell coverage in case of an emergency have less of a voice than an abutter? What about those justifiably outraged were we to ignore a low-cost, high-return revenue opportunity that didn't involve new taxes or fees?

Every dollar we save or raise in new non-tax generated revenue can be used to fund other town services, and that benefits all of us.

Some advice on ticks

TO THE EDITOR:

'Tis the season for ticks. Many are coming in with crawling ticks, embedded ticks and gorged ticks.

If you find a tick crawling on your pet or yourself, there is no need to worry. Simply touch the sticky side of scotch tape to it, fold the tape over it, and discard.

If the tick is embedded, it can be easily removed using a small spoon available at pet stores. This spoon has a perfect size V wedge notched out of it to capture the tick, including the head. Once captured it can be rolled into the tape and discarded.

Any tick parts that remain embedded should be left alone. I invite you to Google "embedded tick."

Once the tick attaches, it usually needs 24 hours before introducing the germ of Lyme Disease. If you find an attached tick, your physician can prescribe an antibiotic (need only two pills), which will prevent Lyme Disease.

The problem, during this season of the prolific tick, is not the tick you find, but the tick you do not find. Most people with severe Lyme Disease have no knowledge of having been bitten.

If you discover a rash looking like a bulls eye target, or a faint red rash about the size and shape of your palm, your physician can prescribe a longer course of an antibiotic to prevent the complications of Lyme Disease.

My friend Dave and I just came in from the woods in my backyard where we saw much evidence of deer activity. Before entering the house, I removed 20 plus ticks from my clothing. Be careful not to bring home ticks when you walk the woods, or even your lawn if it has been visited by Bambi.

Common sense over fear.

flush Inner Little Harbor is to remove all the boards and allow the normal twice daily tides to began cleaning up years of decayed algae. The recommendation was prepared as a compromise for those who want a "lakefront" home.

A majority of families on Little Harbor Road and the North side of Nichols Road have reacted to the report by hiring their own lawyer and engineer. As a result, the Board of Selectmen, by a vote of three to two, made the decision to ignore the recommendations of the Notice of Intent, transfer decision-making powers from the Conservation Commission to the Board of Selectmen, and again pit one neighbor against another instead of working for the best environmental solution. This is a mistake. The Conservation Commission, by its existence, is the town body most qualified to deal with environmental issues. A previous Board of Selectmen deliberated over the subject of Cat Dam for at least two years. During that time, the condition of Inner Little Harbor became a political issue, not the environmental issue it should be. We pay taxes on our underwater land. If anyone other than Mother Nature is going to control the flow of water over it, we would like it to be the Conservation Commission, not the Board of Selectmen.

The schedule for the opening and closing of Cat Dam effects every voter in town. If you voted to spend money on an environmental study, you should expect to see some return on that expenditure. The Conservation Commission is in regular contact with various State and Federal regulatory boards. Its members have pored through piles of letters from interested citizens on the issue, and it is the most knowledgeable town body to weigh the material in the Notice of Intent and arrive at the best, most equitable plan for the Town. They should be allowed to do their job.

FIELD HOCKEY

Undefeated

The undefeated Cohasset field hockey team (15-0-3) earned a No. 3 seed and a home game today against No. 19 Dedham (8-8-3).

The game is scheduled for a 3 p.m. start.

Dedham edged East Bridgewater 1-0 in overtime in the preliminary round on Tuesday.

Cohasset hasn't played Dedham, a team stronger than their record shows because of their level of competition, but had tied East Bridgewater 0-0 and beaten them this season.

A Cohasset win would set up a game against either Norwell or Scituate in the quarterfinals.

The Cohasset field hockey team closed out an undefeated season with a 3-2 win over Scituate in a hard fought game on the turf last Thursday night.

With the win, just one night after a 4-0 win at Mashpee, Cohasset closed out a 15-0-3 (10-0-2 South Shore League) season.

It was a game that could have

BOYS SOCCER

Time for some tourney

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

It was a good season for the Cohasset boys soccer team and it can get even better.

"We finished off strong," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. "We should have a high seed and a first round game at home, maybe two."

Cohasset finished the season with an impressive 13-3-2 record, 13-2-1 in the South Shore League.

Norwell won the South Shore League.

"We had four South Shore League All-Stars," Willis said. "Jonah Adkins, Drew Cobin, Travers Craven and Anders Goetz all made it. Jonah was also named an Eastern Mass All-Star as a junior. He was the No. 2 player in the league. That gives him a chance to go further. Drew was also named an EMAss All Star."

In recent action, Goetz had a huge game against Rockland, scoring four goals in the first half of a 7-0 win over Rockland.

The Skippers followed with a 5-1 win over Carver and a 3-0 season-ender over Rockland.

"Hopefully we'll get a tournament run started," Willis said. "We'll see what we get."

Tournament pairings were released yesterday.

Check www.wickedlocal.com for the latest, or look them up on www.miaa.net.

For the Skippers, this season has been special.

After losing star goalie Will Wise, who is now playing college soccer at Bowdoin, Sam Richardson stepped in and has been outstanding all season.

Cohasset has used the middle well this season, behind Mike Monaco, Adkins, Cobin and Goetz.

Cohasset made the tournament last year and beat Bristol-Plymouth in the opening round before losing to Westport in the second round.

On the girls side, the girls soccer team qualified for the tournament with a 9-8-2 record, coming on strong in the second half to make the tournament.

When Cohasset was 4-6-2, Beal predicted her team would come through.

"We have a very talented team that trains hard and plays hard," she said in a story run Oct. 15. "In the past few weeks we have really proven to ourselves that we came to play and we came to have fun and that attitude is beginning to spill over onto the

Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings Week 8

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

The final week of the regular season is the time when teams usually face some tough non-league opponents, battle it out for a league title, or try to get as many points as they can in order to get the best postseason seeding. The top six teams on both sides last week provided a combination of all three, which is reflected on both sides. It's also the reason for the nine changes combined, the most in one week this season. A few teams finish their regular seasons this week before the postseason pairings come out later in the week. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Oct. 31.

BOYS

1. Weymouth – This team cannot lose. The Wildcats remain the number one team Inside the 6 for the second straight week and deservedly so after going 1-0-2 last week, picking up a win over Braintree as well as draws against Brookline and King Philip.

2. Hingham – Jumping three spots this week is Hingham, a team that began the season at number one and held down that position for a few weeks. The Harbormen move back up the rankings after a win over Hanover and a tie against a surging Duxbury side. The Hingham boys lost once last week, but it came against one of the stronger teams in the area, B.C. High.

3. Duxbury – The Dragons clinched the Patriot League title last week with a tie against Hingham. Despite a 3-1 loss to Marshfield, the injury plagued Dragons still proved they can play through pain and maintain their number three position.

4. Norwell – Prior to beating Hull, Harwich, and Abington last week by a combined score of 11-1, the Clippers suffered their second loss of the season, and it came against a struggling Carver team. The Clippers were knocked from last week's number two position after Hingham and Duxbury combined to produce favorable results against quality opponents.

5. Marshfield – After a mid-season slump, the Rams find themselves back Inside the 6. They came up with a huge, 3-1 win over Duxbury last week in addition to a victory over Dennis-Yarmouth and a tie with Plymouth South to improve to 11-6-1.

6. Silver Lake – The Lakers slide down one position despite playing decent soccer. They beat Scituate and Bridgewater-Raynham last week, but tied a weak Whitman-Hanson team.

On the bubble: Cohasset, Hanover, Carver, and Scituate

Week seven rankings: 1. Weymouth, 2. Norwell, 3. Duxbury, 4. Hingham, 5. Silver Lake, 6. Cohasset

GIRLS

1. Duxbury – The Duxbury girls capped off a fine regular season with a commanding 3-0 win over No. 12 Bishop-Fenwick. The Lady Dragons began the week with a 1-1 tie against Hingham, their second draw against the Harborwomen this season. Duxbury finished the regular season at 13-3-2 and in second place in the Patriot League Keenan Division.

2. Weymouth – The Lady Wildcats remained in the number two slot after extending their unbeaten streak to nine. The girls beat Braintree, 1-0, and Brookline, 4-0, to improve to 10-2-6. Weymouth finished its league schedule as co-champs with Needham of the Bay State Carey Division.

3. Plymouth South – Wow. What a week for the Lady Panthers. They scored a pair of 2-1 victories, both against teams Inside the 6 – Marshfield and Plymouth North – to push their unbeaten streak to eight. They lost, 1-0, to Sandwich to end the week and their regular season with a 12-3-3 record.

4. Pembroke – Wins over Randolph (4-0) and Sacred Heart (6-3) made it six straight for the Lady Titans. They finished the week with a 1-0 loss to Bridgewater-Raynham, but they haven't lost momentum. The girls finish the regular season this week (Nov. 2) at home against Sacred Heart, bringing a 12-4-2 record into the match.

5. Marshfield – A 2-3-4 stretch might not sound too bad, and it isn't, but the top four teams Inside the 6 this week produced significant results against some top teams last week. The Marshfield girls handily beat Dennis-Yarmouth (7-1), before losing, 2-1, to Plymouth South, the number three team in this week's Inside the 6. The Lady Rams ended the week with a 1-1 tie against Notre Dame Academy, the team that snapped Marshfield's eight-game winning streak to start the season.

6. Plymouth North – The Lady Eagles hit a minor snag last week, dropping two games before beating Martha's Vineyard, 5-0. The North girls lost a winnable game against Falmouth, falling 3-1, and then lost, 2-1, to rivals Plymouth South.

On the bubble: Norwell, Hingham, Carver, and Silver Lake

Week seven rankings: 1. Duxbury, 2. Weymouth, 3. Marshfield, 4. Plymouth South, 5. Plymouth North, 6. Pembroke

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@cnc.com

This Week's High 5 (Week 10)

Brendan McLaughlin (Marshfield)- I like to think I have used this space to try and educate those new to our great sport, but if I have taught nothing else, it's that a team is only as good as its 5th runner. Well, McLaughlin was both 5th and good for the Rams in their dominant win at the ACL Championships on Saturday, and Marshfield looks strong when it matters- November. Joel Hubbard and Kevin Thomas were their usual elite selves, taking 2nd and 3rd overall, but it was McLaughlin's turn in 15th at 15:08 that sealed the 45-56 win over Plymouth North.

Brendan Adams (Pembroke)- When a team takes 4 of the top 6 places in its conference meet, the first reaction might be to wonder how strong that conference really is. But those who have followed the Patriot League this season know it's as good as it gets, and Adams's 5th place finish in 16:16 is a pretty good indication of just how deep it is. Most teams would dream of having a #1 as strong as Adams, and here he is, the 3rd runner for the Titans. I guess that's how they've earned a top-20 national ranking this season.

John Logan (Hanover)- Humor me for one second. Take out the 7 Pembroke and 6 Whitman-Hanson runners that finished in the top 18 at the Patriot League meet. That leaves Logan the 7th runner, behind Duxbury's Bray and Angell, Hingham's Baccari and McConville, and Silver Lake's Delaney and Hansen, all names the PL has come to know. Logan has stayed under the radar, but is quietly putting together a solid junior season for the 8th place Indians. At 20th place in 17:27, the numbers don't lie. Be on the lookout for Logan come November.

Heather Connick and Chelsea Savage (Pembroke)- The Patriot League Meet may have belonged to Whitman-Hanson's girls by three points, but there was literally nothing more these two could have done to prevent the loss. Connick, rounding nicely into late-season form, dominated form start to finish, winning in 19:07, but Savage had to outlast Hingham's super-sophomore Julie McConville for the runner-up position in 19:20. Perhaps no 1-2 punch exists in DII in all of Massachusetts.

Julie Tevenan (Weymouth)- In an epic Bay State Conference Meet victory over archrival Wellesley 43-44, every place literally counted for the Wildcats. Taking three of the top 8 spots each, the teams were deadlocked, but Tevenan's 12th place 20:10 run was enough to put Weymouth into the winner's circle for the first time since joining the conference in 1997. Bridget Jaklitsch (4th, 19:20), Jill Corcoran (6th, 19:49), Morgan Fitzgibbon (8th, 19:59), Molly Barker (13th, 20:12), and Vanessa Murphy (22nd, 21:06) all showed monstrous guts in pulling off the hard-fought win..

Meet to Watch (Week 10):

South Shore League Championship (Tuesday 11/2 @Strawberry Valley CC, Abington)- The question on everybody's mind in this surprisingly late-season league meet is, can Norwell hold off East Bridgewater once again? Norwell's boys were 27-29 winners at home a few weeks ago, but gone is the home course advantage. Expect the Vikings to be motivated to take down the SSL Meet title, and gain some needed momentum heading into their class meet. On the girls side, #4 Norwell looks like a safer bet to bet up their undefeated season, but East Bridgewater was also their closest challenge during the regular season, and will be similarly motivated.

gone either way, with Scituate taking a 1-0 lead less than a minute into the second half on the first of two goals by Sarah Hoffman.

Cohasset tied it with a goal by Sage Stebbins less than two minutes later.

With 21:45 left, Scituate took the lead again, but Cohasset answered with Natalie Dignam's first of two goals.

Dignam's second goal gave Cohasset the lead for good with 17:25 left to play.

"This was a real battle," Giuliano said. "We played unbelievably well. I'm proud of my girls. They battled every step of the way. They played like champions."

Scituate coach Amanda Bird-Clemmer felt her team played a good game.

"It was a great game," Bird-Clemmer said. "We played very well. I liked everything I saw from my girls. They were driving up the field, aggressive at the net. We just fell a little short."

Scituate finished the regular season 12-6-2.

Cohasset has had a great effort from players up and down the lineup.

They've had outstanding goaltending from Whitney Jaffe.

Scoring has come from Kelsey Erler and Olivia Murphy and Giuliano has talked about her captains and their brilliant leadership all season long.

The South Shore League title was Cohasset's first since 1975, and the undefeated season was Cohasset's first since 1973.

Jaffe, Erler, Murphy and Dignam were all named South Shore League All-Stars.

field. We are playing as a team and relying on one another. Understanding that we are a fairly young team and we have some work to do is where we are at. We will continue to plug away and make gains everyday. This group is hard working and dedicated, so as the next few weeks pass you can bet that the improvements on the field will be very exciting."

On the football field, Cohasset had another rough trip to Mashpee, falling 33-32 on the road.

Cohasset fell behind early, but rallied late to give themselves a chance to win, but Thomas Flibotte was stopped on a two-point conversion with 4:50 left to play.

Flibotte had two touchdowns and Jake Kissick also had two scores for the Skippers, who dropped to 5-2, with both losses by one point.

The loss was a tough one, but might not have done a whole lot to change their playoff status as Rockland beat Abington in a game now known for the viral online video of the Abington cable announcers going crazy after what looked like a blown call in that game.

There were also a few interesting comments by a Rockland player on the radio after that game as well.

TEN REASONS WHY YOUR CHILD NEEDS A SUMMER CAMP EXPERIENCE
By Bette Bussel – Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

There's no doubt that summer camp is fun. Kids get to sing silly songs, play funny games, swim in lakes, and tell spooky stories around a campfire. But is the image of camp that has been captured and memorialized in films, books, and television programs, but there's much more to camp than just a good time. For the last century and a half, experiential education in summer camp settings has played an integral role in children's overall development – cognitive, physical, and social-emotional. Here are ten reasons why your child shouldn't miss out on the unique growth experiences that awaits this summer at camp.

1. Development of critical-thinking and leadership skills. Camp provides the perfect environment for your child to learn and practice. Individual and group decision making, how to navigate and navigate their interactions with others, and how to resolve conflict and other issues that may arise when living and working together closely.
2. Increased physical activity – from canoeing and hiking to soccer and tag, an on-going workout is a natural part of the day.
3. Direct experiences in nature and living much more closely to the Earth – being outdoor is proven to reduce stress levels, improve mood, and simultaneously stimulate all of a child's senses.
4. Lasting intergenerational and diverse relationships – from peers to counselors, summer camp gives your child an opportunity to meet new people from a variety of age groups, providing them with positive role models and new friends.
5. Safety away from home – at camp your child is supervised by trained professionals who ensure their safety while inspiring them to try new things.
6. Greater self-reliance, self-sufficiency & self-confidence – children learning how to take responsibility for themselves, their space, and their belongings. Campers often discover strengths that they never knew existed through various activities and experiences. Being at camp is independence building.
7. Reduced summer learning loss – studies have shown that during summer vacation, students can lose the equivalent of up to three months of what they've learned during the school year. Camp's programming keeps a child's brain active, alert, and acquiring knowledge and skills.
8. Positive risk-taking – camp provides a safe environment, usually with free, encouragement for you child to step out of their comfort zone to take physical and emotional risks that they never would have under other circumstances.
9. A strong sense of community – group living with both experienced camp members and new campers, working and playing together, learning how to work together for a common goal, and to appreciate and value others' gifts.
10. Memories that will last a lifetime – when the summer ends, camp memories live on in moments of laughter and smiles.

Get Ready! It's November!

LIFE AT CHS

NATALIE DIGNAM

It's not all about the athletes, though, because the math team has their first math meet this Friday!

This week, upperclassmen are preparing for the annual Powder Puff game! Every year, the senior and junior girls face off in an intense game of "flag" football. On Nov. 24th the girls will playing at Alumni Field and will be on the look out for some junior "friends" (previously junior targets). For the next few weeks seniors will be preparing by logging some extra hours at the fitness center and honing some unique pre-game rituals (maybe some yelling into the mirror, but if that doesn't psyche you up, there's always Lady Gaga).

In the midst off all this preparation, you would think CHS athletes have no time left for anything else, but you would be wrong. The boys' soccer team, girls' soccer team, and field hockey team have all qualified for tournament and the golf team won the league title. It's not all about the athletes, though, because the math team (that's right, the world famous.... wait, you haven't heard of the powerhouse which is the CHS math team?) has their first math meet this Friday!

In other news, mother nature had turned on us once again and now we shall all be driving home in the dark, and therefore poses another challenge to those of us who arrive at school at 7:29 each morning a receive a personal welcome from Dr. Gill. Unfortunately, the colder weather also means that seniors lose the only privilege they have ever enjoyed at CHS, besides some "closer" parking spots, namely eating outdoors. That's all for this week CHS!

Gerrymandering movie explores redistricting

Do voters choose their representatives in Congress or do the politicians choose the voters? What if they choose to exclude you? Will you know where your district went after the Census is finished? "Gerrymandering," a new independent documentary, will screen at The Brattle Theatre in Cambridge on Nov. 5, 6 and 7, and at Marblehead's historic Abbot Hall, on Dec. 9 with a reception to follow.

This new film by Jeff Reichert explores how democracy has evolved through American history. Reichert takes the audience from Elbridge Gerry's original salamander-shaped etching through "the dumbbell district," "the bad hair district," Florida's Swamp Cabbage Festival, a variety of state capitols and an Oklahoma Holiday Inn where Texan legislators holed up to evade a vote, and introduces audience members to people concerned about the lines that include, or exclude, voters or competing candidates from various districts.

Cohasset's Susan Bryant served as sound recordist and associate producer for the film as the small crew traveled to California, Oklahoma, Iowa, Florida, Texas, New York and Washington, D.C., to interview Governors Pete Wilson, Gray Davis and Arnold Schwarzenegger; and a variety of reporters, activists and redistricting experts. In Massachusetts they filmed Elbridge Gerry artifacts and the Fourth of July parade in Marblehead, and historic musical re-enactor Jeremy Bell in Leominster, but did not get into questions of Massachusetts' own redistricting.

"With Massachusetts likely to lose a representative in the U.S. Congress this year, redistricting is sure to be a timely topic here," said Bryant. "I hope the film encourages interesting discussions here in Massachusetts." For people particularly interested in understanding how redistricting works, she recommends "The ReDistricting Game," available free online from the USC Annenberg Center.

The film, which premiered at the Tribeca Film Festival earlier this year, opened in select theaters across the nation during the week of Oct. 12. Show times at the Brattle Theatre, including a question and answer period with the filmmakers and regional experts, are 8 p.m., on Friday, Nov. 5, and 5 p.m., on Saturday, Nov. 6, and Sunday, Nov. 7.

"Gerrymandering" will screen at 6:30 p.m., on Dec. 9, at Marblehead's Abbot Hall, co-sponsored by the Historical Commission of Marblehead, Marblehead Museum and Historical Society, Marblehead Arts Association, League of Women Voters, Salem State Department of Political Science and Bates Center for Public Affairs, Prison Policy Initiative, Common Cause and Green Film Co.. All are welcome to discuss history, film and democracy over wine and snacks at the Marblehead Museum & Historical Society's reception at 170 Washington St., immediately following the screening.

November: Family Caregiver Month

Support is available for caregivers

LIVING WELL

JOAN F. WRIGHT, CMC

Editor's note: Living Well is a monthly column provided by Joan F. Wright on behalf of the NVNA & Hospice. The monthly subjects of the column will coincide with National Health Observances as outlined by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. The column appears the first week of each month.

Beyond the role of mom, dad, sibling, or grandparent, is the family caregiver who cares for the child with special needs, a sick older relative, or an aging parent. The family caregiver might be an elderly spouse or a 20-year-old grandchild. With the average age of 49 years old, the family caregiver is often a middle-ager being pulled back into the role of caregiver, now for an aging parent or sick spouse. Caring for the elderly or a loved one with Alzheimer's or other dementia are the top two family caregiver needs.

Family caregivers have exploded to nearly 66 million in the United States.* They provide on average, 20.4 hours of care per week, with 26 percent exceeding that. At the same time, 73 percent of caregivers also work outside the home at least part-time and 56 percent say they provide all or most of the unpaid care.

If you yourself are not involved in family caregiving, your neighbors, friends, acquaintances and co-workers most probably are. Caregiving covers a wide range of support from transportation, housekeeping, and bill paying to personal care (help with bathing, dressing, eating) and advocacy. Often, family members become so involved in the care of loved ones, they don't even realize they've become a "caregiver."

The average length of caregiving lasts 4.6 years, with 31 percent caring for five or more years. Yet the need for information and support about caregiving was identified by 78 percent of family caregivers surveyed across the country. Often, caregivers admit, "I don't even know what I don't even know." So where does a family caregiver turn?

Whether caring for a child or an elder, support groups provide invaluable resources through peer support, education, and professional guidance and referrals. Local Visiting Nurse organizations, in particular those that are non-profit, offer healthcare options such as paid help, direction and advocacy. Financial planners assist with budgeting for today's needs as well as estate planning. Elder law attorneys counsel about advanced healthcare directives, using personal assets wisely, and preparing for the future.

For those caring for the elderly, Councils on Aging offer a great resource of information through their outreach departments. They can refer to a variety of healthcare, insurance, elder law and financial planning experts. Geriatric Care Managers also offer referrals as well as coordination and oversight of all services. This is particularly helpful for adult children who live out of state or are unable to do this themselves.

As our demographics age, the people who need care will far outnumber the caregivers available to help. So tapping into community resources is critical. But just as important is accessing the right professionals. Check for credentials and certifications to ensure that the help and support you enlist is legitimate, qualified and credible, particularly when paying for someone's expertise. Your physician, local VNA, and school system is a good starting point to get direction.

 Statistics from 2009 report of National Alliance for Caregiving in collaboration with AARP and MetLife.*

COURTESY PHOTO

Hair Imports in Shaw's Plaza held a pumpkin contest in time for Halloween. Each of the stylists came up with a design for their pumpkin and displayed them for the week of Oct. 26-29 outside the salon for clients and passersby to view. Those who were interested placed their vote for the pumpkin they liked best and were entered into a drawing for a gift card to the salon. Everyone seemed to enjoy the contest and it was fun to see which pumpkin they chose as the winner. Can you guess? (Answer is the pumpkin on the far left with red eyes, tongue and brown hair.)

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
NOV. 15, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your ruling planet, Mars, allows you to assume a sense of command that can help you turn a chaotic workplace situation into one that's orderly, productive and, yes, even friendly.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Getting a relationship that's been stuck in a rut up and running again depends on how far you want to run with it. Be honest with yourself as you consider which decision to make.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be wary of rumors that seem to be coming from everywhere this week. Waiting for the facts before you act means never having to say you're sorry you followed the wrong lead.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A difficult personal matter might prompt you to turn to a trusted friend to help you sort through a maze of emotional conflicts. The weekend should bring some welcome news.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some of the new people coming into the Lion's life could play pivotal roles in future personal and professional matters. Meanwhile, an old friend might have an important message.

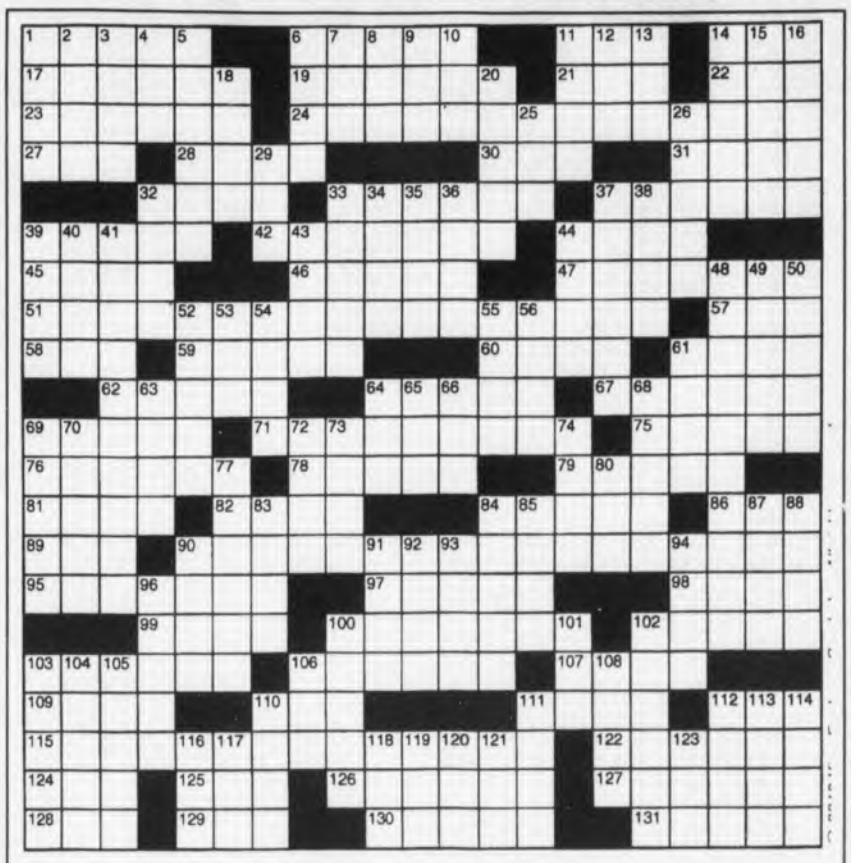
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A delay in getting things moving on schedule can be a blessing in disguise. Use this extra time to do more research so you can buttress any of the weaker points with solid facts.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might need to get involved in a personal matter before it becomes a serious problem. Also be wary of someone offering to mediate unless you can be sure of his or her motives.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Taking sides in a workplace or domestic dispute could prolong the problem. Stay out and stay cool. Then you can be friends with both parties when things settle down.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A friendship has the potential to become something more, and with this week's aspects favoring romance, you might feel that this possibility is worth exploring.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The new job you want might require you to relocate. If so, keep an open mind and weigh all the positives and negatives before making your decision.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new relationship seems to be everything you could have hoped for. Congratulations. Meanwhile, it's not too early to get some feedback on that new project you're working on.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might have decided to get out of the fast-moving current and just float around hither and yon for a while. But you might find that the new opportunity is too tempting to turn down.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Calling all angels

ATLANTIC OVERTURES

ROY HARRIS

Do you believe in angels?

Not the winged ones that carry harps and wear halos, or adorn Christmas tree tops. Or even those television characters, silently and secretly protecting someone from evil – although that's much closer to what I'm thinking about today.

No. I mean those angels who devotedly support an enterprise they love – especially an arts enterprise. And who understand that the financial sustainability of their beloved enterprise depends on personal "underwriting" in the form of a financial gift.

The Atlantic Symphony Orchestra believes in angels. Indeed, it depends on them. The generosity of classical music-lovers, in fact, is the major reason that the ASO and its terrific conductor, Jin Kim, can continue to enrich the South Shore's cultural environment with a season-full of live classical music, while offering a new world of musical education to the youth of the region.

We're crazy about large audiences – which also tend to contain angels, by the way. But concertgoers pay less than a third of the total cost of a performance. In part, that's because we hold ticket prices to $35 or less for major orchestral presentations – to keep them accessible to the widest music-loving base.

The low prices create a huge funding chasm that must be filled from other sources. Consider the ASO's record 500-plus audience at its Oct. 16 Opening Night at the Duxbury Performing Arts Center: It provided only $8,000 of the $28,000 musician payroll for the event – by far the largest cost for a professional orchestra like ours.

COURTESY PHOTO

The Atlantic Symphony Orchestra's principal flutist, Jessica Lizak, is supported by Eileen McIntyre and Roy Harris as part of the ASO's "Principal Musicians Circle" sponsorship program.

That other $20,000? That's why we believe in angels. We have to. And, in the case of the angels we have, it's why we love them.

Myths abound about angels, of course.

One myth is that they're invisible. Not always. The ASO program book, for example, lists 30 South Shore residents who gave more than $1,000 last season, above and beyond the price of concert tickets. (Major philanthropic bequests, of course, get special attention.)

Another myth: that angels are totally selfless. No, indeed. With each magnificent concert, ASO angels take great satisfaction in their role in making it all possible. And that's particularly true of those who choose to give at the $5,000-or-more level – which lets them have a favorite ASO instrument associated with their gift.

How do I know? Because, I must confess, for years now my wife Eileen and I have been ASO angels ourselves. We swell with pride when "our" musician – principal flutist Jessica Lizak – has a solo that holds the audience spellbound. (Nothing makes me happier, in fact, than when our Hingham friend Elizabeth – another ASO devotee – compliments the playing of "Eileen's and Roy's personal flutist.") Is our contribution "worth it"? No question there.

A third angel myth is quite troubling – and potentially damaging to arts organizations like our orchestra. That's the myth that angelic support can go on forever, without the painstaking cultivation of people to wear the halos.

At the ASO, at least, angels are all too rare. Now, with the ASO's annual appeal going out to past donors, and to concertgoers who have yet to donate, the competition for individual contributions soon will be apparent – especially in this tough economy. Who can deny that there are other pressing needs for an angel's help?

And yet, if more people understood the powerful way their ASO donations can enhance the quality of life in their South Shore "backyard," the orchestra would be fitting donor after donor for wings, I know.

Amid all the angel myths, one very stark truth stands out: Without angels, no arts organization is sustainable. With them, however – here on the South Shore, at least – our cultural life thrives, and the region is a far better place.

If you've ever considered being an angel for the arts – any arts – please try out those wings by writing that check. And if it's live classical music on the South Shore that you love and want to support, now you know:

The ASO believes in you.

A shining star herself

Press agent Movsesian leaves lasting legacy

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

The news of the passing last week of legendary theatrical press agent Nance Movsesian was handled quietly — just the way Movsesian would have wanted it. Throughout her more than 40-year career in local theater, Movsesian sought the limelight, but always for her clients and never for herself.

"You're only as good as your show," she would often say. And by that standard, Nance was one of the giants.

Born in Haverhill into a large and very proud Armenian family, a young Movsesian tried her luck as an actress in New York, studying with Uta Hagen at the famed HB Studio. New York was just a little too far from home, however, and before long she was back in Boston, hired by Frank Sugrue to be Director of Public Relations for the Charles Playhouse. In the 1960s, with the artistic leadership of Michael Murray, the Warrenton Street theater was at the forefront of the regional theater movement. Young actors like Al Pacino, Jill Clayburgh and Jane Alexander got their starts at the Charles Playhouse, and Movsesian made sure they got press.

In the 1970s, Jujamcyn theater impresario Samuel H. Schwartz hired Movsesian to house manage the Wilbur Theatre in Boston. Movsesian worked for Schwartz for a decade, but would quote him for the rest of her life. Many a Movsesian story began, "As my old boss Sam Schwartz used to say...." She became her own boss 30 years ago with the opening of her Back Bay publicity firm, Ideas Associates. While over the years she would represent restaurant chains and authors, her primary focus—and her real love—was the professional theater. Her first client was the first national tour of the Tony Award-winning musical "Annie," and she would promote every subsequent Equity production of "Annie" that played Boston – and there were many.

Nance Movsesian

Throughout her more than 40-year career in local theater, Movsesian sought the limelight, but always for her clients and never for herself.

Other shows and stars also insisted that Movsesian handle their publicity, including five-time Tony Award winner Julie Harris. The Chatham resident regularly toured the country, of course, with shows like "The Belle of Amherst," "Driving Miss Daisy," "Lettice and Lovage," "Lucifer's Child," and "The Gin Game." And whenever Harris played Boston, her trusted colleague and friend Nance Movsesian was at her side.

Movsesian also shepherded many pre-Broadway openings through their Boston try-outs, including "West Side Waltz" with Katharine Hepburn, "Agnes of God" with Lee Remick and Geraldine Page, and "La Cage aux Folles" with Gene Barry and George Hearn, as well as major revivals like 1995's "Hello, Dolly!" starring Carol Channing, and 1997's "The Diary of Anne Frank," featuring Natalie Portman.

Although Boston was her base, Movsesian's media savvy got her notice elsewhere, too. In the 1980s, J. Arnold Nickerson hired her as publicist for his eponymous theaters in Norwell—now home to the Company Theatre—and Sudbury. More recently, Movsesian handled the Boston media for the Cape Playhouse in Dennis for several seasons. She was also the longtime press agent for Tony Award-winning producer and Quincy resident Spring Sirkin ("Master Class").

Movsesian made a lasting impression on all who knew her. That was evident in 2009 when, while handling press for The Elliot Norton Awards at Sanders Theatre in Cambridge, she encountered one of that evening's special guests. After paying tribute to the late Paul Benedict, a fellow Theatre Company of Boston alum, Academy Award winner Al Pacino was besieged by autograph seekers as he exited the building. While the actor graciously obliged them he noticed a familiar face off to the side.

"Nance, it is you, isn't it?" Pacino exclaimed, as he reached through the crowd to hug an old friend. "It is so good to see you."

R. Scott Reedy has been writing about theater for almost 30 years. Nance Movsesian gave him his first pair of press tickets, in February 1982, when he reviewed "Agnes of God" during its pre-Broadway run at Boston's Wilbur Theatre.

Veterans honored at Deer Hill

Fourth annual ceremony brings out 21 vets

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Let me know in my heart, when my days are through, America, America, I gave my best to you."

These were a few of the words sung by Deer Hill students at Tuesday's Veterans Day ceremony. More than 20 Cohasset veterans attended the fourth annual ceremony and were honored and thanked by the third-, fourth- and fifth-grade students.

Through the mediums of music, song and written word, Deer Hill students displayed their gratitude to their honored guests in uniform. The show of appreciation was met with equal thanks from the veterans themselves.

The fifth-grade band filled the gymnasium with patriotic tunes as the rest of the student body filed into the room. Deer Hill has spent three weeks preparing for the ceremony, across all faces of the curriculum. Classroom teachers taught the students what it means to be a veteran.

As the students filed into the room they waved their small red, white and blue flags in a display of patriotism.

Principal Jennifer deChiara opened the day by addressing the student body and explaining what Veterans Day means.

"Veterans Day is a holiday, but it's a solemn holiday," deChiara said. It's a time to honor, thank and reflect on the sacrifices made by those who have fought for our country and our freedoms.

"We should honor them everyday in our hearts, but on Veterans Day we honor them publicly," deChiara said.

"We should honor them every day in our hearts, but on Veterans Day we honor them publicly."
— Principal Jennifer deChiara

She told the children about the many freedoms people in America enjoy, freedoms that are not enjoyed around the world.

Joe McElroy, the town's veterans' agent, read a letter from a young man currently stationed in Afghanistan. The letter spoke of his gratitude and appreciation after receiving letters and basic items from home. McElroy invited the students of Deer Hill School to write this soldier or other servicemen and servicewomen serving overseas.

Two fifth-grade student essays were chosen. Joseph Protulis's essay talked about being the son of a US Air National Guardsman and his dream of becoming an Army Ranger.]

"Veterans need to know we support them and appreciate their sacrifice," Joseph said.

Halle Pratt, whose grandfather and uncle were pilots in the Navy, spoke of the characteristics veterans possess: loyalty, bravery, focus, patriotic, willingness and humility.

"Without veterans we might not have had a beautiful town like Cohasset," Halle said.

Superintendent focus

Parents identify qualities and important issues

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Before you start searching for something it's essential to know what to look for.

In that spirit, focus groups convened this Tuesday to identify what various school community constituent groups want in the next school superintendent.

Some priorities were of no surprise, qualities like a commitment to academic excellence, a track record of financial and budget skills and strong leadership ability.

Others were more specific such as special education knowledge and experience, innovative ideas to create a competitive small district, the desire to engage the public in a positive manner.

The structure of the meeting was informal, in essence a brainstorming session and the participants built off of each other's ideas. About 30 parents attended the evening focus group geared toward parent and community members at the high school library. Earlier in the day focus group sessions were conducted with three other constituencies (elementary staff, middle-high school staff and administrators).

Search consultants Bud Ferris and Joanne Rys from NESDEC (New England School Development Council) mediated the focus groups. The information gathered at each of the focus groups

"We want someone with positive energy that's contagious and comes in with a can-do attitude."
— Trish Morse, parent will be compiled and reported to the School Committee and the superintendent search committee in the coming weeks (see search timeline sidebar). The consultants will also develop a superintendent profile from the focus groups to serve as a screening device as the hiring process moves forward.

Only two questions were asked of each of the focus groups. What are you looking for in a new school superintendent? What do you want the new superintendent to focus on in the first year on the job?

The ideas came fast and furious when it came to the ideal candidate. Past experience as a superintendent, strong communication skills, collaborative and consensus building style, experience in the classroom, a desire to connect with students, as well as parents and teachers, were the thoughts brought up right out of the box.

After the first few ideas came forward one of the parents suggested that many of Meals, hotel tax to consider

Special Town Meeting, Monday, 7p.m.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Should the town of Cohasset follow 110 other Massachusetts towns and add a .75 meals tax?

And more than that, should the town impose a hotel tax of up to 6 percent?

These two questions are bound to cause discussion on the floor of Special Town Meeting Monday (Nov. 15).

The meals and hotel tax could provide what town officials say is a needed revenue stream. Together, the taxes, which will be considered in separate articles, could bring in more than $160,000 a year.

On the other hand, the Chamber of Commerce and restaurant owners have spoke out against the local option meals tax. The tax could be the tipping point and place stress on already narrow profit margins.

The differing opinions could lead to a spirited discussion on the floor of town meeting.

But, Selectmen chair Karen Quigley is sure those won't be the only articles to generated discussion.

"Anything to do with money always has the potential for hot discussion and sometimes it's the smaller amounts that result in the most discussion. There are a number of articles that may qualify," Quigley said. In addition to the meals and hotel excise taxes, Quigley said she expects debate on the citizens' petition concerning the water department (article 14). The article proposes put control of spending by a water commission under the Board of Selectmen.

"(The article) may bring people out. People are still rightfully upset over the bankruptcy of the water enterprise fund and the increased rates," Quigley said.

The November tradition of Special Town Meeting will begin as soon as 100 registered voters convene in the high school gymnasium at 7p.m. on Monday night.

Quigley is optimistic for a good turnout, "lately (reaching a quorum) is a concern. Hopefully, recent events with the water enterprise fund have awakened the citizenry to what can happen when they abdicate their right to vote."

A total of 14 articles appear on the warrant, or agenda, for Special Town Meeting. The issues range from amendments to the current fiscal year's budget to a capital purchase to establishing a community septic system to aid homeowners with failing septic systems.

Each article will be taken up one at a time, a motion will be made, and votes will typically be taken on a voice basis.

The Mariner caught up with Kelly Grech this week in the Recreation Department Office at Town Hall. Kelly teaches the Rec's Adult Full Body Conditioning, Training for 5K, Strong Boys and Girls, Running Club and chaperones Recreation Center events and parties.

Name: Kelly Grech.

Occupation: Cohasset Recreation Fitness Educator and mother of four.

Best day of your life: There are four. My wedding day June 19, 1999; and my kids' birthdays April 25, 2001; October 28, 2002 (x2); March 22, 2005.

Worst vacation: Getting stranded by Jet Blue at a temporary airport gate of LaGuardia Airport with our four kids for 18 hours on our way to California. We all slept in a hallway with birds flying over head all night. We ended up back in Cohasset.

Favorite season: Fall.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Favorite junk food: Popcorn.

Best book: Twilight, the series (without any apologies).

Best movie: "Jaws" and "Talladega Nights: The Ballad of Ricky Bobby."

Best TV show: "Curb Your Enthusiasm."

Best music, group, or artist: Green Day and Jon Bon Jovi. I'm an 80s girl at heart.

Pet peeve: Assumptions....always a bad idea.

Most embarrassing moment: After a bad day at work once I got my long blond hair chopped and dyed my new short hair red. I showed up to work the next day and everyone thought I was the new girl. It was a funny day.

Goal: Healthy kids and husband, happy home and lots of laughs with great friends.

Person you'd most like to meet: Ellen DeGeneres.

Biggest worry: Nationally our kids' obesity rate is unacceptable. Moderation has to be enforced by parents/guardians.

Best part of Cohasset: Running the hillside with my running buddies, an occasional clucker at JJs Junction, and of course the great programs offered at Cohasset Recreation.

Wild turkeys, deer

Come to Wompatuck State Park on Saturday, Nov. 20th from 10 am to 11:30 a.m. for an interesting and informative slide show about two Massachusetts animals that are very active in the fall – the wild turkey and the whitetail deer. This program is sponsored by the Massachusetts Department of Conservation & Recreation.

There will be hand-on items to touch and explore and then we'll head outside to look at the habitats they live in and to look for any signs of turkey and deer on the trails! Program will meet at the Visitor Center. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Rain or shine – severe weather will cancel. For more information please call Amy at (508) 272-9376. POLICE BEAT

Pumpkin vandals summonsed for destruction of property

By Mary Ford
mford@cnc.com

Police received several calls around 10 p.m. on Monday (Nov. 1) about pumpkins being thrown at mailboxes in the area of Pond Street, Reservoir Road, Main Street and Rust Way. One caller was able to provide a good description on the four-door, blue Ford pickup truck with four teens inside and pumpkins in the truck bed. Police put out a BOLO (Be On the Lookout) for the truck and an officer spotted the truck on North Main Street.

The four boys, all from Scituate (two 18-year-olds; a 16-year-old and a 15-year-old) are being summonsed to court on charges of willful malicious destruction of property. Police said the teens apparently were stopping on different roads around Cohasset, Hull and Scituate, going up to doorsteps, and taking the pumpkins. Then they drove around Cohasset and threw them at mailboxes. Some of the mailboxes were worth as much as $400-$500, police said.

...they drove around Cohasset and threw the pumpkins at mailboxes. Some of the mailboxes were worth as much as $400-$500, police said.

Protective custody

A village storekeeper called at 6:20 p.m. last Monday (Nov. 1) about a man who was acting suspiciously outside the store. As it turned out the man, who is 30 and a Hingham resident, was highly intoxicated, police said. He was placed into protective custody and his pickup truck was towed. Police were unable to locate the person who, he claimed, had driven him there in his truck. A computer check showed the Hingham man had a suspended license.

Copper ends

Police are investigating the apparent theft of copper ends on the posts of the fence at Atlantica. The ends were pried off and the thieves probably scrapped them, police said.

Store break-in

The owner of a village store reported on Tuesday (Nov. 2) that sometime Saturday (Oct. 30), someone tried to break into the shop. She said there were pry marks on the door and the doorknob was almost off. She also reported the break-in might be related to money that was stolen from the store in August.

Revoked license

An 81-year-old Cohasset man is being summonsed to court for operating after license revocation last Wednesday (Nov. 3). At 2:24 p.m., an officer on detail spotted the man driving a 2005 Dodge minivan and had knowledge that the registry had revoked his license because his driving could pose an immediate threat to public safety. The operator claimed his lawyer told him it was OK for him to drive but police explained that the lawyer did not have that authority.

Police had filed a report on this operator a few weeks ago after he had driven off the road a couple of times. The operator can seek restitution of his license through a hearing at the registry, police explained.

Stolen checks

A 63-year-old Scituate man, who owns a plumbing company, reported that three checks he received by customers in the amounts of $502; $225; and $350 had been stolen and deposited in an account at Bank of America. His bookkeeper brought the missing checks to his attention; they contacted the clients, who reported the checks had cleared. The plumbing company provided the check numbers to police who went to the bank and determined the checks were deposited into the account of a 28-year-old Scituate woman, who is being summonsed to court for larceny over $250.

Sandwich taken

A 34-year-old Plymouth man, who said his cell phone had distracted him, explained he inadvertently left Shaw's without paying for a $6 sandwich he took from the ready-to-go area. Shaw's notified police last Friday (Nov. 5) at about 1 p.m. about the fact a man left the store without paying and provided the plate number of the van. Police stopped the vehicle on Beechwood Street. A computer check revealed the man had no record and he returned to Shaw's to pay for the sandwich, police said.

Witnesses at the crash scene reported that the mini-bus pulled out in front of a 1999 Ford Escort station wagon which was heading south on Route 3A.

Another accident at entrance to Shaw's

A 55-year-old woman from Hingham who was operating a small handicap mini-bus that is owned by Sunrise Assisted Living of Cohasset, was cited by Cohasset police for failing to yield the right of way to on coming traffic. Witnesses at the crash scene reported that the mini-bus pulled out in front of a 1999 Ford Escort station wagon which was heading south on Route 3A.

The mini-bus was hit by the Escort, which was being operated by a 19-year-old woman from Whitman. The 19-year-old woman from Whitman was taken to South Shore Hospital by Cohasset ambulance with minor injuries. An elderly passenger in the mini-bus also received minor injuries. She is a 74-year-old Cohasset resident. Scituate ambulance transported her to South Shore Hospital.

The mini-bus did not need to be towed. The Ford Escort was towed. There were six passengers on the mini-bus, not including the driver. The group from Sunrise had been shopping at Shaw's Plaza.

This is the second accident in recent weeks at the entrance to Shaw's Plaza.

A 41-year-old Hull woman was injured after an accident on Oct. 28 in front of Shaw's Plaza involving the Ford Windstar van she was driving and a 2003 International ramp truck. Witnesses on scene reported that the van was exiting Shaw's Plaza and pulled out in front of the ramp truck, which was traveling south on Route 3A. The van was totaled by the impact on the driver's side door. The International ramp truck had minor front-end damage.

House party

The 18-year-old host of what police described as a loud house party last Friday (Nov. 5) on Mill Lane is being summonsed to court for furnishing alcohol to minors, under the Social Host Act, and for being a minor in possession of alcohol. Callers complained about the loud party and upon arrival police found 16 young adults, five from Cohasset and the rest from Hingham. They ranged in age from 18 to 21 years of age, police said. Parents of all the guests were contacted, including the parents of those who were 21, and none of the guests were allowed to drive. Empty beer cans were strewn about. The host's father arrived and took control of the house, police said.

Marijuana

A 69-year-old Cohasset man brought a plastic bag of what he believed was marijuana to the police station last Saturday (Nov. 6). He found the bag while walking on a trail near the reservoir at the end of Beechwood Street. Police took custody of the drug and had it destroyed.

Tire came off

A 61-year-old Cohasset man whose 2003 Nissan pickup lost its tire on Route 93 in Boston on Nov. 6, causing about $1700 in damage, reported to police that the night before the tire incident (Friday, Nov. 5), he heard a thud outside his home and when he came out, saw some kids running away. He thought that the kids might have loosened the lug nuts on the wheel.

Road rage

A Cohasset man who was jogging was the apparent victim of road rage at about 11:45 a.m. last Saturday (Nov. 6) when he yelled at a car that passed him at a high rate of speed on Beechwood Street. He called police on his cell phone to report the operator of the dark green Toyota Camry jammed on his brakes and came back, attempting to swerve at him. Police were not able to locate the car.

Assault and battery

A 56-year-old Marshfield man was arrested for assault and battery after he allegedly hit his wife following an argument at a wedding party in Cohasset last Saturday (Nov. 6) at around 10 p.m. Police said the man had apparently embarrassed his wife when he jumped to catch the bouquet from the bride earlier. An argument ensued at the reception, which was held at the Legion on Summer Street, and he allegedly slapped her in the face. Upon arrival, police found the woman in the street with ripped nylons, bruised knees and an injury to her mouth.

Expired license

Police pulled over a 2003 Honda Pilot for only having one headlight at about 8:54 p.m. on Sunday (Nov. 7) on South Main Street. A computer check revealed the 52-year-old Scituate woman, who was driving, had an expired license. She is being summoned to court for unlicensed operation and was issued a citation for defective equipment (headlight out). The car was turned over to her passenger and did not have to be towed, police said.

Special Town Meeting, Monday, 7p.m.

Town Moderator Dan Evans once again will oversee the proceedings having the task to keep discussion on point and courteous.

Town Meeting warrants were mailed to all Cohasset households two weeks ago and extra copies will be on hand at the meeting.

• Article 1 asks voters to approve amendments to the current year (fiscal 2011) operating budget. In order to balance the budget several adjustments need to be made in the water and town-side budgets. At the May Special Town Meeting, called primarily to confront the water department's budget shortfall, the fire department's budget took on a $300,000 line item to fund the fire protection and hydrant fee to be paid to the water department on an annual basis. Initially, an override was recommended to fund this new line item, but that proposal was abandoned after some discussion at town meeting.

Departing town manager Bill Griffin recommended to the Board of Selectmen $200,000 be funded to this line item to protect the town's financial condition. He targeted funds from $50,000 of surplus (from last year's school budget), $100,000 from town budget cuts, and about $50,000 in new fees and revenue (not including meals and rooms tax).

At press time, the Board of Selectmen had not made a recommendation on this article.

• Article 2 considers the implementation of the .75 percent local option meals tax. If approved, restaurants, caterers and other food purveyors will be subject to this additional meals tax, over and above the 6.25 percent state meals tax. The meals tax would bring in about $105,000 annually. A $60 meal would cost an additional 45 cents with the .75 percent increase. Hingham and 109 other cities and towns have already adopted the meals tax.

• The next article, Article 3, asks voter is they would like to levy a room occupancy (hotel) tax. Under state law towns can impose up to a 6 percent tax on hotel stays. If a six percent tax is approved it could bring in about $60,000.

• The Capital Budget Committee is recommending one capital expenditure for Special Town Meeting in Article 4: the purchase of a marked police cruiser ($31,000).

• Article 5 concerns a request from the Water Commission. A $13,000 upgrade to the plant is needed to update the chemical feeding system to comply with new state safety standards. If approved, this expenditure will add an additional 20 cents to the quarterly water bills (capital recovery charge) effective June 1, 2011.

• Next up (Article 6) is a proposal to amend the bylaw that enabled the establishment of the Capital Budget Committee. The first change creates an associate member position for the committee and second change is to expand the advisory capacity of the committee.

• Article 7 addresses three unpaid bills from fiscal 2010. There were three bills from the police department that were not received in time for the close of the year.

• The purpose of Article 8 and Article 9 is to accept the state law that will allow eligible water rate payers to enter into a deferral and recovery agreement with the Assessors to put off water or sewer use charges.

• If approved, Article 10 would authorize the Board of Selectmen to execute a permanent easement with the property owner at 110 Beach St. to allow the town to maintain a new stormwater rain garden.

• Article 11 would establish a community septic management program through the Board of Health. The article authorizes the town to bond $750,000 to then lend out to homeowner with failed septic systems for upgrades. The town borrows the money at zero percent interest rate, then re-loans the money at a 2 percent interest rate.

• Article 12 requests a $10 increase in the tax collector's demand fee (from $5 to $15). The demand fee is the charge imposed on taxpayers when the tax collector issues them a demand for payment of delinquent taxes.

• Last on the warrant are two citizens' petitions. First in Article 13 is a request to amend the zoning bylaws to allow commercial and membership sports and recreational facilities in a residential district by special permit.

• Article 14 is a petition seeking more oversight for the water department. The article proposes giving the Board of Selectmen the authority to pursue complete decision-making oversight over the Water Commissioners' charge and control of the water department, especially as it concerns expenses. The petitioners hope this extra layer of oversight will increase transparency and accountability.

Full-time finance director position

Interim Town Manager Steve Lombard wants to post the position for finance director/town accountant. At the end of October, long-time town accountant and finance director Michael Buckley took the treasurer/collector position in the town of Hull.

"I don't think it is proper for us to wait," Lombard said. Buckley is serving as an interim accountant in a limited capacity (nights and weekends) for the time being. "We need someone here during the day."

Lombard, who has the power to hire a finance director, said he would be looking for a full-time person.

"This is a unique position to this town and has an enormous amount of responsibility," Lombard said.

Issues like implementing a new technology/software system to enable better financial reporting could be something Lombard would like to look at – and would need a finance director in place to do so.

"I see a need that needs to be filled. Not to move forward would be short-sighted," Lombard said.

The Selectmen were supportive of Lombard's decision and he said he would keep the board updated as the process moved forward.

"Finding a town accountant in this market (could be) extremely difficult," Lombard said.

Schools conducting 'Child Find'

The Cohasset Public Schools are in the process of conducting "Child Find," in accordance with state and federal laws.

The school department is seeking Cohasset children with suspected disabilities who may be in need of Special Education services.

Evaluated will be children ages three through high school age who are unable to progress effectively in a regular classroom program due to a suspected disability in one of the following areas: developmental or intellectual delay; sensory, neurological, emotional, communication, physical, specific learning disability, or health impairment. Evaluation will also be arranged for young people ages 6-21 who have not graduated from high school and who are not now attending school.

Also, screenings for three-to-five year olds are held the third Friday of each month at Osgood School. Call the Integrated Preschool staff at 781-383-6117 for more information.

If you have a child who you suspect may have a disability or know a child with a disability who may be in need of special education services, call Dr. Denise Messina, Director of Student Services, at 781-383-6104 for more information about the referral process.

Parents focus on school superintendent

the qualities being named were "reactive" and "responsive" to the town's experience with the current superintendent.

Ferris said that was typical, "we're looking to identify the unique things the town needs (in a superintendent) at this time."

Some parents wanted to see a candidate who had shown in previous positions to be an innovative and creative thinker. There was resounding agreement for "an out of the box thinker" with plenty of ideas to make Cohasset a competitive small district. Fostering a school community that is successful across the board, from academics to music to sports to engineering, was a priority.

Parents also identified characteristics like leadership, charisma, ability to mediate, friendliness, accountability, trustworthy, credibility and openness to ideas.

"We want someone with positive energy that's contagious and comes in with a can-do attitude," said parent Trish Morse.

A superintendent who values all staff, including teachers, bus drivers, paraprofessionals, support staff, was another key idea.

In all the parents named 42 criteria they are looking for in the new school leadership (see sidebar for the top five qualities).

Next up was discussion of the issues the next superintendent should address in the first year. Establishing stakeholder relationships with parents, teachers and students was the first and foremost suggestion. Next was a review of the K-12 curriculum, which goes hand-in-hand with instruction and assessment. The parents wanted the review done with an eye toward global learning.

A parent suggested the superintendent learn what has worked and what hasn't worked in the district recently before moving forward in any direction.

Spending that first year getting to know the staff, team-building, and improving staff morale was another key idea. Creating a school system that attracts the most highly qualified teachers and staff was imperative.

One of the superintendent's most important duties is developing a budget, so of course a review of recent budgets would be an order. Parents wanted the new superintendent to be pro-active in seeking out grants. A review of existing contracts and the program supervisor model were offered as issues as well.

Block schedule at the high school, which has been in existence for a decade, was another identified project for the new superintendent.

Promoting a tolerant and inclusive school community that promotes and rewards social responsibility was an ideal all participants agreed on.

Involvement in strategic planning with the community in that first year was brought forward, as well as looking closely at staffing issues.

Addressing the schools' technological needs and creating a plan to overhaul the existing system was identified as crucial to moving the district and its students forward.

In total 16 issues were identified for the new superintendent (see sidebar for the top five).

SUPERINTENDENT SEARCH TIMELINE

- From comments gathered in the focus groups and by other means a candidate profile is developed and submitted to the School Committee.

December

- Application deadline for candidates is Dec. 21.

January

- The Screening Committee meets several times to narrow the field of applicants and interview what they determine to be the best candidates. At the end of the interviews the screening committee will recommend three to five candidates to the School Committee

February

- During the first two weeks of February the School Committee will interview the finalists, ask them to visit the schools, and the School Committee may meet the candidates in their own districts.
- The School Committee is aiming to choose the candidate before February vacation.

April

- Current Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh leaves the district.

May

- Anticipated start date for the new superintendent.

The top five qualities parents want in a superintendent:

✓ A proven track record in finance and budgets.
✓ A commitment to academic excellence.
✓ Strong leader and a good listener.
✓ Has a vision for to give students the 21st century skills they need to compete in global economy.
✓ Special education knowledge, experience and support.

The top five issues to address in first year:

✓ Establishing stakeholder relationships with parents, teachers, students and community.
✓ Review of school curriculum, instruction and assessment K through 12.
✓ Listen to what has worked and what hasn't worked and learn from it before moving forward.
✓ Address staffing issues through team building, raising staff morale and attracting high quality staff.
✓ Reviewing block scheduling at high school.

Cohasset man on national allergy board

Paul Antico, a Cohasset resident and founder of AllergyEats, a source for finding allergy-friendly restaurants, has been appointed to the national Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America Board of Directors.

AAFA is dedicated to improving the quality of life for people with asthma and allergic diseases through education, advocacy and research. The organization provides practical information, community based services and support through a network of regional chapters and partners around the United States. Additionally, AAFA develops health education, organizes advocacy efforts and funds research to find better treatments and cures.

"I'm honored to join AAFA's board and look forward to using my skills to help further the foundation's mission,' Antico said.

Frustrated with the inconsistencies in restaurants when dining out with his food-allergic sons – some were willing to cook meals without dairy, nuts, eggs and his sons' other "trigger foods," and some were not – Antico wondered why there wasn't a quick, easy online restaurant guide that indicated where food-allergic individuals could more comfortably eat.

So he left his job as a fund manager at Fidelity Investment and started AllergyEats. This free, user-friendly website provides peer-based feedback about how well or poorly restaurants accommodate the needs of food-allergic customers.

AllergyEats lists more than 600,000 restaurants nationwide, which food allergic diners can rate. The site also offers information on restaurants' menus including gluten-free menus, allergen lists, nutrition information, certifications, web links, directions and more.

Most restaurant review sites include information about establishment's food, ambiance or service, but AllergyEats is singularly focused on food allergies, with peer reviews spotlighting where people with food allergies or intolerances can more comfortably eat.

— Paul Antico, founder of AllergyEats

In the past two-and-a-half years, Antico has gone from a financial executive to a food-allergy advocate. In addition to his new role on the Asthma & Allergy Foundation of America's national Board of Directors, he's also a board member of the organization's New England Chapter.

AllergyEats has received a number of endorsements from food, health and allergy organizations, including the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America, Gluten Intolerance Group and Massachusetts Restaurant Association. Additionally, AllergyEats is forming partnerships with other organizations, including restaurant chains, established food allergy nonprofits and more. SMALL WORKS

The South Shore Art Center In conjunction with the national juried exhibition Body Language is showcasing its annual Small Works featuring work by South Shore Art Center Gallery Artists. The exhibitions run through Dec. 19th. "Small Works truly has something for everyone — all priced to sell. There is nothing better than giving and receiving an original piece of art," said Sarah Hannan, executive director. Artwork includes paintings, photography, monoprints, sculpture and more. South Shore Art Center has a number of activities planned throughout the holiday season including a craft show at the Hingham Shipyard location on Dec. 4 and 5. The Holiday Arts Festival will feature many of the Arts Festival favorites from the annual Father's Day Weekend event on Cohasset Common.

For more information, visit www.ssac.org.

NE PATRIOT

For the third year, Kevin Faulk of the New England Patriots has teamed up with Coastal Nissan – Cohasset/Norwell and Wellspring Multi-Service Center to extend a hand up to South Shore families in need. Running back Kevin Faulk did not let his injury prevent him from participating in this cooperative Thanksgiving effort. Last year, Coastal Nissan donated $100 for each catch and each first down that Kevin made during the month of November. His injury this season has kept Kevin off the field, but did not diminish his desire to make sure that certain families would enjoy a Happy Thanksgiving.

On Tuesday, Nov. 23rd, at 11 am, Kevin will be in Hull at Wellspring, 814 Nantasket Ave., distributing turkeys, signing autographs and greeting guests. Everyone is invited to meet this great athlete who, despite a career-changing disappointment, continues to help out members of our community. Football fans will have an extra reason to cheer for the Patriots this month. Coastal Nissan will donate a complete Thanksgiving dinner for each point scored by the Patriots leading up to the Thanksgiving game against Detroit. Patriot fans can cheer for their team, knowing that points scored will have many different benefits!

Vinny Harte, executive director of Wellspring, says the partnership with Coastal Nissan has provided immediate relief for local families. "Wellspring is so grateful to Coastal Nissan for their ongoing support during these difficult times." said Vinny. "Their generosity helps us to fulfill our mission of helping people become more independent, productive members of the community." Vinny, a former college football player, added: "Some families are facing fourth and long and need a lot of help. Others are on the goal line and just want a little push into the end zone. Whatever the need, Wellspring is ready to help.

The name of the new Wilcutt Commons Senior Center was taken from John Willcutt, who died in 1790 Actually there have been about 16 Willcutt families, more or less, and there are no listings in the recent phonebooks. Surely, research will discover more about the Willcutt name; used because it belonged to a once important figure in Town.

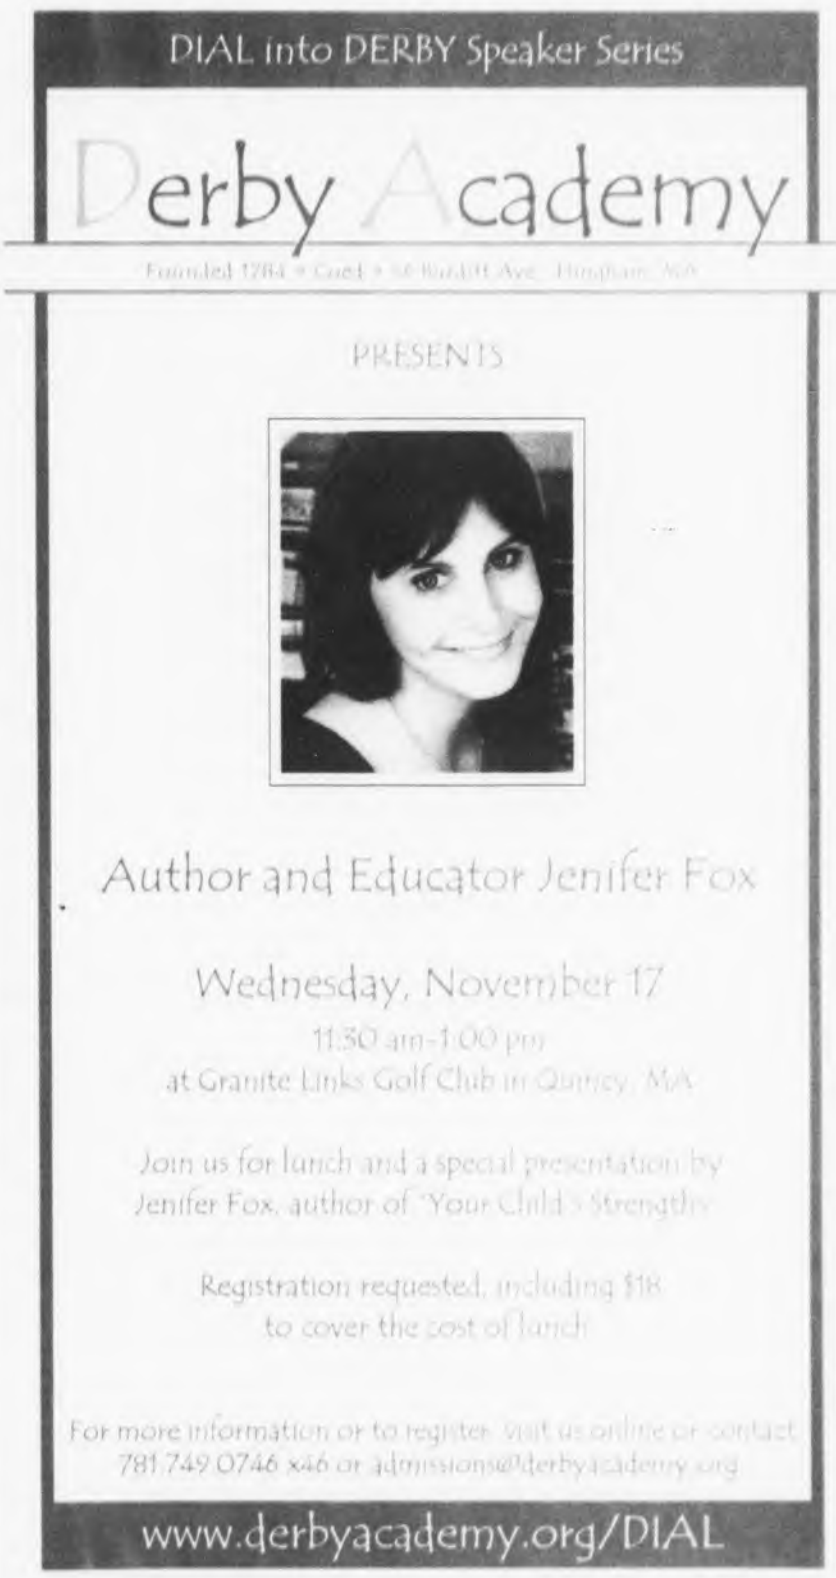
Cohasset Dramatic Club will kick off its 90th season with the farce "Noises Off!" at Cohasset Town Hall Theater, Nov. 12 through 21.



Tony Award winner Michael Frayn's "Noises Off!" is not one play but two. A cast of second-rate actors is in the midst of final rehearsals for their upcoming flop, "Nothing's On," while an even worse nightmare is going on backstage. Audience members will witness the frenzied action on stage and behind the scenes as everything spins with hilarity. In the end the two collide into a single classically comic play.

Directed by Lisa Pratt of Cohasset, "Noises Off!" stars Mark Bono of Milton, Cecelia Chapman of Cohasset, Jessica Corey of Weymouth, Woody Farrick of Boston, Chris Hetherington of Scituate, Dan Kirichok of Brockton, Cathy Larson of Milton, Sarah Rocca of Weymouth and Bill White of Scituate.

"Noises Off!" will be onstage at Cohasset Town Hall Theater, 41 Highland Ave., Fridays and Saturdays, Nov. 12, 13, 19 and 20 at 7:30 p.m., and matinees on Sundays, Nov. 14 and 21, at 2 p.m. Tickets are $16 for general admission, group discount available upon request. Tickets can be purchased at Paperscapes in Cohasset Village, Buttonwood Books on CJC Highway, Cohasset, by reservation at 617-697-2115, or at the door. Tickets to Friday, Nov. 12, opening night only are specially priced at $14 and available at Paperscapes or at the door. For more information, visit the website at Go to www.cohassetdramaticclub.org.

Lively response to electronic media events

By Marylou Lawrence
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Paul Pratt Memorial Library's meeting room was charged with electricity last Wednesday, Nov. 3, when more than 40 people packed in to hear the first program of the library's Next Chapter series — Diane Danielson's workshop on Facebook. Lots of eager questions punctuated Danielson's presentation asking about everything from selecting one's own privacy settings to accessing children's settings.

Although privacy appeared central to audience concern, Danielson also talked about the value of Facebook to a community, a group, as well as a fledgling business. She cautioned people to be prudent about revealing information on both their Profile pages and their general postings. "Imagining your personal information or your posted messages in the Boston Globe is a good litmus test for suitability," she said.

"The workshop was fantastic," said Sandy Durant. "I especially valued the information about privacy settings and the possibilities Facebook has for group use." And John Millard, a media electronics expert, said, "I thought it was great — very helpful. I went home, went onto Facebook, and changed all my security settings."

Visit the library's Facebook page to view Danielson's PowerPoint presentation and Danielson's Facebook page to view/download her instructions on privacy settings.

On Tuesday, Nov 9, Barbara Andrews gave a thorough, informative presentation on Current Topics in Technology — and just in time for Christmas. In addition to sorting out differences among Smart phones, e-books, and other electronic devices, Andrews introduced Overdrive, a service that allows free downloads of audio and e-books from the library.

Rosmarie Engel-Conn, who attended both presentations, said, "I'm not going to go on Facebook nor do I own any new technology, but being here and learning about these things opens up a whole new world for me. It is very interesting."

Barbara Andrews will return to the library on Friday, Nov. 19, for Digital Photography Basics and again on Tuesday, Dec. 7, for Getting to Know Your Computer. Diane Danielson will return on Wednesday, Jan. 5, for Blogging for Business.

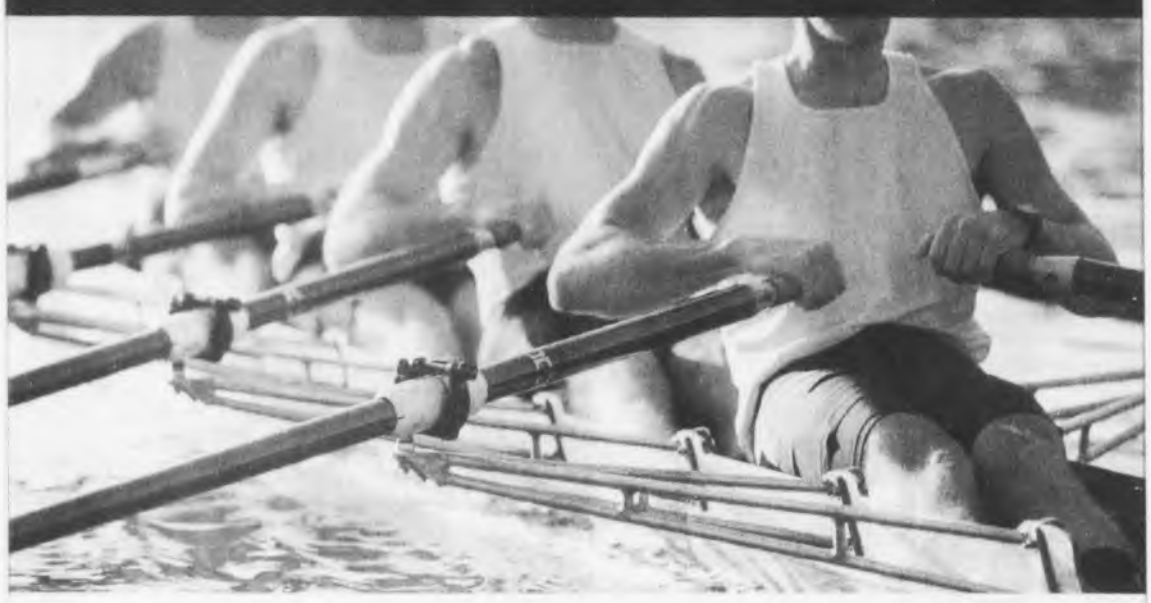
Student research on Parker Ave. culvert

Tucker Oddleifson, one of CSCR's student experts, will present the results of his GIS work mapping and analyzing phragmite growth at the Parker Avenue cut at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday (Nov. 18). Rain date is Nov. 19, in case of a soccer playoff conflict on the 18th. Pizza will be served.



Tucker's presentation will demonstrate how student GIS work can be used to evaluate the success of habitat restoration projects such as the rebuilding of the Parker Avenue culvert. (The rebuilding of the culvert is designed to bring more salt water into the Parker Ave cut; an increase of salt water flushing the cut two times a day should reduce the extent of phragmites and Tucker's project will establish the baseline data for seeing if this effect comes true in future years!)

Townspeople will be pleased to know that Tucker's GIS work not only serves as a tool for evaluating the effect of infrastructure improvement, it serves as a model of town-school-CSCR collaboration.

The GIS presentation will also highlight several analysis tools that students can learn at CSCR in service to the town.

Donate to pantry, be entered in raffle

After reading last week's article about the Cohasset Food Pantry's growing need for donations, 11-year-old Jenny Wolfe wanted to help. The sixth grader has delivered a $200 gift certificate for Feng Shui restaurant to be the prize in a raffle. To be entered in the raffle residents are asked to bring at least five pantry items to the food pantry at St. Anthony's Rectory on Tuesday morning from 8:30 to 9:30a.m. Jenny has also set up an area in her garage at 46 Elm Court to accept donations from 2:30 to 4:30p.m. Monday through Saturday for the next two weeks. In exchange for the donations a raffle ticket will be given.

Jenny hopes through her effort the food pantry shelves will be full for the upcoming holidays.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Eternal courage

There was no World War I in 1918, because no one saw the horrifying possibility of a World War II.

The price of freedom is not only eternal vigilance, but the eternal courage to fight and sacrifice to defend freedom.

On Veterans Day, we honor our veterans of all wars, who possessed that eternal courage.

The strength our veterans demonstrate is one of the greatest deterrents to attacks by our enemies. During the early 1950s, a TV spot showed a cartoon of the world, with the United States flanked by hostile powers represented as growling beasts. As the beasts raised fangs and claws, a figure representing the American military rose up, and the beasts slunk back.

There was a time earlier in the 1900s when it seemed that the species of beasts threatening democracy were endangered.

World War I did not have that title in those days. The bloody battles that raged over Europe were meant to be the "war to end all wars," the war to make the world safe for democracy. There was no World War I in 1918, because no one saw the horrifying possibility of a World War II.

Hostilities in the Great War ended in 1918 when the Allied nations and Germany signed an armistice on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month.

President Woodrow Wilson declared the first Armistice Day on Nov. 11, 1919.

Americans envisioned a world at peace, a world where dialog and diplomacy would replace bombs and mustard gas.

The country concurred with Thomas Jefferson, who had proclaimed that "an enemy is an injured friend."

This beautiful but tragically erroneous belief was reflected in the resolution passed by Congress on June 4, 1926, praising Armistice Day as marking "the resumption of peaceful relations with other nations, which we hope may never again be severed ... It is fitting that the recurrence of this date should be commemorated with prayer and exercises designed to perpetuate peace through good will and mutual understanding." (See www.va.gov, the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs web site.)

An act approved by Congress May 13, 1938 made Armistice Day a legal holiday, a day dedicated to the cause of world peace and to honor the veterans of the Great War.

Three years later, the belief that the Great War ended all wars was over.

World War II, then Korea.

In 1954, President Dwight Eisenhower changed Armistice Day to Veterans Day, a time to honor our veterans of all wars that now also include Vietnam, Desert Storm, and the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Veterans Day is a dot on an infinite time line, stretching back to the American Revolution and forward toward an unseen golden time when "good will and mutual understanding" will prevail.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bear Hill, an 'Unsound project'

TO THE EDITOR:

Where is the concern about the safety of many young children that walk the Bear Hill Path to Osgood and Deer Hill Schools?

Where is the concern on the safety of children and adults walking up and down the hill on Reservoir Road? There are no sidewalks and their vision is obscured of cars coming over the hill.

Why isn't the water department dealing more aggressively with the poor water quality entering homes, delivery systems problems and overspending of funds?

Why does the water commission try to push a cell tower in a residential area? Any projects of this sort should be handled by the Board of Selectman. The tower should never be located in crowded neighborhoods and in this case only near the water department plant land on Scituate hill.

Obviously, the water commission, because of fiscal mismanagement, should be under the Board of Selectman, and stop the excess spending and promote a judicious operation.

Issue with last week's Cat Dam commentary

TO THE EDITOR:

While we hate to sound like a nag about Cat Dam and Inner Little Harbor, last week's commentary requires some corrections, both of facts and the impressions it conveys.

The writer yearns for the time when there were chicken coops and a cow pasture on land that is now covered with water. Inner Little Harbor has always been a tidal estuary, and unless the chickens and cows were good swimmers, the current tide gates are a lot closer to what Mother Nature intended than the previous dam.

The writer states that algae buildup is a result of stagnant water. First, the water is not stagnant because Cat Dam is not really a dam. Rather, it is a set of gates that retard but do not restrict the outgoing tide. There is always some flow in addition to the days and months that the gates are wide open. Second, algae growth is a direct result of nutrient supply. The nutrients come from cesspools, leaking septic systems, and fertilizer runoff from lawns and Richardson Brook, which drains agricultural land. The algae growth on at least one kettle pond in the southeastern part of the state was drastically reduced when a sewer was installed for the surrounding properties. A kettle pond has NO flushing, so attributing the cause of algae growth to stagnant water... well, that argument just doesn't hold water.

The issue of a return on the $17,000 spent by the town to hire an "expert" to prepare a report for a Notice of Intent is not quite so amusing. The majority of families living on the harbor, whose opinions differ from those of the writer, also expected a return. Instead of an insightful conclusion and a factually-justified recommendation, we got a rather hazy opinion based on what appeared to be an incomplete review of other people's work. The "expert" ignored many of the valid concerns contained in the studies he allegedly reviewed. Why is it a surprise that we have hired a lawyer, a civil engineer and an environmental scientist who will consider all the factors? The Conservation Commission deserves no less than complete information, even if we have to pay for it ourselves. This is not about politics, it's about the facts.

What was unstated in last week's Commentary is that the writer lives on a part of the harbor that will remain covered with water even when the tide is out. In the past, she has expressed her desire to live on a marsh and eliminating Cat Dam might bring the marsh a little closer. Unfortunately, it would also condemn her neighbors to a twice-daily dose of noxious odors and unsightly mud flats. We believe that a healthy harbor and a beautiful view are not incompatible, and we are determined to prove it.

Shedding light on Cat Dam controversy

COMMENTARY

DOMINIC JANSSENS

Upon reading Susan Playfair's commentary in last week's Cohasset Mariner we again feel compelled to correct some misleading statements made on the operation of the tide gates at Cat Dam.

Ms. Playfair describes herself as one of 'Many of us who live on Inner Little Harbor would rather have a healthy harbor, governed by the laws of nature rather than an unhealthy body of water where the tide is controlled by a select group of neighbors.' In actual fact, Ms. Playfair is in a small minority that comprises herself, the Browns, who provided commentary in the previous Mariner, and two other families who abut ILH. This minority of four compares to the 'select group of neighbors' who are actually the large majority of abutters comprising 18 families including ourselves. The majority is actually highly supportive of the environment and wishes to balance all aspects of wetland living for an optimal solution. In fact, it is the large majority of abutters that have been good stewards of Cat Dam and ILH over the years that has seen ILH turn from the artificial hay meadow Ms. Playfair describes into the beautiful wetland environment it is today.

Ms. Playfair claims ILH is 'unhealthy' and 'stagnant' which is also factually incorrect. The tidal gates permit the full flow of the incoming tides and only slow the outgoing tides without stopping the flow at any time. According to CZM, 42 percent of the volume of water in ILH is

Mother Nature has not been cooperative

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project paving and more — After mentioning last week that the structure crew would be working this past Monday, once again the weather was not cooperative at all. With the rains on Monday and also on Tuesday, the crew work schedule was moved to Wednesday of this week. We can personally attest that the weather was very blustery, rainy and quite chilly early in Wednesday morning, when the structure crew started their work. As we write this around 2 p.m., Wednesday it is touch and go regarding whether they finish today. We'll just have to see. As soon as the structures are raised the paving contractor will be paving the ocean-side portion of Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue. Any side roads will also be paved while the main roads are paved.

We have spoken about the fact that the portion of Jerusalem Road from the intersection with Atlantic Avenue to North Main Street will be paved after a construction project is complete. We thought you might like to know a little bit more about the construction project that has delayed the paving on this section of Jerusalem Road. There are two catch basins at the edge of Jerusalem Road, one on either side of Jerusalem Lane. These catch basins were previously connected together with an undersized six-inch diameter pipe that was not in very good condition. And the eastern most catch basin flowed to Inner Little Harbor through another undersized six-inch pipe in poor condition.

The purpose of this project was to upgrade this drainage system to better handle the flows from the surrounding area, especially those coming downhill from Jerusalem Lane. However, in addition to merely upgrading pipe sizes, new environmental regulations mandate that street drainage water be processed by to remove contaminants before it is released to the Inner Little Harbor estuary. So a centrifugal separator is being installed to clean contaminants before release to Inner Little Harbor. Even then, the release will be to a grass swale for further clean-up and then into the harbor.

Cross drain to centrifugal separator.

Catch basins at Jerusalem Lane.

Separator outfall pipe.

The first photo we have included shows the two catch basins (see arrows in photo) at the foot of Jerusalem Lane. These have been now interconnected with a new 12 inch pipe so that collected water can be gathered much better than before.

The second photo shows a dotted line that traces the path of a new 12-inch pipe from the easternmost catch basin across the road to the centrifugal separator located at the edge of Jerusalem Road. The separator causes the storm water to swirl around in a circle, creating a vortex. This causes oil and grit to be separated and cleaned from the storm water. The outflow pipe directs the storm water to the swale where it is then released to the harbor. The outfall pipe is shown in the third photo, which was taken before the grass swale is built. Also note that the old outfall pipe is shown beside the new pipe. Notice the difference in pipe diameters. It's easy to see why the drainage in this area will be improved.

Meetinghouse Pond status — Just like with paving, the rainy weather has not been too favorable for the contractor working on Meetinghouse pond. Approximately half of the forms for both the sidewalk and the pond walls have been put into place. The photo shows a view of the formwork. To describe a bit about what the photo shows, the white that you can see is a separator over the old sidewalk on top of which the new sidewalk will be poured. There is a wooden form on the outside edge of the new walkway, which will be a bit wider than the old walkway. The dark strips you can see spaced along the length of the walk way are steel; bars, called rebar. These steel bars are used to reinforce the concrete walkway. To the right of the walk, along the inside of the pond are vertical forms that will define the inside walls of the pond.

As an interesting aside, the concrete will be poured into the wall area first. However, it will be poured in "lifts." Concrete that is poured in lifts is poured in small amounts, say eight to ten inches at a time. The reason is so that the concrete will set up a bit before the next layer will be poured. This means that the concrete slurry will not be pressing on the forms to the extent of the full height of the wall, since the previous pour will have begun to solidify. Only the amount of wet concrete in each pour will be pressing outward on the forms. Then the next pour is made, and so on. At the last pour the sidewalk will also be poured. This process effectively makes the walls and sidewalk into a homogenous concrete structure. However, there will be "V" grooves placed periodically into the concrete to act as stress relief areas. One last thing, the walk/wall will be poured in several sections. This allows each section to set up and stabilize dimensionally before the next section is poured. This is very important since concrete changes a little bit dimensionally as it cures. Once this section of the walk/wall is cured, the remainder will be formed and poured in the same fashion completing the concrete around the pond.

HEALTH NOTES

Air particulates and diabetes

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Type 2 diabetes, particularly in urbanized areas around the world has been attributed to changes in lifestyle — diet and exercise and increasing obesity. That may be the case, but particulate pollution is emerging as another potentially important candidate for causing the obesity, owing to its ability to trigger chronic, low-grade inflammation — initially in the lung but also in a host of other tissues, including fat.

Recent published data from mice has demonstrated that fine particulate pollution can conspire with obesity to promote metabolic disease. The researchers exposed animals for half a year to what's known as PM-2.5, airborne particulate matter 2.5 micrometers in diameter or smaller. All the animals ate a high-fat diet and became obese.

Compared with fat mice breathing clean, filtered air, those that inhaled high but real-world concentrations of PM-2.5 (which we will call particulate micro-matter), developed chronic inflammation, insulin resistance, a propensity to deposit their fat around the belly and a host of other pre-diabetic changes.

The next step was to look for signs that small amounts of particle matter promotes diabetes in people. In a recent study at Children's Hospital Boston, researchers compared EPA measurements of fine particulates in counties across the nation against county-by-county diabetes prevalence numbers that had been collected by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. They found that for every 10 micrograms per cubic meter increase in average particulate micro-matter, diabetes prevalence climbed — in absolute terms —b y about 1.15 percent. (For example, the incidence in a county whose average particulate concentration was 15 micrograms might be 7 percent of all adults, versus 5.85 percent in a county where the average micro-matter level was just 5 micrograms) The probability that the observed associations are due solely to chance is less than one in 1,000.

Even after accounting for a host of known diabetes risk factors including obesity, diet, exercise and a community's population density, air pollution's link to the disease held. To further test the link the team reran its analyses, taking out areas of the country with high average pollution readings or eliminating data for ethnic groups known to be at especially high diabetes risk.

No matter how analyzed, the association remained strong.

In another study, a German Diabetes Center in Düsseldorf tallied new cases of the metabolic disease between 1990 and 2006 among 1,775 middle-age women. All were taking part in a study probing air pollution's links to lung disease, inflammation and aging. In all, about 10 percent of the participants developed diabetes.

Results of these studies represent the beginnings of a discovery that diet may not be the only cause of the onset of diabetes. Or, at minimum, certain cases of type 2 diabetes may be caused in part by particulate contamination, or at least be exacerbated thereby.

For those of us in Cohasset, the threat of particulate contamination is not such a problem as in urban areas, but has become a threat because of some changes in the various materials we use in our daily routines. An example is the use of copper wool to replace steel wool for cleaning pots, pans and other food bearing surfaces. Copper, being softer than steel can not in many cases remove stains and dirt on utensils, but require more rigorous cleaning methods not always available.

Health Notes has always warned about the presence of trace contaminants in the air. Now, some of the new materials to which we are being exposed may be aiding particulate contaminants to enter our food supply in other ways. In the future, we'll discuss more examples.

Taj Mahal: Crown of the Palace

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

"...The first couple will not be having a trip to the Taj Mahal this time, but hopefully, he will in future."

— Ben Rhodes, Deputy National Security Advisor at the White House briefing on the president's recent visit to India.

Like the pyramids of Egypt, the Taj Mahal in Agra, India, is one of the world's most recognizable treasures.

Shah Jahan, emperor of India, was a man of culture and learning, highly conscious of his royal duties. And yet, descriptions of his lifestyle reveal a surprising simplicity: his favorite dinner was rice; his evenings were often spent with his books. His interests lay in art and matters of spirituality. But he was also a hunter, sword in hand, in pursuit of wild animals, including lions. He led armies in battle, displaying great courage. The great love of his life was his wife, Mumtaz Mahal.

In 1628, his beloved empress, Exalted One of the Palace, died in childbirth. Grief-stricken, the Shah decided to build in her honor, a monument in white marble. Court histories of the time called it simply rauza (tomb) of Mumtaz Mahal. Taj Mahal, meaning "Crown of the Palace, is an abbreviated version of her name.

Shah Jahan knew he could not guarantee a paradise in the next world for his beloved, but he could ensure that she would rest in one here on earth. "It is as if all the skill, expertise and resources accumulated by the Moghul dynasty came together at one point in time and space to create what has become the most enduring romantic symbol of human love," wrote one historian.

Skilled craftsmen — inlayers, masons, stonecutters, calligraphers — came from all over the Muslim world. It took almost 20 years and some 20,000 workers to complete the complex of several buildings and gardens. One story has it that he intended to build another Taj Mahal in pure black marble across the river. The two, connected by a bridge, would act both as a pair and a contrast.

The Shah's birth, according to astrological signs had been an auspicious one, celebrated with predictions of future glory. He was destined for greatness, like Alexander the Great. Alas, his end was tragic. Deposed by his son, Aurangzeb, the Shah spent the last eight years of his life imprisoned in a fort within sight of the Taj. It was recorded that he spent his days gazing in melancholy at the memorial to his lost love.

What is sad today is that this place of beauty may not be a joy forever, thanks to the politics of modern India. Hindu fundamentalists, at odds with Muslims, argue that the Taj Mahal was built by Hindu rulers. Hindu extremists have included it on their "hit list." The Indian government now provides extra security in the area. Ironically, this monument to a great love, may suffer more from pollution caused by nearby refineries in Agra.

And yet, the sublime beauty of this enduring symbol of love, endures...like a teardrop glistening on the cheek of time....

Decision 2010 – that's a wrap

FOR THE RECORD

GREGORY MATHIS

The annoying phone calls from candidates, their wives, and national political figures hoping to influence votes have ceased. The reams of direct mailings that clogged mailboxes have thankfully stopped coming.

That can only mean one thing – the 2010 State Election is over.

There was a strong sense from the Scott Brown/Martha Coakley battle during the special election to replace Ted Kennedy in the U.S. Senate that this might be a busy election season. And it was a correct assumption as Brown's victory led to a slew of contested races for the primary and contests for almost every seat on the Nov. 2 ballot.

It wasn't just because there were some important seats up for grabs, like the 10th Congressional seat for U.S. Congress. Longtime pols such as Congressman Barney Frank faced a real challenge from young Republican Sean Bielat, and it seemed like most local state representative races were hotly contested for the first time in many years. There was some obvious interest in the governor's race and Charlie Baker brought a lot of vim and vigor to the campaign.

This kind of political drama is not the norm in "liberal" Massachusetts.

Brown's victory created a movement. It didn't hurt that people were sick of politics as usual and were eager to put the blame on Democrats. While it may have been a perfect storm that led to Brown's victory, it became just partly cloudy on Election Day.

After some time to reflect, here are some of the best and worst moments from the Nov. 2 election.

The candidates — all the candidates — deserve huge thanks from the voters. There was a plethora of choices this election, even in the primary. The political process is often criticized because of apathy and a lack of candidates willing to run for office. It takes a lot of gumption and money to run these days. Candidates' lives are put under a microscope and subject to professional and personal bashing. That certainly took a toll in some races. It's often not fair, but has become a part of the process. There was a great exchange of ideas and voters were given a real choice in most races.

Voters deserve a ton of credit as well for making this one of the biggest mid-term elections in the last 20 years. It seems odd to thank voters for doing what they should do anyway, but like getting candidates to run, it sometimes takes a lot to get voters to the polls.

And last, but not least, there's the media. Some of these races got downright nasty, which oftentimes plays right into the media's hands. But in general, I strongly believe that our community newspapers and Wicked Local websites were able to provide a valuable reader service by covering the candidates and addressing the issues during the weeks and months leading up to the election. We hope you agree.

I know there's one thing we can all agree on ... thankfully the mid-term election is over.

It's time for the politicians to get back to work.

Getting schooled on Open Meeting Law

Law has changed in last six months

"The basic and safest route is to not talk shop outside of a posted meeting."
— Beth Friel, attorney

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When it comes to town business the public has the right to know what's going on.

Whether it is how funds are being allocated or how the town is addressing a certain situation, residents have the right to be informed. The cornerstone government is municipal government, and the law that makes open government accountable, is the Open Meeting Law.

On Tuesday night, members of various town committees and town employees attended a training seminar on the Open Meeting Law. Earlier this year the jurisdiction and some of the requirements of the Open Meeting Law changed. The revisions to the 35-year-old law went into effect July 1 and the companion regulations to the law went into effect Oct. 1.

"Things have changed and that's why we're here," said Town Counsel Paul DeRensis of Deutsch Williams.

Beth Friel, also of Deutsch Williams, said the Open Meeting Law applies to meetings and deliberations of a public body.

The workshop covered the essentials and some of the changes to what needs to be done before, during and after a meeting to ensure an open process.

One of the most common pitfalls for town officials across the state in regard to adhering to the Open Meeting Law is communication outside the confines of a posted open meeting.

Friel cautioned the town officials to be careful with e-mail and telephone calls. While gatherings are okay, entering into a conversation about town business while at the gathering is not.

"The basic and safest route is to not talk shop outside of a posted meeting," Friel said.

In regards to e-mail, she said to "beware of the dreaded reply all button."

The Open Meeting Law specifically concerns deliberations. Deliberation on public business outside of a posted meeting is prohibited under the law.

"You do not have to be all in the same room to be a deliberation," Friel said. Many violations occur when one member makes phone calls to one or several of the other members of the board.

"(Town officials) may not avoid Open Meeting Law requirements to defeat the fundamental purpose of the law," Friel said. "Governmental bodies may not circumvent the Open Meeting Law by conducting deliberations via private messages…the bottom line is you should try to get around the Open Meeting Law on technicalities."

Private messages can be communicated electronically, in person, over the telephone, or other means.

Posting meetings

Under the new Open Meeting Law many changes have taken place concerning the posting of public meetings. A public meeting must be posted 48 hours prior to the meeting (excluding Saturdays, Sundays and legal holidays). The meeting notice must include the date and time of the meeting and the date and time of the posting, the location and, new with the law revisions, the topics expected to be discussed.

The postings have always had to have a prominent public location in Town Hall, but under the new law the postings must be visible and accessible 24 hours a day.

Cohasset's public meetings are posted at the front entrance of the Town Hall.

Once the meeting has convened at the chosen location and time there are not many requirements. The Attorney General, which now oversees the Open Meeting Law, is considering whether to allow remote participation by board members.

At the meeting, the chair must inform those present if the meeting is being recorded.

In one of the oft-questioned mandates of the Open Meeting Law is the public's right to participate. In fact, there is no requirement under the Open Meeting Law to allow public comment and participation.

"Just because a meeting is open to the public doesn't mean representative government is thrown out the window," Friel said. The law stipulates public business must be done in the public arena, but does not mandate public participation.

Evaluations

Before the new Open Meeting Law went into effect evaluations of public employees under the auspices of public boards were exempted through executive session. Now, the new public records law's new definition of personnel information excludes materials used in a performance evaluation if it has bearing on an individual's professional competence, if created by members of a public body, and if it is for the purposes of evaluations.

The public may access any evaluations created by members of the public body. The public is allowed to scrutinize the board's judgment of the people it evaluates.

"This change allows voters to evaluate the elected officials while the elected officers are evaluating the employees…the point of the law is to promote accountability," Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said.

Key points of Open Meeting Law

• Posting meetings 48 hours prior to the scheduled date and time – not including Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays — is required. For example, a meeting scheduled for Tuesday evening would have to be posted by Friday afternoon, or Thursday if Monday is a holiday. (Prior to the changes, Saturday counted.) In case of emergency, a meeting notice must be posted as soon as reasonably possible and must be a true emergency situation.

• More detailed agendas are required, including information beyond a "general business" notation. The chair is required to post with the notice of the meeting what he or she "reasonably anticipates will be discussed at the meeting."

• Every draft of the minutes must be kept on file. Any document or other visual medium (photos, DVD) must be kept on file with the town.

• At the beginning of the meeting, the board or committee chair must notify those in attendance if the meeting is being recorded.

• Prior to an executive session, the board or committee chair must state the purpose and all subjects that may be revealed without compromising the purpose for entering into executive session. Previously, only the purpose had to be stated with minimal information provided.

Executive sessions are non-public, involving such matters as strategy sessions in preparation for negotiations with non-union personnel; conducting collective bargaining sessions or contract negotiations with non-union personnel; or discussing strategy with respect to collective bargaining or litigation.

In order to enter executive session to consider the purchase, exchange, lease, or value of real estate, the public body chair must first declare that an open meeting may have a detrimental effect on the negotiating position of that body.

An executive session may be held to consider or interview applicants for appointment or employment by a preliminary screening committee.

Minutes must be made for all open and executive sessions, containing the time, date, place; members present or absent; a summary of the discussion for each agenda topic; a list of documents and other materials used at the meeting; decisions made; and actions taken, including a record of all votes. The file of minutes must also include any draft copies of the minutes.

• Open session minutes, notes, recordings, and other items used to prepare the minutes, as well as all documents and materials used at the meeting, are public records. Personnel records are exempted from this requirement.

• The public body, its chair, or a designee must periodically review the minutes of executive sessions to determine if nondisclosure remains appropriate.

• The determination of whether disclosure of executive session minutes is appropriate must be announced at the next meeting of the involved board or committee and must be included in the minutes.

• The newly created Open Government Division of the Office of the Attorney General replaces the District Attorney as the enforcing authority for the Open Meeting Law.

• The Attorney General may conduct an investigation to determine whether a violation of the Open Meeting Law has occurred. This includes the authority to take testimony, examine any documents or materials, and require attendance during an examination.

Round 2: Harbor zoning

Planning to discuss harbor possibilities on Nov. 16

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In 2008, the Planning Board and members of the community spent hours upon hours talking about and drafting zoning changes for the village business district. Now, it could be the harbor's turn for a zoning spotlight.

In September, the Planning Board hosted a forum to gather ideas and information about the current state of the harbor and what residents and business owners might like to see on the waterfront. One of the key obstacles identified at the forum is waterfront areas must abide by very specific federal regulations.

At the time Planning Board chairman Al Moore said there could a way around the federal regulations if a harbor master plan was developed in partnership with the state and federal agencies change could happen.

On Tuesday, Nov. 16 the Planning Board has invited Town Counsel Paul DeRensis and Jason Burtner, South Shore regional coordinator for the state department of Coastal Zone Management. Both will provide insight on how the town could proceed in changing the zoning to enable positive development on the waterfront.

Right now, changes to current configuration or new development on the waterfront would prohibit the development of condominiums on upper floors and only allow marine-related business on the first floor of buildings. Cohasset Harbor Inn and Atlantica are uses that were grandfathered in.

"There are ways to change the requirements (of waterfront business)," Moore said. "We just need to find out what is involved."

The discussion on defining what's possible on the harborfront is made even more relevant because several of the harbor's key parcels are currently on the real estate market. The Mill River Marina, Atlantica, the Olde Salt House, Cohasset Harbor Inn and "The Oaks" waterfront mansion were put on the market in May for $55 million.

The small area of the waterfront has four different zoning districts: residential, downtown business, waterfront business, and industrial making it a complicated place to develop even if local zoning was the only consideration.

Although the Planning Board is leading the discussion on the harbor Moore said the board does not have some grand scheme for changing the harbor.

"We've done a lot of work (on village zoning)…and the harbor is the giant elephant in the room no one wants to acknowledge," Moore said. "Maybe there is nothing we can do or want to do, but we recognize the harbor is a vital part of the community."

At the first discussion some of the village merchants talked about creating more convergence between the harbor and village areas. Although the two areas are fairly close geographically there is not a lot of synergy between the two.

One of the challenges discussed – and would have to be addressed if development and change were to happen - parking in both the village and the harbor areas.

"We will be open to questions and comments from the floor," Moore said. "This will be a learning process for all of us."

Zoning bylaw change on STM agenda

The amendment would alter the town's zoning bylaws to make membership recreational facilities allowable by special permit in residential district.

Town Meeting will consider one zoning bylaw amendment, which was submitted through a citizens' petition (article 13).

The zoning bylaw amendment is being requested because the Scituate Racquet and Fitness Club, which is located on 3A on the border between Scituate and Cohasset, is looking to construct an indoor pool on their Cohasset land. However, "commercial and membership sports and recreational facilities" is not a permitted use on the land currently. The land is zoned residential.

The amendment would alter the town's zoning bylaws to make membership recreational facilities allowable by special permit in residential district.

Selectman Paul Carlson expressed some reservation to the article because of what opportunities the change may create in the future.

"If we pass this we don't know what's next," Carlson said. "It makes me nervous – what are the unknown implications (of this bylaw)?"

Selectman Lee Jenkins said the town was still protected through the special permit process with public hearings in front of the Zoning Board of Appeals.

The Board of Selectmen recommended approval of the article unanimously on Monday night.

After holding a public hearing on the proposed zoning bylaw amendment the Planning Board voted 4 to 0 to recommend approval of the article.

Shedding light on Cat Dam controversy

replaced twice per day by the incoming and outgoing tide, which is far from stagnant. ILH also supports a wide range of wildlife including many bird species, fish, shellfish and crabs, which is far from unhealthy. In fact, the gates benefit wildlife, abutters and recreational users by providing a water covered habitat which also eliminates noxious odors and provides refuge from fast currents.

Ms. Playfair refers to the Notice of Intent being 'prepared by a recognized Environmental Engineer.' However, the work of the Engineer is of poor quality and offers an incomplete assessment of the impact of their proposal. The Engineer has also failed to consider other alternatives, as they are required to do, and they have completely ignored the legitimate concerns of most abutters. While Ms. Playfair suggests the Town should get 'a return on this expenditure', we would propose the Town gets a full refund of the expenditure as the services contracted have been inadequately provided.

When discussing the Selectmen's role in governing the NOI it also important to know that while the NOI was submitted on their behalf, it was done so without their full knowledge and consent. It is therefore absolutely appropriate for the Selectmen to review the NOI and after due consideration they appropriately decided to withdraw it.

One final point about the NOI – while Ms. Playfair supports the NOI, she clearly does not understand what is in it. The NOI is not 'to remove one of the tidal gate boards' as Ms. Playfair states but for one of the three gates to be open all the time. This is a completely different solution with no compromise for the majority's view as claimed by Ms. Playfair.

Ms. Playfair goes on to claim that one neighbor is again pitted against another. While it is Ms. Playfair's prerogative to pit herself against whoever she wishes, it is not what the majority of us would prefer. We would much rather Ms. Playfair, the Browns and others in the minority come to the table so we can all come up with an approach that best balances environmental aspects with other factors of wetland living. After all, this was the original guidance from the Selectmen and the way our neighborhood has been a good steward of ILH for decades.

THEIR HEARTS' DESIRE

According to AARP, an organization for people age 50 and over, when baby boomers are asked where they want to live as they age, 90 percent say "in my home." For a myriad of reasons, most seniors prefer to "age in place." The home provides a safe, familiar haven and offers a comforting sense of belonging. Friends, family, neighbors and even pets are a vital part of their lives at home. Seniors can find it difficult, if not impossible, to let go of their home environment. Non-medical home healthcare can make it possible for a senior to remain living at home. Seniors' needs change, even overnight. Home healthcare services can be added and enhanced to meet their changing needs.

If your parents want to age in place, it can place a tremendous burden on your shoulders. Just like they deserve to stay in their homes, you deserve to have a life. If you're dealing with this situation, please call our office for an appointment today. Veterans honored at Deer Hill

Sons of the American Legion, asked the students to call any veteran they know and thank them for his or her service.

Wigmore and the Legion honored deChiara for her dedication to the veterans over the past four years. She began the tradition of a Veterans Day ceremony when she arrived in Cohasset in 2007.

Coleman Nee, Cohasset resident, veteran and state Undersecretary of the Department of Veterans' Services, spoke about the brave women veterans who have always served our nation but have grown in tremendous numbers in recent years. Now, he said, one in 10 serving in the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan are women.

Nee told the stories of some of the many brave women who have served the country. The first known woman was Deborah Sampson from Massachusetts. She impersonated a man and enlisted in the Continental Army to fight in the Revolutionary War. She was wounded twice in battle. While treating her second wound the doctor discovered she was woman and she was later honorably discharged.

"It doesn't have to be Veterans Day to thank a veteran...each one of the gives up a little bit of their lives so we can enjoy the freedoms we have," Nee said.

The ceremony concluded with the children's renditions of "America The Beautiful" and "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

Joseph Protulis reads his Veterans Day essay in praise of his father's service to our country.

What is a Veteran?

By Joseph Protulis

When I grow up I hope to be able to be as brave as my Dad.

It is hard to only see your Dad twice a week, but the country needs him more than I do sometimes. My Dad is an excellent example of what a veteran truly is. He is a part of the United States Air National Guard. He was enlisted in the United States Air Force for four years before joining the Guard. In all, he has served our country for 15 years. He has been sent overseas twice. The first time he was sent to Afghanistan when I was two years old and the second time he was sent to Iraq, which was when I was seven.

There are many different types of veterans. These veterans come from many different branches of the military. Our military is like a tree with many different branches. Some of these branches are: Army, Navy, Marines, Coast Guard, and the Air Force.

What makes a veteran so courageous? He has to be brave when other nations strike. Many times a veteran must go away from his family, which can be hard. If he is on the battlefield, a veteran must be strong and fight for our freedom and our country. A veteran also needs to be willing to sacrifice his or her own life for us. Even when they are serving in our country, they are sacrificing by not being with their families and sometimes having to move around a lot. Sometimes they even have to go to places that have been hurt by hurricanes and floods.

A veteran's life can be very difficult. They need to know that we support them and that we are grateful for their sacrifice. When I grow up I hope to be able to be as brave as my Dad. I would like to be an Army Ranger. An Army Ranger is like the Navy Seal of the Army. I hope one day to make my family as proud of me as I am of my Dad.

Democratic Town Committee hosts Movie Night

'Food Inc.' describes how the influence of multinational, corporate money affects, through adverstising, the food people are encouraged to eat.

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will show a film nominated for best documentary in 2008, "Food Inc.," at 7 p.m., on Friday, Nov. 19, in the Meeting Room of Paul Pratt Library. There is no charge for this event. All are welcome.

"Food Inc." describes how the influence of multinational, corporate money affects, through adverstising, the food people are encouraged to eat. The film's director, Robert Kenner, takes the audience to industrial feedlots where cattle are crammed into lots standing in their own waste awaiting slaughter. Kenner demonstrates how big businesses influence food production, outspending their competitors by billions, sometimes with federally subsidized dollars. The movie also takes a look at animal abuse and the health effects of fast food on those for whom fast food is sometimes a mainstay.

This 93-minute documentary also draws on the knowledge of "locavore enthusiast" Michal Pallan, author of "In Defense of Food" and "The Omnivores Dilemma." Pallan is one of the films producers. Kenner acknowledges the people who continue to try to reform the food industry, which is often made up of monopolies using questionable interpretations of the laws governing the food industry and rely on political ties and subsidies in guiding their industrial practices.

Cat Dam up for discussion again

The Board of Selectmen is not letting the Cat Dam situation slip into oblivion.

On Monday night the Selectmen decided to place the issue on the next three meeting agendas (beginning Monday, Nov. 29).

In late October, a majority of the Selectmen voted to withdraw the Notice of Intent (NOI) application that was before the Conservation Commission. Now, the issue is what might need to be changed with the NOI.

The issue of Cat Dam, which is a tidal gate on Nichols Road that limits the flow of water for inner Little Harbor, has been a controversial neighborhood discussion for more than three years.

In 2008, Town Meeting approved spending for an engineering study of Cat Dam and the surrounding area with the end result being brought forward to the Conservation Commission as a Notice of Intent (NOI). A NOI is presentation of information to the Conservation Commission that addresses the operation and maintenance of the tide gates, among other things.

In September, the NOI began a formal process before the Conservation Commission. Public hearings were held. But then the Selectmen, who are the submitting body for the NOI, withdrew the application in a 3 to 2 majority vote.

Jack Creighton, a member of the Conservation Commission, but speaking as a private citizen, encouraged the Selectmen to act quickly on the NOI. There is a built-in deadline of March because that is when the open and close schedule of the tidal gates would need to be changed.

"I suggest you go to the respective constituencies and let's get this figured out," Creighton said.

As a result, Cat Dam will be placed on the Nov. 29 agenda (after a discussion about the permanent Town Manager search), the Dec. 6 meeting, and the Dec. 13 meeting.

Drew Cobin (12) is swamped by his teammates after his goal secured the Skippers win over Bourne in a shootout during the Division 3 South quarterfinal game on Tuesday night.

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

This has turned into quite a season for the Cohasset boys soccer team.

Cohasset rolled to a 13-3-2 record during the regular season and parlayed that into a No. 4 seed in the MIAA Division 3 South Sectional Tournament.

That turned into two home games and two victories to open the tournament.

Tuesday night, Cohasset played what may have been the most exciting game of the year in a 1-0 win that went into penalty kicks.

Anders Goetz, Joe Buckley, Nick Brown, and Drew Cobin scored four straight goals in the penalty kick after Cohasset was down to it's last breath, falling behind 2-0 after the first two shots.

"We practiced the penalty kick all week and we've been terrible," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. "We missed our only opportunity this year. Penalty kick is not something you want to get into."

Willis said confidence turned out to be a key.

"They scored first," he said. "On the first shot, Sam (Cohaset goalie Sam Richardson) had never faced a penalty shot. He was keeping his hands close to his body. They scored again, but then Sam stretched his arms out, and he's got a big wingspan. I think that psyched out the other kids and they missed wide and high."

When Bourne missed, Cohasset made a move.

"Anders and Drew figured it out

"A lot of keepers have great numbers with great defenses. Sam has a great defense, but he's had to make some great saves. Last year Sam was Will Wise's backup and played mostly JV. He's also a great basketball player. I'm glad he decided he loved goalie."

OTHER SPORTS: Basketball

STANDOUT GAME: Yes, it was November, but a 1-0 double overtime win in a playoff game against Bourne is the one - or all the other shutouts he pitched during the season.

STATS: Sam has 12 shutouts this season with a 0.45 Goals Against Average. He has only given up more than one goal once all season, and one of those was a penalty kick.

GIRLS SOCCER

Keeping the faith

After a 4-6-2 start to the season, Cohasset girls soccer coach Deb Beal said that her team was by no means out of contention for another MIAA Tournament invitation.

The veteran coach called it right.

Not only did Cohasset rebound to make the Division 3 South Sectional Tournament, they also won their opener with a 2-1 victory over Seekonk.

Danielle Sookiasian scored for Cohasset and also scored on a penalty kick by Michaela Brophy in the win.

Cohasset finished with a 9-8-2 regular season record and earned a No. 16 seed and a home game in the preliminary round.

The win set up a match at Nantucket that as of press time was scheduled for Friday at 2 p.m. after several postponements, including Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Success on Senior Night

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

After two losses in their last two games - by a combined two points, the Cohasset football team wanted to come back with a strong effort when they hosted Norwell on Friday at Alumni Stadium.

It wasn't just the two losses, but the Skippers (6-2) also wanted to make a statement for Senior Night.

Mission accomplished, thanks in large part to the seniors.

The Skippers scored on every possession of the first half on the way to a 28-0 halftime lead and a 35-0 win.

"It was a good Senior Night for the kids," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "They played very well. They played with a lot of intensity, came out and had fun. This was a night for the seniors. It's their last game under the lights on the turf."

FIELD HOCKEY

A terrific season

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The third seeded Cohasset field hockey team's dream season came to an end last Friday afternoon with a 2-1 overtime loss to visiting Dedham (9-8-3), the No. 19 seed in the first round of the MIAA Division 2 South Sectional Tournament.

Dedham beat East Bridgewater 1-0 in overtime in the preliminary round.

Cohasset led 1-0 with 5:25 left to play when Dedham's Laura Tavalone tied it setting up the 7-on-7 overtime period.

Kaitlin Abber notched the winner on a redirected shot after a Dedham breakaway.

Kelsey Erler scored Cohasset's goal midway through the second half of what was mostly a defensive battle.

Sci-Coh Stingrays in Super Bowl

Your Sci-Coh Stingrays are Superbowl bound

COURTESY PHOTO

The Sci-Coh second/third grade football team, at their trophy ceremony after a win over Hingham, is headed to the Super Bowl on Saturday in Bridgewater. The game is at 5 p.m.

After a decisive 34-8 win over neighboring Hingham, the second/third grade team has earned a chance to head to the big game against rival Hanover, to be played in Bridgewater at 5 p.m. on Saturday.

The team has worked hard to get to this point, starting with practices in the August heat and continuing right up through the recent frost. These young men have made a commitment to their coaches, their teammates and themselves, and their dedication has paid off and flourished under the leadership of Head Coach Paul Doughty.

Sunday's game was a great one to watch, as the impressive offensive line did their job beautifully, clearing the way for Cohasset third grader Gray Thomas to run the ball in for 4 touchdowns, earning him the game ball.

The defensive line was relentless, holding the Hingham Raiders to a scoreless first half, and allowing just one TD in the second.

The boys are looking better each game, and the coaching staff is looking forward to a great week of practices leading up to what is sure to be a tough game on Saturday.

The boys will also be cheering for their pals on the Sci-Coh fifth grade team, as well as the eighth grade team, who both beat tough opponents in the playoffs to earn Superbowl spots this week. Good luck to all of our teams. Go Sci-Coh.

Cohasset players include third graders Luke Adams, Charlie Cunningham, Thomas Dockray, Sam Franklin, Ryan Gentile, Sam Hess, Colin McDonald, Tyler Mulhearn, Jake Sullivan, Gray Thomas, and second graders Gaeb Barrett, Chris Carrabas, Jake Fox and Christian Gildea.

South Shore High School Cross-Country poll

This Week's High 5 (Week 11)

Owen Wiggins (Norwell)- Wiggins probably would have exchanged his 2nd place South Shore League Championship meet finish for a team victory, but this is quite a consolation prize. Although the Clippers were bested by the Vikings of East Bridgewater, Wiggins was a shining star, finishing the 2.7 mile Strawberry Valley course in 14:01, only behind EB's Tanner Picklus. Oh and for good measure, he added a 3rd place 17:17 in the MSTCA Sophomore race on Saturday. Not a bad week.

John McKeon (Abington)- The senior led the Green Wave at Strawberry Valley, taking 3rd place in 14:05, right behind Picklus and Wiggins. Surely, McKeon would have wanted the win, but this is another highlight in a solid season for the Green Wave, who also had the 6th place (14:38, Brendan Whalen), 11th place (Kevin Bunszell, 15:10), and 19th place (Eric Magnussen (15:45) finishers.

Jason Angell (Duxbury)- Angell was real good on Saturday, racing to a 16:24 6th place finish at the DII Junior-Senior race at the MSTCA invitational in Wrentham. After blasting onto the scene at the Martha's Vineyard Invite in September, Angell and the Dragons have been steady, and despite a subpar effort from the team at the Patriot League meet, they appear to be back on track with a shot to move on out of DIV next week. Having a guy running like this up top can only help.

(Last week's ranking in parentheses)

Boys Top 5 (Last week's ranking in parentheses)	Girls Top 5 (Last week's ranking in parentheses)
1. Pembroke (1)	1. Weymouth (1)
2. Weymouth (2)	2. Pembroke (2)
3. Marshfield (3)	3. Notre Dame (3)
4. Hingham (4)	4. Norwell (4)
5. Norwell (5)	5. Hingham (5)

Meet to Watch (Week 11):

Eastern Mass. Divisional Championships (Saturday 11/13 @Franklin Park, Boston)- For every runner in Massachusetts, this is the goal. Some strive simply to get the chance to run here, some hope their team can qualify for All States from it, others hope to win it. For Pembroke's boys and Weymouth's girls, the goal will be to win and move on with a shot for an All State title. But several other local teams are looking to qualify for Gardner next week out of almost every division. From DI, the Weymouth boys would like to join their distaff side. From DII, Marshfield's boys hope to carry on, but a deep field will be in their way. Notre Dame is a favorite to qualify out of DIII. DIV sees a local favorite in Pembroke's boys, but the Titan girls have a great shot to move on, as do both Hingham teams, and the Duxbury boys. Norwell's boys and girls teams look solid to move on as well, as well as a slew of local individuals in every class. It should be a great day for the South Shore.

Jen Asci (Rockland)- Winning an individual league title should have come as no surprise to this Bulldog junior after dominating her league all season long. Her time of 16:52 was nearly a minute ahead of her closest challenger, Sarah Perfetuo of Norwell, and gave her an undefeated season in the South Shore league in the process. The league will only get tougher next year, as all of the top 10 finishers return.

Norwell Girls- Although they have had their share of press in this space throughout the season, dominance is rewarded, and that's what they did Tuesday at Strawberry Valley. Seven of the league's top 13 runners came from the Lady Clippers, a performance so special they would have narrowly lost a dual meet- with the rest of the league! Sophomores Sarah Perfetuo (17:41, 2nd), Margaret Hayes (17:55, 7th), and Vanessa Lyle (17:58, 8th) and juniors Catherine Stack (17:46, 5th) and Siobhan Murphy (18:05, 10th) did the damage on the South Shore League field. And don't look now but, they're all back!

Keeping the faith

A win on Friday, if they played, would set up a quarterfinal match on Saturday against No. 8 Carver, who beat No. 9 Chatham 10-2.

"With seven games remaining we need some wins. More importantly though we need to play more efficiently and play more confidently," Beal commented at the time. "I work with a tremendous group of girls who train hard and deserve to experience all the joys the game brings. I am confident that we have turned a corner and we are now ready to finish this season off strong. A few bumps in the road have set us back, but I feel now we are ready."

Beal is happy with the way things turned.

"We knew it was going to be a challenging season and I am so very pleased with the way the girls have responded," she said. "We hit a spell there in the middle of the season that had me concerned. I knew that the more confidence and trust we put into each other the more positive the outcome would be. There are girls on this team that have experienced the highs and lows of the girls soccer program over the past few years and I have really come to trust their instincts and have allowed them the freedom to figure this out."

Beal said experience and dedication turned it around.

"This had the potential to be a big mess," she said. "We had a lot of athletes playing in a variety of positions they had zero experience in. Have a little faith right? I've said it before, I am so impressed with their dedication to themselves, to their teammates and to their school community. They put themselves out there and they take risks and they enjoy the gains. They are truly a pleasure to work with everyday. So, we've come to a point in the season where we play to win now, because of we lose, we go home for the season. We worked so hard to get here, you all saw the way we started the season. Now is when we take a moment and reflect on what got us here and we go full steam ahead. Its the most exciting part of the season and I am thrilled for the girls that they will be able to experience it again this fall. These seniors have qualified every year since they were freshman, which is a very nice accomplishment."

As for the waiting around for the next tournament game, Beal said it's been a little crazy.

"Guess we'll see what happens," she said. "It has been a little tough to keep getting them motivated everyday when they just want to play. We are at a point in the season when the best thing for us is just to play, we have been practicing since August and the tournament has finally arrived and mentally and physically we are ready. The kids are very fit and although I hate to see them take it easy it is a very busy time of year at school and this time off has allowed them to catch up on schoolwork and rest some little injuries."

That said, Beal's crew is ready to play.

"Yes the girls are very excited about traveling to Nantucket and prepared to get there and go to work," she said.

Now all they need is the game.

A terrific season

FROM FIELD HOCKEY, PAGE 17

"Anything can happen," Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano said about playing overtime. "That's why you don't want to go to 7-on-7."

Dedham qualified for the tournament through the Sullivan rule, while playing in one of the tougher conferences in the area, the Bay State Conference and beat Scituate 1-0 in the quarterfinals in Scituate.

Despite the loss, the season was a definite success for Cohasset, which finished the regular season undefeated and won the South Shore League title.

"I'm proud of the girls," Giuliano said. "We were the South Shore league champions and finished with the best record in school history."

Earlier in the season, Giuliano had talked about what would be a successful season.

This one most definitely qualified.

In fact, when she looked back on it, it was perfect.

"In my estimation a "perfect" season is one in which individual personal goals are achieved, team goals are achieved, and as coaches we have made some impact in empowering young women," Giuliano said. "Our 15-0-3 record does not necessarily reflect the ups and downs we experienced over the season. However, with the leadership of five outstanding senior captains, our talented assistant coach MaryEllen O'Neil and the enthusiasm and support of Beth Gilman, we all learned, adjusted and grew as a unit, and came as close to my definition of a "perfect season" as one can get. We can't wait for next season to begin."

Four Skippers were named to the South Shore League All-Star team.

Kelsey Erler, Olivia Murphy, Natalie Dignam and Whitney Jaffe all made the cut.

Including the tournament, Erler was the team's leading scorer with 13 goals and six assists. Murphy finished the season with 13 goals and five assists.

Dignam finished up with eight goals and two assists and Jaffe was brilliant in net, stopping 86 percent of the shots she faced.

Jaffe allowed just 11 goals in 19 games and notched 13 shutouts.

Caitlin DeAngelis had four goals and five assists . Angela Cipolla had four goals and three assists, Amber Silvia added three goals and an assist.

Orner had a big year as a helper, with 1 goal and 12 assists.

Sage Stebbins added 1 goal and 3 assists, Kylie Coffman had 1 goal, and an assist, Sara Campedelli had one goal, and an assist.

Elise Quebec and Maddie Curley both scored goals as well.

Erler, Dignam, Eliza Kinnealey, Sarah Mavilia and Emily Toomey were the team captains.

Cohasset's Mahoney honored by Liberty League

William Smith College, swimmer Mimi Mahoney (Cohasset) shared the Liberty League's Rookie of the Week Award.

William Smith opened its season with a 121-61 win over Buffalo State.

Mahoney won the 50 free and finished second in the 100 free in her first collegiate meet against Buffalo State. She touched the wall in 27.06 seconds in the 50 and 59.22 seconds in the 100.

and hit twice," Willis said. "Drew actually hit twice. The first time, he hit, but the ref hadn't blown the whistle. Then he did it again."

Willis said Cobin, who was recently named an EMass. All-Star had missed a couple of tries in practice and in the preseason.

"It was great," Willis said. "They have a good keeper, Devin Delfino, and Drew was our leading scorer in the season. He made the Eastern Mass. All-Stars and then won a playoff game."

For Willis, it wasn't just the one kick that one the game.

He said one of his seniors passed on a chance to shoot in the PK in favor of freshman Joe Buckley, who made his shot.

"One of my seniors told me that Joe should take the shot instead of him," Willis said. "He said that Joe never misses."

The other huge, huge factor, as it has been all season was the defense and Richardson.

"John McGoldrick, Travers Craven, John Buckley and Mike Monaco did a great job," he said. "The defenders were unbelievable."

Willis felt the first half was a little tough, but the Skippers controlled the second half.

"Bourne is a very good team," he said. "We came out a little freaked out. They're as good as anyone we've played this year. By the end of the first half we figured out what was going on and played less on our heels. I thought we controlled the second half. We controlled the flow of the play. We had a few good opportunities and just missed. We had a couple of breakaways."

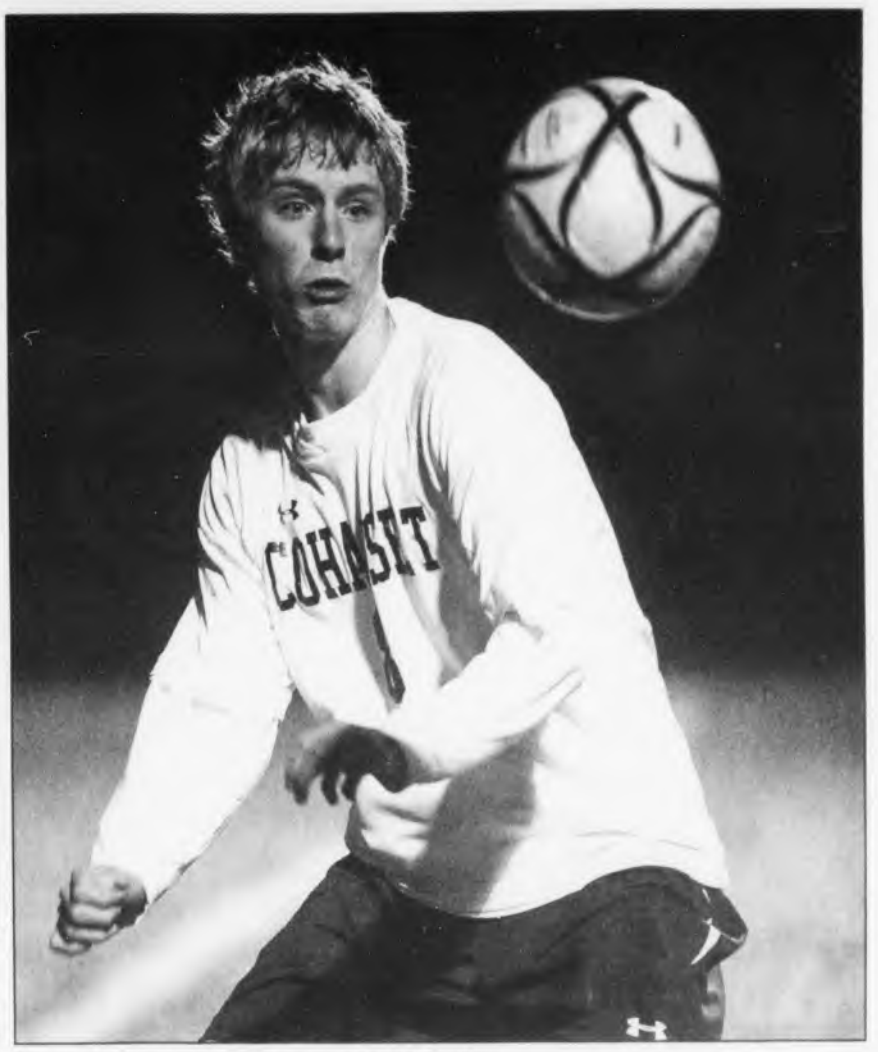
Cohasset's John McGoldrick.

In the opener against Upper Cape Cod, Cohasset scored two goals in the first ten minutes on the way to a 3-0 victory.

"It was the younger kids in that game," Willis said. "Nick Tangherlini to Nick Brown and Nick Brown to Jamie Timothy. They stepped up."

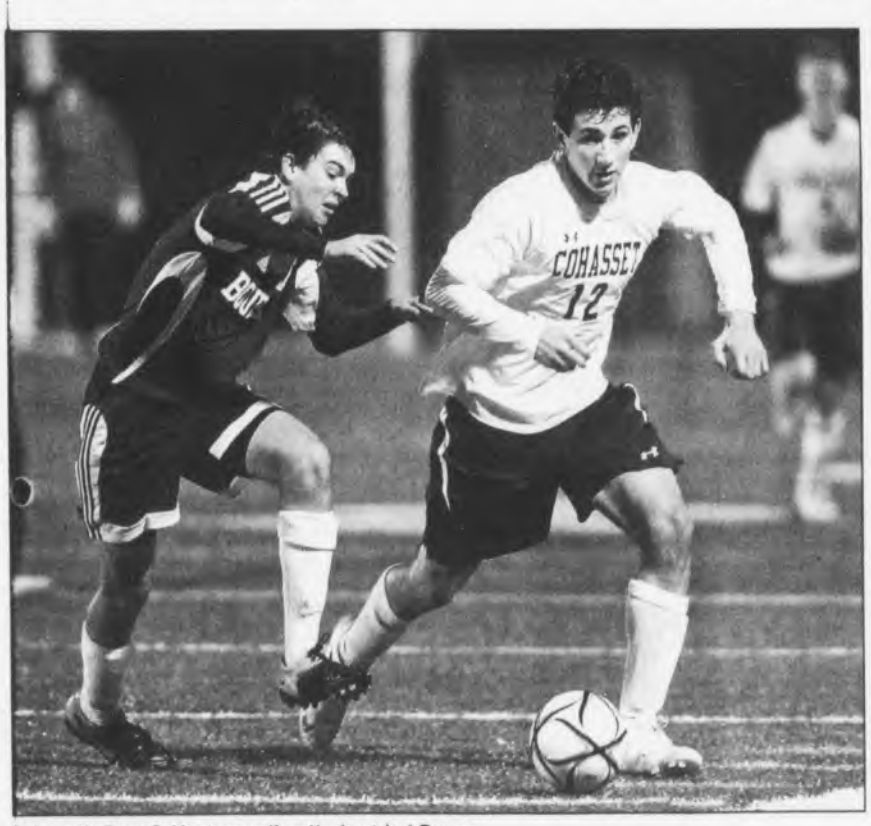
Now, Cohasset waits to see who and when they'll play next.

Due to weather, the games in the other bracket were postponed.



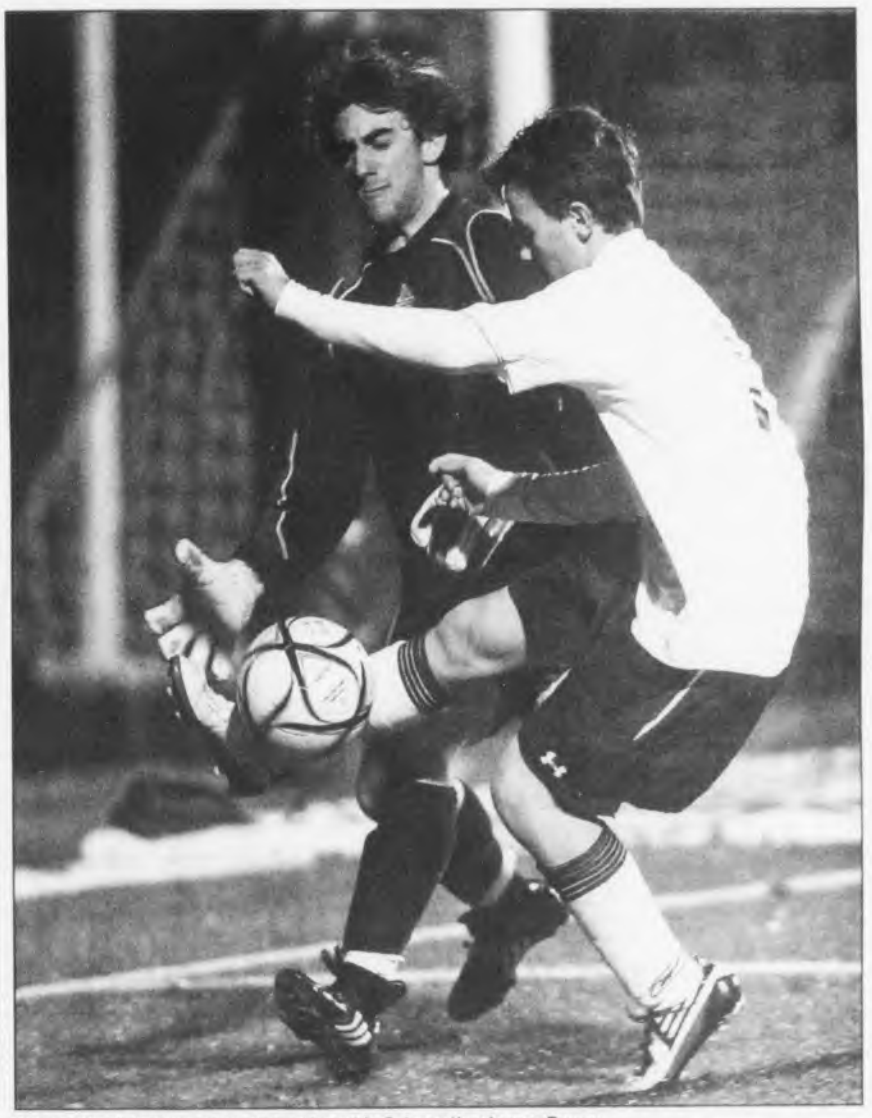
Cardinal Spellman beat Coyle and Cassidy on Wednesday and were scheduled to play West Bridgewater on Thursday.

Cohasset will play the winner of that game in the semifinal no earlier than Saturday.



Thursday's winner will have played two days in a row.

Willis said no matter the competition, he's expecting a battle.



"Each game from here on out is about defense and the keeper," he said. "With teams at this level, offense is at a premium."

Success on Senior Night

Senior, Thomas Flibotte got things started with a four-yard run that capped a five-play drive that covered 41 yards, all but five by Flibotte.

After shutting down the Clippers on the next possession, the seniors struck again when senior quarterback Jeff Cavanaro connected with fellow senior Jack Carrier for a 58-yard touchdown pass and a 14-0 lead with Shane Haggerty's kick.

Cavanaro stood tall in the pocket with lots of time for Carrier to get wide open down the middle, capping a two-play drive that covered 64 yards with nine minutes left in the half.

"Jeff threw the ball as accurately as I've seen him throw it in the last three years," Afanasiw said. "Even the balls we didn't catch were thrown well. The line did a nice job too."

After holding Norwell again, the Skippers struck again with 4:06 left in the half on a 19-yard touchdown run to cap a six-play, 64 yard drive.

Senior, Robert Jones had two catches for 30 yards on the drive.

The Skippers upped the lead to 28-0 with 29 seconds left in the half on a one-yard pass from Cavanaro to Jones.

Flibotte had two carries for 25 yards on the drive.

The Clippers came out fighting in the second half, forcing a fumble by Cavanaro on Cohasset's first possession of the second half, but Norwell turned the ball over on downs at the Cohasset 27.

Cohasset followed with another strong drive that included a 19-yard catch by Robbie Mahoney for a first-down on a second-and-17 play and a 12-yard catch by Jones.

Flibotte and Jake Kissick followed with long runs to set up a first-and-goal from the three for the Skippers.

Credit the Norwell defense for some solid play, knocking down three passes before stopping a fourth-down run by Jake Kissick to take the ball at the four.

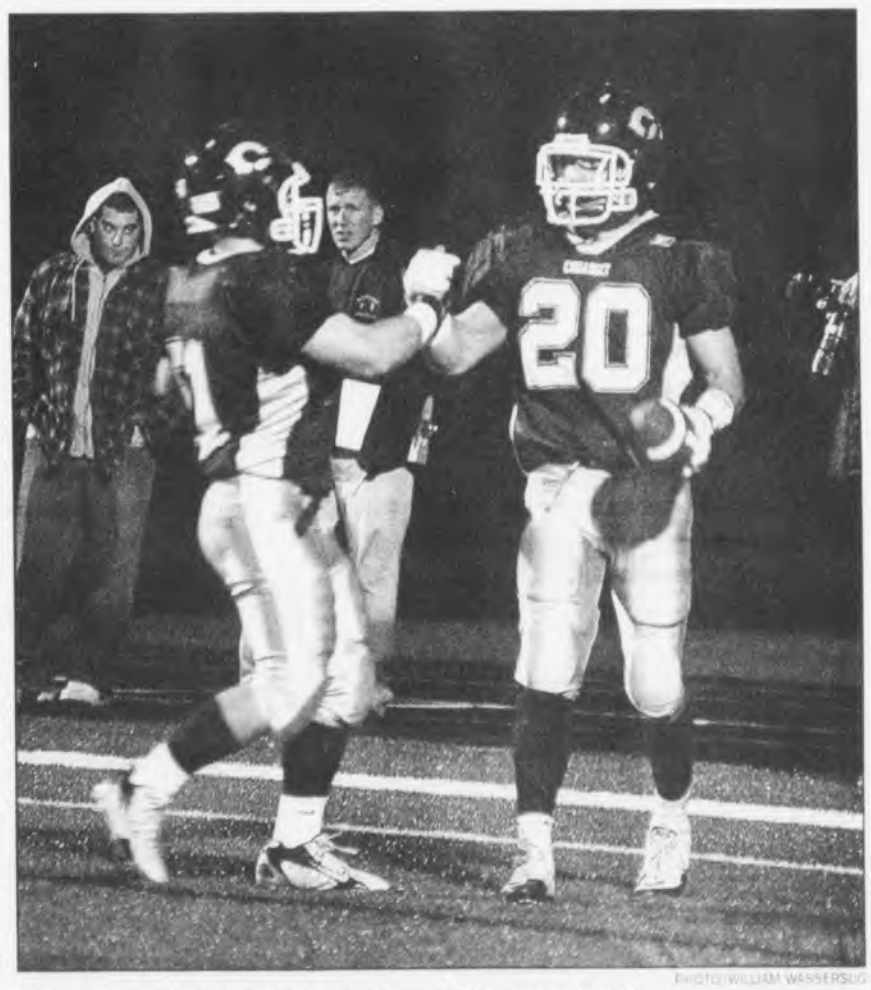
Cohasset got the ball back again when Alex Evans recovered a fumble at the five and Cavanaro cashed in with a 22-yard pass to Carrier for a 35-0 lead with 7:11 left to play.

Senior Bill Mack had a big play in the fourth quarter, making a stop for a big Norwell loss.

Before the game, Cohasset honored long-time Norwell coach Jim Sullivan, who was once an assistant at Cohasset.

This is Sullivan's final season coaching the Clippers.

Things don't get easy for the Skippers.



They'll have to travel to Abington Friday night to face a 7-2 Green Wave team coming off a 22-12 loss at East Bridgewater, and potentially remembering last year's 14-0 loss to the Skippers, although Abington's veteran coach Jim Kelliher said that isn't as much a factor as it is also Senior Day in Abington.

""It's really not much about last year as far as I'm concerned," Kelliher told the Abington Mariner. "We can't change what happened last year. It happened, it's in the past. It's just a matter of pride for us to win our last two football games. If we do that and finish 9-2, that's a good season when you look at the teams we have played and how good our league is this year."

Cohasset beat East Bridgewater earlier this season at home.

For Cohasset, there will be at least one more home game this season, with the Skippers hosting Hull on Thanksgiving Day.

Before that though, there's still a Green Wave to try to surf.

CHS makes a difference!

LIFE AT CHS

NATALIE DIGNAM

This weekend, CHS students will team up with local volunteers to provide lawn car services for elder residents in the annual Make A Difference Day. A general need for raking and some dark, cold mornings mean that winter is coming, but not before some Thanksgiving celebrations! Students were thankful for a day off this Thursday in celebration of Veterans Day, except for the girls' soccer team, who will be on their way to play their second tournament game in Nantucket. Speaking of soccer, the boys clinched another victory in a double- overtime shoot-out. Congratulations to both teams!

Athletics aside, students have been busy preparing for the upcoming debate season and the annual Model U.N. Conference at Harvard. Last year, the debate team even took the top two spots for negative and is looking forward to another great season. But while some clubs at CHS have grown in popularity — most notably the school newspaper (the Spinnaker), along with International Club, Math Team, and Debate Team — others seem to have fallen into obscurity or no longer exist at all. Some upperclassmen may remember the Environmental Club, which was known for providing recycling services for the school and raising awareness on reducing waste and promoting conservation. CHS recently began a new streamline-recycling program, which doesn't require the sorting previously performed by the Environmental Club. There seemed to be no need for a school club focused on environmental issues, especially when the Center for Student Coastal Research, a student run organization that promotes environmental scientific research, has continued to grow and take a larger role in the community by promoting conservation. It seems that, while the disappearance of the Environmental Club appears to denote a lack of student interest, in reality students have found new outlets to support their interests. Another school club, Best Buddies, encourages high school students to spend time with students from the South Shore Collaborative, which is located in the Middle School. Although Best Buddies has gotten off to a slow start, this winter Molly Chipman will be heading the effort to reinstall one of the most beloved clubs at CHS.

Natalie Dignam is a senior at CHS; her column runs weekly during the school year.

Beautification of Deer Hill School courtyard

With the season of Thanksgiving and holiday gift giving right around the corner, students at Deer Hill School have a special gift for which to be thankful. The fully subscribed Junior Gardeners Group, under the auspices of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, participated in the planting of a Stellar Pink Rutgers Dogwood tree on Oct. 18 for the beautification of the school courtyard. The tree was planted by Chris Kennedy and donated by Kennedy Country Gardens, who are celebrating their 50th anniversary this year.

Also present for the occasion were Dr. Jennifer deChiara, principal of Deer Hill School, Joan Carlo, the current chairwoman of Junior Gardeners of the CGCC, and Lee Jenkins and Dolores Roy, past chairmen. Each spring pink blossoms will appear and add beauty to the courtyard for all to appreciate, followed by dark green leaves in summer and burgundy foliage in fall. This is a gift that can be enjoyed for years and generations of students to come.

Treats for troops overseas

Sweet Relief sends Halloween delights

"It is very rewarding to see how exciting it is for our students to be an integral part of the world around them."

— Lyn Congdon Previte, Sweet Relief Director

Sweet Relief Nursery and Preschool in Cohasset has collected over 60 pounds of leftover Halloween candy – and these treats are being sent directly from the tiny hands of Sweet Relief trick-or-treaters to US Troops serving in Afghanistan.

Lyn Congdon Previte, Sweet Relief Director, was astonished and proud to realize the results of this candy collection; spearheaded by one of her Preschool Enrichment instructors, Kim Spires.

Spires, a Scituate resident and owner of Inspire Kids Yoga, incorporates the practice of yoga into the Sweet Relief Preschool curriculum weekly.

Spires, and her family, are also actively involved in supporting US Troops serving in Afghanistan. "The Candy for Soldiers Program was an idea started by my daughter, Abby, who at 5 years old, suggested we send her Halloween candy to her cousin who was serving on the front lines in Afghanistan a few years ago. He is home, safe and sound now, but we continue to get names of soldiers from friends who have family still serving and send large care packages that can be shared with the whole unit," says Spires.

Spires and Previte announced the candy collection effort to the Sweet Relief school community and the results were overwhelming.

"It is very rewarding to see how exciting it is for our students to be an integral part of the world around them. I commend my staff members for presenting opportunities, such as the Candy for Soldiers Program, to our student body. Incorporating community service and global outreach is an important part of our curriculum," says Previte. "Our Preschool Enrichment Program encourages children to express themselves through active imagination and physical movement. Kim Spires, and her inspired yoga component, ties this all together."

Sweet Relief Nursery and Preschool is licensed through the State of Massachusetts Department of Early Education and Care (EEC). In addition to its EEC accreditation, Sweet Relief is insured and occupies a brand new schoolhouse, a large fenced-in secure play yard and has a consistent emergent curriculum, which follows the Massachusetts Department of Education Curriculum Guidelines.

Sweet Relief is currently accepting applications for both the Nursery and Preschool Program. For more information regarding both Sweet Relief, and Kim Spires yoga program, please call Lyn Congdon Previte at 781.383.9723 or email to sweetrelief143@aol.com. You may also find additional information about Spires by visiting her Facebook page: Inspire Kids Yoga.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF NOV. 22, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This year, instead of jumping into the whole holiday prep scene, move in a little at a time. You'll appreciate the sense of control you're more likely to enjoy.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The separation between the Bovine's head and heart is never as far apart as it seems. Both senses work best when they come out of logic and honesty.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The best way to keep those pre-holiday pressures under control is to just say no to taking on new tasks while you're still trying to work with a heap of others.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) News means a change might be on its way, but what does it hold? Don't just ask questions; make sure you get answers you can trust.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Old friends and new have one thing in common: Both your longtime and newly minted pals have much wisdom to impart.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) With time running out, this is a good time for you to show 'em all what those Virgo super-organizational skills can do.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Librans and holidays are made for each other, especially if children and animals are going to be part of your joyous season.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Time is getting too short to allow a spat to taint the holiday season. Restart your relationship and reschedule holiday fun times.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Seeking advice is laudable. You might learn far more than you thought you could. Stay with it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Continuing to assess changes works toward your getting your new project up and ready. Trusted colleagues remain ready to help.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) That new situation needs a lot of attention, but it's worth it. This is a very good time for you to involve the arts in what you do.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It might be a good idea to slow your hectic holiday pace so that you don't rush past what — or who — you're hoping to rush toward.

BORN THIS WEEK: Others pick up on your confidence in yourself, which inspires others to believe in you and your special gifts.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Jazz vocalist to sing at First Parish

Patrice Williamson, a highly acclaimed jazz vocalist and winner of a Best of Boston award, will perform at First Parish Cohasset at 3 pm on Sunday, Nov. 21. She will be joined by two Boston favorites: pianist/composer/arranger Mark Shilansky, and bassist Keala Kaumeheiwa.

Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

The Jazz Times has said: "Patrice Williamson isn't a singer, she's a one-woman jazz sampler...She is a woman of many voices, each distinctly intriguing, all distinctly her own."

Williamson's fluent scat style and sensitive ballad work have earned her a coveted "Best of Boston" award in 1997, and in 1999 and 2000 she was a nominee for "Best Jazz Vocalist" by the Kahlua Boston Music Awards. A regular at Boston's celebrated Regattabar since 1996, she has also appeared in the company of Tony Bennett, James Moody, and Cassandra Wilson at the Tanglewood Jazz Festival, and Danilo Perez and Kevin Mahogony at the Marblehead Jazz Festival. She has performed at Boston's Symphony Hall, Jordan Hall, Hatch Shell, and Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, as well as the IDB Cultural Center Concert Series in Washington, DC, and at the International Women's Forum in Singapore. Most recently, she performed at the UC lounge in New York City.

Both of her independent recordings, My Shining Hour and Free to Dream, have received high praise from jazz critics around the country, often drawing favorable comparisons to legends like Ella Fitzgerald and Sarah Vaughan. In addition to performing, she is actively passing on her knowledge and love of the jazz tradition through her teaching at The New School of Music in Cambridge, and at Milton Academy.

Timothy A. Huskins

COHASSET – Timothy Atwood Huskins, of Cohasset and formerly of Portland, ME, age 56, beloved husband of Jane Liddell Huskins; father of Emily and Jonathan Huskins, passed away suddenly on Nov. 7, 2010.

Tim was a kind person, and friend to everyone who knew him. His smile and his laugh were contagious. He would do anything for anyone.

Tim loved the water. He spent a great deal of his time fishing the Gulf River with his older brother Lloyd Huskins, and son Jonathan. If you had never gone fishing before, Tim could "hook you up". Tim also had a passion for the open road. A career professional driver, Tim had memorized much of the East coast, highways and back roads alike. He loved to drive so much; he even enjoyed driving on the weekends, taking his wife Jane for a cruise in their little convertible, or putting around town with his dog Abbey in the back seat.

Family and friends were Tim's number one priority. If you knew Tim, you were sure to hear stories about his son Jonathan, or his daughter Emily. You might hear those stories even if you didn't know Tim. Everyone became his friend. He had a magnetic personality.

Get ready to laugh your pants off

Cohasset Dramatic Club presents 'Noises Off'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

In theater terms "noises off" is a stage direction referring to sounds that originate off-stage. When it comes to the play by the same name, however, even the behind-the-scenes action is on stage for all to see as they will when the Cohasset Dramatic Club (CDC) production of the 1982 farce opens on Friday. Playwright Michael Frayn got the idea for the comedy while standing in the wings watching Lynn Redgrave in another of his plays, "Chinamen," which he believed was funnier backstage than from the audience.

"The set really drives the bus," explained director Lisa Pratt by telephone last week of her CDC production of Frayn's play-within-a-play comedy about a touring company of British actors performing in "Nothing On," a risqué romp involving young women running about in their underwear, old men dropping their pants, and doors being continuously opened and shut. "The set is a two-story English country house with eight different doors, all of which are in almost constant use."

Following its 1982 premiere in London, "Noises Off" made its way to Broadway where it opened at the Brooks Atkinson Theatre on December 11, 1983, with a cast that included Dorothy Loudon, Victor Garber, and Deborah Rush. Director Peter Bogdonavich moved the action from Great Britain to Des Moines, Iowa, for a 1992 feature film version starring Carol Burnett, Michael Caine, and the late John Ritter. A 2001 Broadway revival, once again at the Brooks Atkinson, featured Patti LuPone, Peter Gallagher, and T.R. Knight. It has also become a staple of professional and community theater companies, as Pratt discovered not long after returning to CDC in 2003 after a nine-year hiatus focused on family and career.

"The first thing I did when I came back was to play a small role in 'The Sound of Music,' but before long I was asked to join the CDC Board. One of the first things they said to me then was, 'We want you to direct 'Noises Off.'" Fast forward six years and Pratt is now tackling the popular play with all of its logistical challenges.

"The set has to turn 180 degrees to show all the backstage action and that is very challenging to do without the benefit of hyrdraulics. Our set designer Mark Bono – who also plays Lloyd Dallas in our production - previously worked on this show with The Walpole Footlighters so he knows it well. We've got the main center piece of our set on 18 heavy-duty caster wheels. We have a total of 12 people on our crew and they're going to make sure that the set turns as gracefully as if it were being choreographed. What I hope is that our audiences will laugh out loud and be really entertained. That will happen if the operational piece works well and we deliver the play efficiently. We're very aware that when it moves it has to be a swift set change, and not a chance for the audience to nap."

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will perform "Noises Off" this weekend and next, through Nov. 21, at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue. For tickets and more information, call 617-697-2115 or go online at brownpapertickets.com. Tickets may also be purchased at the retailers Paperscapes and Buttonwood Books in Cohasset.

Turkey Hill turbine

Planning board considering special permit

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Trustees of Reservation want to erect an 80-meter wind turbine on their property atop Turkey Hill.

On Tuesday night, the Trustees introduced the planning board to the project as the first public hearing on the special permit application.

The presentation covered nearly all aspects of the project and its potential impacts.

Items like noise, shadow/flicker, setbacks, lighting, and visual impact were addressed.

A small crowd of both Hingham and Cohasset residents attended the hearing.

The Trustees of Reservation is a nonprofit group dedicated to the preservation of open space. They maintain for the enjoyment of all over 100 properties across Massachusetts.

The group's local properties include World's End in Hingham, Whitney-Thayer Woods in Cohasset and Turkey Hill/Weir River Farm in Cohasset and Hingham.

In a Master Plan written in 2007, the Trustees made it a goal to become a carbon-neutral organization. The energy generated from the proposed turbine would put the organization well on its way to that goal.

The 80-meter, 1.8-megawatt turbine by Vestas is the targeted machine (although the Trustees said they would go out to bid on the project, so that could change). The Trustees would own the turbine.

The turbine, which will be in the northwest corner of Cohasset near the Hingham border, is surrounded by open space.

The closest residences to the turbine will the Golden Living Center and a house in Hingham leased to the Trustees.

No appetite for new taxes

Voters reject meals, rooms taxes

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"We're trying to encourage local business. I oppose any increase in taxes these days."

Cohasset will not tax meals or hotels.

Special Town Meeting decisively turned down two articles presented in an effort to bring in more revenue for the budget Nov. 15.

The town's Budget Planning Group had recommended adding a 0.75 local option meals tax and a 6 percent rooms occupancy tax. Sam Wakeman, chair of the Advisory Committee and Budget Planning Group, said in looking at budget projections over the next few years, there would be increasingly significant deficits in the budget if new revenue sources were not found.

The local meals tax alone was projected to return more than $100,000 annually, but not one voter spoke in favor of either the meals or the hotels tax. Many residents were concerned about burdening a particular segment of the business with the additional tax.

Roy Fitzsimmons of Doane Street feared the meals tax would drive people away from Cohasset's restaurants and other businesses.

"As surrounding towns go up, we stay down (to remain competitive)," Fitzsimmons said.

Sky is the limit for O'Donnell

Cohasset man helps pen sci-fi movie

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Town of Cohasset has more connections to Hollywood than most New England towns.

Humphrey Bogart once acted on the stage at Town Hall.

Actors Jack Nicholson, Cher, Susan Sarandon and Michelle Pfeiffer descended on our picturesque town to film "Witches of Eastwick" in 1986.

A few years later "Housesitter" with Steve Martin and Goldie Hawn was shot in Cohasset.

Just last month, an independent movie crew took over the Red Lion Inn and spent a day filming in the village.

With a little bit of Hollywood star dust floating around, it's with little surprise that one of Cohasset's homegrown boys is now making his mark in the movie industry.

Liam O'Donnell, a member of the Cohasset High Class of 2000, has screenwriter and producer credits on the recently released sci-fi movie "Skyline."

Growing up in Cohasset, O'Donnell had the opportunity to let his imagination run wild. He grew up on a movie diet of "Indiana Jones" and "Star Wars." He read Michael Crichton and Philip K. Dick. At Cohasset Schools he learned the basics of essay writing, a skill that helped him with his politic science essays at Boston University and in his screenwriting endeavors.

"(Cohasset has) the kind of environment where you can dream and dream big," O'Donnell said.

He dreamt so big that he and some of his closest friends dreamt up the concept of the movie "Skyline," where a blue light from above could spell the end of human race. He then went on to make the vision a reality.

Water Department to start Corrosion Control Program

The following is a press release from the Cohasset Water Department.

The Cohasset Water Department will begin implementing modifications to its Corrosion Control Program on or about Nov. 23 with the addition of a phosphate corrosion inhibitor. Phosphate is a tasteless, odorless, food grade additive.

The modifications are being implemented in order to comply with state mandates and to reduce the instances of water discoloration. The Phosphate program will help reduce the dissolution of lead that comes from existing fixtures and plumbing in homes and buildings.

During the initial conditioning period, the use of phosphate may result in the accelerated cleaning of scale and tuberculation from pipe surfaces, resulting in discolored water, turbidity, or suspended solids. To minimize this impact, the Water Department is implementing this modification immediately following the completion of our fall flushing program. According to DEP approved guidelines, the conditioning period should last about two months as the dose of phosphate is slowly increased. To further minimize any negative impacts during this conditioning period, it is recommended that you reduce the addition of chlorine bleach during your wash cycles or utilize an alternative agent. If you do experience discolored water please notify the Cohasset Water Department. If possible, it is advisable to flush your hot water tank.

For more information, please contact the Cohasset Water Department at 781-383-0057.

Atlantic Avenue pole hearing held

The Board of Selectmen approved the installation of a National Grid utility pole on Atlantic Avenue last week (Monday, Nov. 15).

The property owners of 19 Atlantic Ave., siblings Janet and Jeffrey Barker, petitioned the town to install the pole on town land. The recently built house is practically move-in ready with the exception of having no utilities.

Although there was once a house on the property it burned down in 1975 and the poles, which once brought electricity to the house, have long since disappeared.

The solution presented was to place a pole on town property and connect the wires under a driveway.

National Grid representative Ed Gillis said he had inspected the site with town engineer Mark Brennan and the company would be responsible for the care and maintenance of the pole.

Though the application was straightforward, the situation between the Barkers and their neighbors is anything but. Mark Gladstone, an attorney on behalf of Eric and Aveen Roberts of 17 Atlantic Ave., said his clients were concerned with stormwater drainage off the property and the pattern of mismanaged construction for the 19 Atlantic Ave. home.

"The message I'm giving is nothing so far in this construction of the house has been done in good practice," Gladstone said.

As the conversation drew on, Selectmen chair Karen Quigley had to direct conversation back to the issue at hand – the pole.

"I can't let the meeting deteriorate into a discussion between neighbors and their attorneys," Quigley said.

The pole installation was approved unanimously by the selectmen, but not before Selectmen vice chair Ted Carr offered a little advice and encouragement.

"This is a mess, guys. The town has a right to put a pole here but I really encourage everyone to work well together. The neighbors have valid arguments and concerns and both sides need to come together and figure it out," Carr said.

Selectmen Lee Jenkins agreed, "neighbors should sit down and work it out without going to court."

Jingle Bell Walk in Cohasset Nov. 26

South Shore Community Center invites one and all to the 16th annual Jingle Bell Walk. Santa, Mrs. Claus, the elves, Rudolph and Frosty will arrive by boat at Cohasset Harbor at 2 p.m., on Friday, Nov. 26. All gathered will follow Santa as he is brought to the Center by a horse-drawn wagon.

At the gymnasium refreshments will be served as the Rusty Skippers Band plays holiday music. Children can visit the new Santa's Village to make holiday ornaments. Storyteller Big Ryan will entertain the audience and there will also be bowling. Santa will be available to greet children personally and parents are encouraged to bring a camera to capture the moment as the SSCC will no longer be taking photographs. Weather permitting there will be hayrides around the Cohasset Common and the lighting of the Christmas tree to celebrate the start of the holiday season. In the event of rain, Santa will arrive at the gym at 2 p.m.

Six vehicles rummaged through on same night

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

At 9:25 a.m. on Saturday (Nov. 13), at 55-year-old Old Coach Road resident reported his 2010 Lexus SUV and his 2010 Lexus sedan, both of which were unlocked, were entered overnight. An iPod and loose change were taken. The cars were rummaged through.

Later that morning a neighbor, another 55-year-old Old Coach Road resident, reported his three vehicles were entered: a 2002 Dodge van; a 2001 Jeep Wrangler; and a 2001 Toyota Tundra pickup. The vehicles were unlocked, rummaged through but nothing was missing.

A third neighbor a 57-year-old woman, also reported that morning that her 2003 Acura MDX had been entered and rummaged through. Taken were a Bluetooth earpiece, flashlight and loose change.

Police believe the car breakins are linked to similar cases that night in Hull and Hingham around the West Corner area.

OUI charge

At about 7:45 p.m. on Wednesday (Nov. 10) police received a call about a single-car crash on Atlantic Avenue near Cunningham Bridge. Police found a 2000 BMW that had gone head-on into tree but the operator was not on the scene. The registration came back to a 46-year-old Highland Avenue woman. Police went to her house and after further investigation placed the woman under arrest for operating under the influence of alcohol (second offense); marked lanes violation; and leaving the scene after property damage. Police said a passersby had dropped her off at her house. Police can make an arrest after an accident if they have probable cause even if they do not see operation of the motor vehicle. Police said she failed field sobriety tests and the marks on her forehead were consistent with airbag deployment.

Intruder

A Whitehead Road couple in their 50s reported that an intruder had entered their bedroom at 11:50 p.m. on Saturday (Nov. 13) and awakened them. Both the 4 p.m. to midnight and the midnight-to-8 a.m. police shifts responded. K-9 units from Hingham and Hull were also called in. A perimeter was set up but the intruder was not located after an extensive search. Nothing appeared to be taken from the house.

Obscene calls

A 21-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police on Sunday (Nov. 14) that she had been receiving upwards of 75 obscene calls that were sexually graphic. Police said someone had placed an ad of a sexual nature on Craigslist and used her phone number. The matter is under investigation.

Hit an island

At 12:25 a.m. on Monday (Nov. 15), police received a 911 call from a 61-year-old Quincy man who was headed north when his attention was diverted for a few seconds and he hit the island by the train station on Route 3A. Police said he was transported to the hospital with minor injuries. The 1995 Ford Escort station wagon he was driving had to be towed. He was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes.

Magic Markers

At 11:16 a.m. on Monday (Nov. 8), a caller reported marks across five to six windows at the high school by the main office. Police said the marks were made by Magic Markers and were removed without difficulty. They said there were no symbols, just scribbling.

Annoying calls

A 56-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police on Monday (Nov. 8) that she had been receiving annoying 800-number calls on her cell phone from someone with a foreign accent. The calls were not obscene, just annoying, police said. In order for Verizon to investigate, she needed to file a police report.

Suspended license

A Cohasset officer conducting traffic enforcement at Beechwood Street and Route 3A observed at 2002 Jeep Wrangler headed south on 3A go through the red light. The officer stopped the Jeep and a computer check revealed the 31-year-old Brockton man, driving the Jeep, had a suspended license for nonpayment of speeding tickets. He is being summonsed to court for operating after license suspension and for failure to stop at a red light.

Expired license

A 37-year-old Hingham man is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation after a computer check revealed his license had expired the day before. An officer on patrol on Saturday (Nov. 13) at 12:50 a.m. on Jerusalem Road near Windy Hill Road saw a vehicle that had been pulled way off the roadway with one man inside. A computer check on the plate of the 2008 Jeep Wrangler showed the registered owner had an expired license as of Nov. 12. Police said the man told them he had pulled off the road to send text messages. His car was towed.

Abandoned car

Police investigated a report of a 1991 Toyota Camry last week that had been parked in the lot at Harborview Apartments off Elm Street for some time. The car only had one plate, police said. A computer check revealed the registration had been cancelled. Apparently the registered owner, a 52-year-old Cohasset man, had only turned in one of the plates. Police seized the other plate and contacted him that he could not keep an unregistered car in the parking lot.

Threats

A 34-year-old Cohasset woman is being summonsed to court for making threats toward another woman, who is ex-wife of her boyfriend. Police said the ex-wife called last week about the threats to kill and produced emails from the other woman that corroborated her allegations.

Steam

A concerned caller notified police last Tuesday (Nov. 9) at about 6:20 p.m. about steam coming from the ground on Beechwood Street. The caller thought it might be a leaking gas line. Police said new asphalt had just been laid in the area. The asphalt goes on very hot and when mixed with any moisture, emits steam.

Photographed

A 39-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police last Wednesday (Nov. 10) that someone in a vehicle stopped to take photographs of her home. She waited until the person left before notifying police and was told to call back if it happens again. However, police said there is no law against taking photographs from public property.

Text messages

A 21-year-old Cohasset man reported to police last Thursday at 12:21 a.m. that he had been receiving threats via text messages from a 20-year-old Scituate man over an ex-girlfriend. The Cohasset man did not want to press charges but police did contact the Scituate man and told him to stop the messages and he agreed to do so.

Smashed window

A 48-year-old Border Street man reported that the back, passenger-side window of his 2005 Range Rover had been smashed. The report came in at 10:13 a.m. o n Thursday (Nov. 11). Police said no projectile could be found.

Blowing leaves

A concerned caller reported that a neighbor was blowing leaves onto North Main Street. Police spoke to the resident, who was blowing the leaves, and explained it could pose a traffic hazard. The resident apologized and promised to clean up the leaves from the street.

Deer hit

A 70-year-old Quincy woman, operating a 2005 Ford 500, heading south on Route 3A by Sohier Street reported that a deer ran out by Whitney Woods. She struck the deer and the deer ran off. Police said there was about $1,000 in damage to her vehicle but it did not have to be towed. Police warn that deer are now in rut, meaning it is the mating season, and they are more active than usual.

A plan for the harbor

State harbor management plan on horizon

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"The harbor sort of sits over there. It's an integral part of the town, but it's the elephant in the room that no one wants to talk about. We want to find out what's out there and what can be done."
Al Moore

Cohasset Harbor has long been a hub of activity, and was one of the largest mackerel ports in the state during the 1800s.

While Cohasset is still a working fishing port, the harbor has changed over the last century into a haven for recreational boaters. Thousands flock to Atlantica and the Cohasset Harbor Inn each year for a meal or a wedding. There are spaces to enjoy the views of the waterway and means to get out on the water.

But what does the next century hold for the harbor? What do the next five years hold?

Led by the Planning Board, the town could begin a harbor management plan to identify the needs and means to make the harbor a more-accessible part of Cohasset.

On Tuesday night, the Planning Board welcomed Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management regional coordinator Jason Burtner and Andrea Langhauser of the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection waterways program. Together, the two agencies oversee the development and implementation of harbor master plans.

In September, the Planning Board hosted a forum to gather ideas about the current state of the harbor and what residents and business owners might like to see on the waterfront. One of the key obstacles identified at the forum was that waterfront areas must abide by very specific federal regulations.

Locally, development on the harbor is a challenge. There are four different zoning districts — residential, downtown business, waterfront business and light industrial — making it a complicated place to develop even if local zoning was the only consideration. Another layer of federal regulations — Chapter 91, which dates back to colonial days — ensures that water-dependent activities retain access to the water.

"The harbor sort of sits over there. It's an integral part of the town, but it's the elephant in the room that no one wants to talk about," Planning Board chairman Al Moore said. "We want to find out what's out there and what can be done."

Right now, changes to current configuration or new development on the waterfront would prohibit the development of condominiums on upper floors and only allow marine-related business on the first floor of buildings. Cohasset Harbor Inn and Atlantica are uses that are grandfathered in.

The discussion on defining what's possible on the harborfront is timely because several of the harbor's key parcels are on the real estate market. The Mill River Marina, Atlantica, the Olde Salt House, Cohasset Harbor Inn and "The Oaks" waterfront mansion were put on the market in May for $55 million.

The town can develop a harbor management plan in one of two ways. It can be done through a formal regulatory planning method in partnership with the relevant state agencies. The town could also develop a local harbor plan, using a similar method, but that would not involve amending any portion of Chapter 91.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, who has worked on similar plans in Nantucket, recommended the town work with the state agencies to develop a formal harbor management plan.

"I've seen how much power the state has (and how that) can affect the quality of the whole harbor. With a state harbor management plan it allows you, the town, to be part of the plan," DeRensis said. "The municipality does not have enough horsepower (to make a change) unless it is partnered with the state."

The first step toward creating a harbor management plan is creating a committee to see the process forward. The committee typically includes town officials such as harbormaster, a planning board member, a harbor committee member, a conservation commission member and a selectman and residents. The subsequent process involves at least two public hearings as the plan is developed. The State Secretary of the Office of Environment Affairs ultimately approves the plan.

Volunteers could do the plan, but more typically a consultant is hired to assist in the process. The cost is estimated to be $25,000 to $40,000.

Hull has a state-approved harbor management plan, and Scituate is working toward a local harbor management plan.

Moore said the next step would be to bring the harbor plan issue before selectmen to see if this is something they want to move forward with.

Coalition takes on bullying

Community group meets monthly

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset is tackling one of the most pervasive problems facing schools and communities today — bullying. A coalition of school administration, teachers, police officers, clergy, and parents was formed last spring to provide a forum for the issue.

The community task force is called "Cohasset Coalition for a Caring Community." According to Cohasset High School Assistant Principal Mike Gill, the group has met on a monthly basis since this past April.

The coalition was in part an outgrowth of a school and community program about bullying. A father, John Halligan, came to the school to speak to students and parents about his son, Ryan. Ryan died by suicide in 2003 after being bullied by classmates at school and online.

"As school officials, we're interested in the community effort to fight bullying, which is really the goal of this group," Gill said.

The coalition's next meeting is Monday, Dec. 6 at 7 p.m. and welcomes community participation. A website (ccforcc.org) is currently under construction and will contain pertinent information like meeting dates and current projects.

One of the primary objectives of the coalition over the next few months is a "pledge drive." According to Gill, Cohasset High student have committed to working with community member to promote the pledge drive.

The pledge is simple, to the point, and speaks to the very heart and source of bullying: "I, (name), pledge to promote respect for human differences and the basic rights and dignity of all, and to avoid behavior that is hurtful to others."

The coalition is also working in a "bullying prevention and intervention plan" to be implemented over the next year. The plan will be presented to the School Committee in December.

The coalition will be looking for public input and comment on the draft plan on Wednesday, Dec. 1 at 6:30p.m. in the school community room. The meeting will take place before the scheduled regular School Committee meeting. Written comment is also welcome.

The draft plan, along with accompanying pro-active strategies, is posted on the school district's website, cohassetk12.org.

Then, on Tuesday, Jan. 18, the coalition will host a community forum to discuss the work that has been done to date on the bullying issues. School administration will present the results of a local Youth Risk Behavior Survey that was given to Cohasset Middle-High School students this fall. It will also be an opportunity to celebrate the results of the pledge drive and describe how the school will implement a new bullying prevention and intervention plan.

Gill said the results of the survey are currently being reviewed and analyzed in order to tailor the plan specifically to Cohasset and its students.

"Some of the findings were surprising in a good way and some of them were surprising in a not so good way," Gill said.

In terms of the climate of the Cohasset Middle-High School, Gill said Cohasset students' behavior is representative of other schools around the nation.

"In some ways we are doing better and in other ways we could do better," Gill said. "I don't think anyone here is burying their head in the sand and not recognizing Cohasset is affected by bulling behavior."

While Cohasset does have programs to address bullying behavior like any program it does not eliminate the issue.

Gill said he is proponent of letting the community and parents know when there are problems that need to be addressed.

"If the schools are doing poorly in math, the community doesn't say get rid of the math program, I would hope they would help the school improve the math program. When students exhibit bullying behavior parents have a right to know and a need to know. Then, they can help develop a strategy to address the problem," Gill said.

Girls ice hockey team approved

Cohasset teams up with Hanover

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

As the result of a new winter sports team, 17 girls from Cohasset and Hanover will have something to keep them busy and active this season.

On Nov. 17, School Committee members approved the formation of a junior varsity girls ice hockey team, pending some final details. If all goes well, the team will take to the ice shortly after Thanksgiving.

The genesis for a girls ice hockey team began in 2008. Cohasset parents Jim and Nancy Farren approached high school Athletic Director Ron Ford about the possibility of starting a cooperative team outside of the school budget. It took some time, but the Farrens were able to find like-minded parents in Hanover.

Within a short time, the two towns had 17 girls — 10 from Cohasset and seven from Hanover — committed and ready to join the team if it became a reality. Concurrently, the group was able to get donation pledges for more than $14,500.

"Girls ice hockey is one of the fastest growing sports in our area," Ford said. "This allows a group of girls to play a sport and stay in the public school system."

"Without this team we'd have 17 girls sitting at home watching TV or on Facebook. This gets them off the couch, staying active and having fun."
Jim Farren

Both the Hanover and Cohasset school committees supported the formation of the team if the funding was in place and some lingering insurance questions were answered. The superintendents of both school districts will have the final say on whether to greenlight the team. All winter sports begin the Monday after Thanksgiving.

Cohasset will serve as the host school for the team. The team will practice one to two hours per week at local rinks, which is typical of a junior varsity squad, Ford said, and play 10 to 14 games with local schools.

School Committee member Alfred Slanetz asked if all skill levels were welcome to come out for the team and how would that be handled.

Ford said under MIAA rules, cooperative teams are not permitted to cut student athletes. Parent Jim Farren said they encourage participation, no matter the skill level. Other towns have dealt with differing skill levels by dividing the rink in half and working with the novice skaters at one end and more advanced skaters at the other.

"Without this team, we'd have 17 girls sitting at home watching TV or on Facebook. This gets them off the couch, staying active and having fun," Jim Farren said.

The cost for the program is estimated to be between $12,000 and $15,000. The program will be self-funded for the foreseeable future. In the past, the school department has found a way has to incorporate cooperative teams into the school operating budget within three to five years of inception if the program shows growth and sustainability.

Because of its small size, Cohasset has been a part of several cooperative teams. Gymnastics has long been a joint team with Norwell. Cohasset has joined forces with Hull to field cross-country and track teams the past four years. Swimming started off as a cooperative team with Scituate, but now Cohasset is able to field its own team. The swimming team was incorporated into the school budget after several years.

Slanetz said taking on the budget of a new sport, or potentially any athletics, might not be possible given the budget forecast for the next few years.

The Cohasset Hanover Girls Ice Hockey Boosters Club will support the new team for the time being.

Contact Athletic Director Ron Ford for information about the team at 781-383-6103.

School department to hold special education screenings

The Cohasset Public Schools, in accordance with Federal Law IDEA 2004 and Massachusetts Special Education Regulations 603 CMR 28.0, are in the process of conducting "Child Find." The school department is seeking children with suspected disabilities residing in Cohasset who may be in need of special education services.

The Cohasset Public Schools will evaluate students from age 3 through high school age who are unable to progress effectively in a regular education program due to a suspected disability in one of the following areas: developmental or intellectual delay, sensory, neurological, emotional, communication, physical, specific learning disability, or health impairment. Cohasset Public Schools will also arrange for an evaluation of young people ages 6 to 21 who have not graduated from high school and who are not now attending school.

In addition, screenings for 3 to 5 year olds are held the third Friday of each month at Osgood School. Call the integrated preschool staff at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Cohasset provides all children with an opportunity to participate in the public school programs using a continuous and systematic process to identify students in need of special education. All programs and services are offered without regard to color, race, sex, religion, national origin, sexual orientation or disability.

If you have a child who you suspect may have a disability or know a child with a disability who may be in need of special education services, call the director of student services, Dr. Denise Messina, at 781-383-6104 for information regarding the referral process.

Wreath sales to benefit scholarship fund

The Cohasset METCO Committee will again be selling beautiful, double-sided fresh holiday wreaths. The cost of the wreaths are $10 each. Proceeds of the wreath sale support the Cohasset METCO Scholarship Fund. The wreaths are preordered then picked up at the Village Fair on Dec.4.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

HAPPY THANKSGIVING!

Hello Cohasset. Looks like we are in for some cooler weather this upcoming week as we get ready to enjoy Thanksgiving with family, friends, football and food, along with some much needed time to slow down a bit and remember all that we are thankful for within our lives. I would like to wish everyone a very happy Thanksgiving and a wonderful start to the holiday season, regardless of what holidays you and your family celebrate. While we are all enjoying our celebrations, I think we should also take the time to look around and see what could be done to help others who may not be as fortunate due to health, being alone or just needing a "pick-me-up" and a bit of warmth in their lives.

Whether a donation to a local food pantry, a surprise meal or dessert dropped off or a handmade card by your children, those small gifts in life can mean the most. Please note that next week, due to the holiday is an early deadline so please have all your news, celebration info and upcoming events to me no later than Monday by 5 pm. You can do so by sending the information/photos to aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com or by mail to Around Town Cohasset, c/o Jen Piepenbrink, 622 CJC Highway, Cohasset. Happy Thanksgiving to all

Pitching in for the Cohasset Food Pantry

Raffle sponsored by 11-year-old Jenny Wolfe

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Eleven-year-old Jenny Wolfe saw a need and didn't sit on the sidelines. She took action, and is asking others to do the same.

Two weeks ago, her father, Sandy, pointed out a Mariner article about the struggles facing the Cohasset Food Pantry. The pantry was serving more people while receiving fewer donations.

"I saw that they were running out of food and I knew I just didn't want to only donate a few bags of food. I wanted to have some sort of thing to encourage other people to donate," Jenny said, a sixth-grader at the middle school.

After tossing around ideas with her parents, she came up with the idea for a raffle.

She and her parents purchased a $200 gift certificate for Feng Shui Restaurant and brought it to Jane Corry, co-director of the food pantry. Entrance into the raffle is simple: a donation of five pantry items gets you a raffle ticket.

"I saw that they were running out of food and I knew I just didn't want to only donate a few bags of food. I wanted to have some sort of thing to encourage other people to donate."
Jenny Wolfe

She e-mailed her friends to let them know how they could help the pantry, and possibly win a gift certificate. Jenny said they were excited at the prospect of the gift certificate and were willing to help. She has mentioned it to different classmates at lunch as well.

To aid in her effort, Jenny cleared out a space in her family's garage where the pantry items could be dropped off during the afternoons. A clear box holds some of the donations she has received so far.

"I really want to get 200 items donated," Jenny said. She added if she is able to collect 200 pantry items it would match the amount on the gift certificate.

Jenny has some history with volunteering.

She had donated to the Home for Little Wanderers gift drive, the Cohasset Food Pantry and made blankets for elderly. Her dad says she has a "big heart."

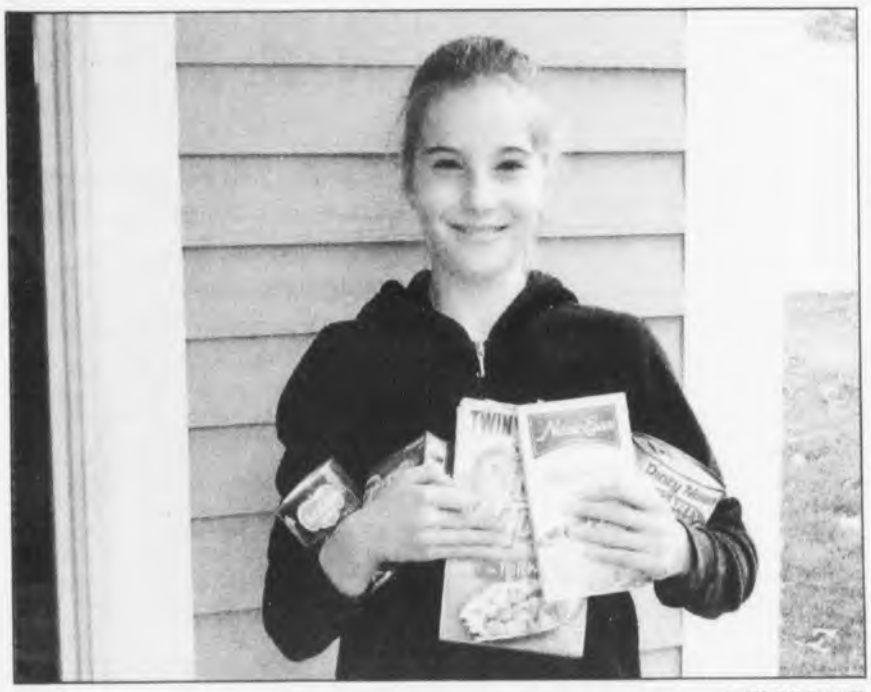
Knowing that neighbors in town are struggling makes her realize how fortunate she is.

"I know a lot of people don't really get to have the life I do," Jenny said. "If I don't want to finish what my mom serves me because I don't like it I don't have to finish it. Some people don't get the chance to say that. It's upsetting."

The Food Pantry will choose the raffle winner on Tuesday, Nov. 30.

Jenny is hopeful donations will continue throughout the holiday season and beyond.

There are several locations to drop donations. To be entered in the raffle residents are asked to bring at least five pantry items to the food pantry at St. Anthony's Rectory on Tuesday morning from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. Jenny has also set up an area in her garage at 46 Elm Court to accept donations from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday for the next two weeks.



In exchange for the donations a raffle ticket will be given. The police and fire station are also accepting donations.

For more information on what the needs of the Cohasset Food Pantry are, see related sidebar.

Help the Cohasset Food Pantry

The non-denominational Cohasset Food Pantry welcomes donations of nearly all pantry staples. The list below includes many of the items that are collected and distributed quickly and therefore their donation is in constant need.

Donations can be dropped off at the rear entrance of St. Anthony's Rectory on South Main St. from 8:30 to 9:30a.m. on Tuesdays, at Stop & Shop, or at local churches on Sundays. To give a monetary donation, the food pantry mailing address is Cohasset Food Pantry, P.O. Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025.

"We are overwhelmed by the generous outpouring of donations we have received," said Jane Corry, co-director of the food pantry. With help from the community the Thanksgiving boxes are nearly complete.

"We are overjoyed that families in need will have a wonderful holiday meal," Corry said.

Because of Thanksgiving preparations the food pantry will be open Monday for donations from 8:30 to 11a.m. and 2 to 5p.m.

Saint Anthony Parish Center and the police and fire station will also accept food pantry donations.

Because the food pantry is serving so many clients they are in constant need of items. Below is a list of current needs:

Democratic Town Committee hosts Movie Night

"Food Inc." describes how the influence of multinational, corporate money affects the food people are encouraged by it's advertising to eat.

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will show a film nominated for best documentary in 2008, "Food Inc.," at 7 p.m., on Friday, Nov. 19, in the Meeting Room of Paul Pratt Library. There is no charge for this event. All are welcome.

"Food Inc." describes how the influence of multinational, corporate money affects the food people are encouraged by it's advertising to eat. The film's director, Robert Kenner, takes the audience to industrial feedlots where cattle are crammed into lots standing in their own waste awaiting slaughter. Kenner demonstrates how big businesses influence food production, outspending their competitors by billions, sometimes with federally subsidized dollars. The movie also takes a look at animal abuse and the health effects of fast food on those for whom fast food is sometimes a mainstay. This 93-minute documentary also draws on the knowledge of "locavore enthusiast" Michal Pallan, author of "In Defense of Food" and "The Omnivores Dilemma." Pallan is one of the films producers. Kenner acknowledges the people who continue to try to reform the food industry, which is often made up of monopolies using questionable interpretations of the laws governing the food industry and rely on political ties and subsidies in guiding their industrial practices.

Over worked stage manager Tim Allgood (Woody Farrick) enters stage right during the CDC production of "Noises Off!" that continues this weekend.

'Noises Off!' continues this weekend

Cohasset Dramatic Club has kicked off its 90th season with the farce "Noises Off!" at Cohasset Town Hall Theater.

Tony Award winner Michael Frayn's "Noises Off!" is not one play but two. A cast of second-rate actors is in the midst of final rehearsals for their upcoming flop, "Nothing's On," while an even worse nightmare is going on backstage.

Audience members will witness the frenzied action on stage and behind the scenes as everything spins with hilarity. In the end the two collide into a single classically comic play.

Directed by Lisa Pratt of Cohasset, "Noises Off!" stars Mark Bono of Milton, Cecelia Chapman of Cohasset, Jessica Corey of Weymouth, Woody Farrick of Boston, Chris Hetherington of Scituate, Dan Kirichok of Brockton, Cathy Larson of Milton, Sarah Rocca of Weymouth and Bill White of Scituate.

"Noises Off!" continues at the Cohasset Town Hall Theater, 41 Highland Ave., Friday and Saturday, Nov. 19 and 20 at 7:30 p.m., and matinees on Sunday, Nov. 21, at 2 p.m. Tickets are $16 for general admission, group discount available upon request. Tickets can be purchased at Paperscapes in Cohasset Village, Buttonwood Books on CJC Highway, Cohasset, by reservation at 617-697-2115, or at the door. Looking ahead to new terms

Hedlund, Bradley discuss the next two years

By Micah Flores
MFLORES@CNC.COM

The incumbents are back, and they're already looking ahead to the next two years.

With the Nov. 2 election now complete, Cohasset's representatives in the state Legislature — Republican state Sen. Bob Hedlund of Weymouth and Democratic state Rep. Garrett Bradley of Hingham — took time to reflect on the recent past and what it all might mean for the future.

Hedlund, one of four Republican state senators out of 40 on Beacon Hill after winning re-election against independent Paul Kearney, said he saw the current "36-4 situation as being incredibly unhealthy."

"Under the current rules in the Senate, that's not even enough members to force a recorded vote," he said, noting that when he was first elected to the Senate, he was one of 16 Republicans.

Touching on his party's new majority in the U.S. House, Hedlund said the power shift was a sign of voter frustration and anger with the direction in which the country is heading.

"People are concerned about spending, the debt that we're saddling future generations with," he said, adding that political stalemate in Washington, D.C., could be effective in that it would at least stymie Democratic policies. "If everything that seems to come out of Washington is bad, that might not be a bad thing. Does that mean more increases in the federal national debt might not happen? That's fine by me."

Hedlund, having considered running for the 10th Congressional seat picked up by Democratic Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating, still believes he would have been a good candidate.

"I would have been in pretty good shape in the Congressional race had I run this time around," he said.

Looking to Massachusetts, Hedlund, doubtful that the state's continued blue status would improve affairs, said passage of the fiscal 2012 budget would be the next big challenge.

"It's probably the most difficult budget that I've been involved in," he said, adding that unlike recent difficult budgets, lawmakers won't be working with rainy day funds or added stimulus money. "That's going to be huge in terms of protecting local aid, which is my focus."

Along with continuing to push for the construction of key capital projects in his district, including the Fore River Bridge in Weymouth, Hedlund said he would also focus on doing his part on the groundfish stock issue and the federal regulations he said threaten Marshfield's commercial fishing industry.

Referring to past immigration reform efforts meant to prevent illegal immigrants from accessing public assistance in the state, Hedlund said he would again start from square one on the matter.

"Everyone talks about the Perry Amendment (which would have prevented illegal immigrants from receiving public benefits), but the Hedlund Amendment is a much more comprehensive package," he said.

Referring to his amendment as full of "common-sense stuff," Hedlund said it would impose harsher limits on illegal immigrants seeking social service benefits like public housing and the state's health insurance program. Although it was bipartisan in that it passed the Senate 28-10, Hedlund said the amendment did not make it to the House.

Lastly, just as Chapter 40B, the state's affordable housing law, is here to stay after a ballot question to revoke it failed during the election, so will remain Hedlund's attempts at fixing the law.

"I've been the lead guy on a lot of reform issues," he said. "Some have gotten through the Senate. Hopefully we can work with other party and get some stuff through."

Bradley

Citing job creation as the "No. 1 focus," Bradley said assisting municipalities in getting a grip on rising health insurance costs and helping with the implementation of federal Race To The Top education dollars were all important.

Bradley, sponsor of the Right to Repair bill, said he planned on again filing the legislation, hoping to see the day when Massachusetts residents could use the repair shop of their choice. The bill would require auto manufacturers to make available to independent garages and consumers the same repair information and diagnostic tools that they provide to their franchised new car dealer service centers for a similar price.

Although Bradley said the bill passed the Senate, it did not pass the House.

Bradley, who defeated Republican Tim Finnerty and independent Carlton Chambers Nov. 2, attributed his party's dominance of the state election in part to what he said was the "genius" of state Democratic chairman John Walsh and the grassroots effort aimed at re-energizing the party's base after the January election of Republican U.S. Sen. Scott Brown.

"We made some phone calls, but mostly put people in the field where they could knock on doors," he said.

Bradley referred to the U.S. House Republican takeover as a natural cycle, a symptom of voter anxiety and overall frustration with the government.

"They're looking for people of all parties to work together," he said. "They're frustrated with what's happened. The Republicans may be in charge of the (U.S.) House, but if they don't get anything done they'll be out again."

Who Else Wants To Lose 12-30 lbs. In 12 Weeks Or Less?

"I genuinely enjoy going to the studio and feel wonderful when I leave."

I was a three sport athlete in high school, physically active throughout college. Over the past few years I had noticeably gained weight. My confidence was steadily lowering and I knew I had to do something. Since joining Get In Shape I have lost 20 pounds and 15 inches. This is the best thing I have ever done for myself.

Turkey Hill turbine

from the Town of Hingham.

With large structures like a wind turbine there are impacts on the surrounding homes and community. Visual aspects, noise and the possibility of shadow flicker are some of the big issues.

The Trustees created photo simulations of how they turbine would look from various points in the surrounding towns. From Sandy Beach, the turbine was a distant vision. From the Cohasset Golf Course, the turbine could be clearly seen. In most of Cohasset and Hingham tree cover will shield the turbine from most points of view.

Acoustical engineer Chris Menge said his analysis showed the noise impacts met the bylaw and state requirements. The state calls for no more than a 10-decibel increase over ambient noise at a property line, or closest residence.

The Golden Living community off Route 3A is the nearest residence and noise could increase about six decibels at a moderate wind speed (11 miles per hour).

"We do not expect significant noise impacts on the community as a result of the turbine," Menge said.

Next up, the Trustees address shadow flicker, a strobing effect produced when the sun passes behind the blades of the turbine — and it could potentially affect the residents and business within roughly 1,000-meters of the turbine during certain times of the day, during certain times of the year.

Dennis Laria, a mechanical engineer consulting on the project, said did not expect any of the nearby residences to exceed more than 30 hours of shadow flicker each year, an industry standard.

Laria said the Trustees have met with Golden Living and they are in support of the project.

The turbine would connect to the electric grid via a pole on Route 3A.

This is the second time it has considered a wind turbine project. In 2008 and 2009, the planning board considered, and ultimately denied, an application for two 100-meter turbines off Route 3A near Hingham Lumber. A private developer, CCI-Energy, brought the proposal forth.

"Hopefully we're all a little smarter and this can move along," said Planning Board Chairman Al Moore.

The hearing was continued until Wednesday, Dec. 8 at 7:30p.m. The entire Trustees of Reservation project application can be viewed at the Planning Board office at Town Hall.

Sky is the limit for O'Donnell

In the sci-fi thriller "Skyline," strange lights descend on the city of Los Angeles, drawing people outside like moths to a flame. Once outdoors, a terrifying extraterrestrial force begins to swallow the entire human population off the face of the Earth.

The part science fiction-part horror-part action movie did fairly well at the box office in its opening weekend, but not so great with the critics. The movie made more than $11.6 million nationally and was the number four top grossing movie in the country over this past weekend.

The movie, which took just over a year to make from concept to release, cost about $10 million to produce, O'Donnell said.

O'Donnell has been living in LA and working in the entertainment industry for several years. He headed out west after graduating from college with the aim of taking a year off of school before heading to law school to become an entertainment lawyer.

"I loved the weather and the vibe. I liked the West Coast feel of having the ability to make your own way in the world," O'Donnell said.

It didn't happen right away, but he started making connections and writing for a living. While he struggled to find work in the beginning, he kept at it.

He began writing treatments, the industry term for the concept and basic storyline for a movie or other production (TV commercials, music videos), noting, "it's basically the means to really sell an idea."

COURTESY PHOTO

Liam O'Donnell and his wife, Phet attend a promotion party for the movie "Skyline" in advance of its release. O'Donnell has screenwriter and producer credits on the sci-fi film.

He became friends with two brothers, Greg and Colin Strause, special effects masterminds, and was the first writer on their staff.

"That time really gave me the confidence and courage to be a writer," O'Donnell said.

At the Brothers Strause's company Hydraulx, the visual effects company behind movies like "300," "2012" and "Avatar," he helped develop concepts. He worked on music videos for Usher and 50 Cent. He was involved with ad campaigns for Gatorade and Coca-Cola.

They began to think about feature films and developing a movie internally. Lots of ideas were tossed around.

Test footage was filmed for a script called "War of the Ages" where famous generals from throughout history come together to battle. The expense of production put that project on hold.

But, then "Skyline" came along. The team figured out the movie could be filmed in one location, a penthouse apartment in Marina Del Rey.

The movie came together in a very short time with just about a year's difference from concept to movie release. "It really is a startling turnaround."

O'Donnell co-wrote the movie with Joshua Cordes and, he said, their styles complemented each other, "I'm more fascinated with the epic, while he was more focused on creating claustrophobia," O'Donnell said.

O'Donnell's parents, Kevin and Donna, brother Kevin, and friends came out to California for the premiere last week. A blue carpet, to complement the movie's eerie blue light, welcomed the VIPs to the movie premiere.

"I made this movie with my best friends. It's overwhelming in a way. We all did this together, we're all really proud of it, and we're excited to see how it does. It's a dream come true," he said. The group went to see the movie again at the Chinese Theatre in LA on Friday night. "It's all out of my control now."

Amidst the moviemaking chaos O'Donnell and his wife, Phet also welcomed their first child—a son, Ronan, last September.

"If there is anyone I need to thank it's my wife, Phet," O'Donnell said.

Talk has already begun for a sequel to "Skyline," a sequel that will be bigger and more epic than the original, O'Donnell said.

"The best part of the job is I didn't have to grow up past the age of 12. I just have to keep thinking like I used to back in Cohasset, just keeping thinking…what if?" O'Donnell said.

EDITORIAL

Would you please pass the furmity, Governor?

"Would you please pass the furmity, Governor?"

"You boiled it just right in the pipkin, Mary."

"I'll have a little more aqua vita, Susanna."

It's possible the conversation went a bit like this that first Thanksgiving Day in Plimoth so many years ago.

About 140 people sat at the three-day harvest: 90 Indians and 50 Pilgrims.

If you happen to be the cook and you think that you're going to work hard next Thursday, keep in mind that at the first Thanksgiving, only four women did all the cooking.

They roasted wildfowl, turkeys, and deer in English fashion. They boiled cod and sea bass in Indian tradition.

They cooked breads and fruit tarts in a skillet over an open fire.

For dessert, they made furmity by beating wet wheat in a sack with a washbeetle, boiling it overnight, soaking it on a fire, boiling it in cream in a pipkin, then topping it with sugar.

Their guests were not worried about their cholesterol level or the fat content in the food.

They ate to their hearts' content and then washed it all down with beer called aqua vita.

They scooped food from wooden bowls with their hands.

There were knives and a few spoons, but no forks.

Huge napkins were very important.

It was a whole year after the Pilgrims first put their tattered boots on Plimoth Rock before the first Thanksgiving.

Their tiny and overcrowded Mayflower had tossed like a toy boat upon the fierce Atlantic waves for two months.

Their trip had been stormy and long.

Their arrival was dismal and discouraging.

The first winter saw more than half their number starve or freeze to death.

Their first harvest was a disaster, but in the second year, with the help of the Indians, their fields bore fruit.

Instead of saying "It's about time, God," they thanked Him for His blessing.

It is now over three and a half centuries later.

We'll go a-hunting in a well-stocked supermarket and spear our frozen turkey with icy fingers.

Instead of checking our meat for arrowheads, we'll read the labels for the fat and MSG content.

Instead of cooking herbs and roots for days, we might pop a pouch of peas in boiling water.

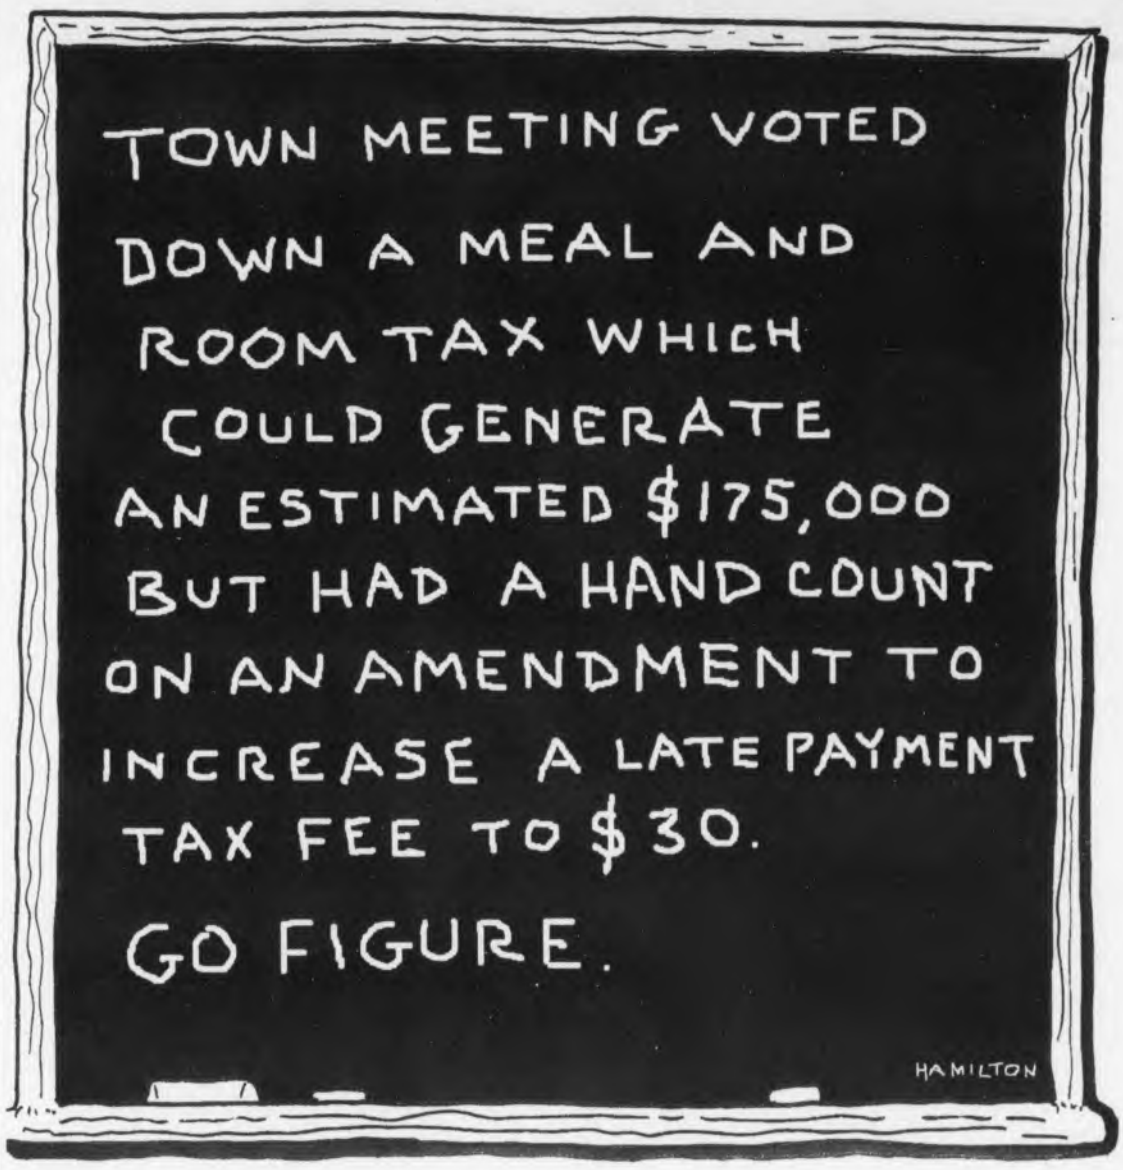
Instead of skillet baked bread, we might brown and serve some rolls.

Instead of beating wet wheat for furmity, we might heat up a pre-baked apple pie.

But the warmth of Thanksgiving is still the same.

We ask nothing more from it than a Skippers win over the Hull Pirates in the morning, a perfect turkey dinner with a loving family in the afternoon, and a feeling of contentment with life in the evening.

We need the peace of Thanksgiving more than ever in these troubled times.



Happy Thanksgiving.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

What is the debate about?

TO THE EDITOR:

An interesting juxtaposition in last week's Mariner: The Budget Planning group approved a $10 increase in our sticker fees. This will raise a whopping $7,500 in additional revenue to the town. The Water Department has the opportunity to sign contracts with an annual value of $40,000 at no cost to town residents. The former is merely a wealth transfer from residents to the town, essentially a tax, and the latter is a wealth transfer from an outside entity to a town department, essentially a no-cost windfall that will have the added benefit of improving a necessary service that we all rely on. So with respect to the cell antennae on Bear Hill, what is the debate about exactly?

Make a Difference Day

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset PTA had 19 families sign-up to rake lawns for elders in town. Kelli Gilday coordinated the effort and linked the families with an elder during Saturday, Nov. 13 and Sunday, Nov. 14. This effort is part of "Make a Difference Day," which teaches children to help others in the community.

Elders in the community are very grateful for performing a task that has become very difficult for them in their later years. Thank you helping elders in our town.

Ledge complicates lowering of pipes

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Paving Progress on Little Harbor Project — Monday morning, bright and early, TL Edwards rolled into town to start another segment of paving on the Little Harbor Project. The plan, as the week started, was to pave the side roads along Atlantic Avenue, then pave Atlantic itself. As we write this on Wednesday of this week, we canceled paving for today based on the forecast of rain. We do expect to pick up again with paving on Atlantic and Jerusalem on Thursday and Friday of this week. Again, by the time you read this you will know whether we were successful.

There is a relatively big deal that crept up on us this week that will have an impact on how the paving on Jerusalem is done. On Tuesday, we met with LM Holdings (the contractors for the Little Harbor Sewer Project) on Jerusalem Road near the Sisters of St. Joseph's facility to look at a drainage issue. Without going into too much detail, such that your eyes will glaze over, here's what we found. It appears that a section of drainage pipe about 50 feet long that goes from a manhole in the middle of Jerusalem Road to a storm water clean-up device (or, BMP), also in the road, is about a foot and a half too high. So, the storm water doesn't go where it is supposed to go.

In addition there is another pipe that goes from the BMP to a catch basin that ultimately outflows to the ocean that is also too high. So what does this mean? Well, both pipes will need to be dug up and lowered to the necessary depth required to get the correct storm water flows. This is particularly difficult because, as those of you who live in this neighborhood can attest, there is a lot of ledge in this area. It is very likely that large rock hammers will be required to fracture the underlying ledge so that these pipes can be lowered. There are several consequences to this additional work. The first is that traffic in this area will be restricted and the road will be narrowed during the construction. It also, means that the paving cannot be done in this immediate area until the construction is complete. Also, there is likely to be more construction noise in a neighborhood that probably thought the construction was over.

You might ask how this happened. Well, we can't pinpoint it exactly. However, as we've said before, this is not a perfect world and errors do get made. Construction projects, as much as we'd like them to be, are rarely perfect. It's just good that this was caught now, rather than after the paving was finished. It is expected that the construction could start as early as this current week and could take one to two weeks to complete. We will keep you up to date as work progresses.

Meetinghouse Pond — On Thursday a week ago, the contractor was able to pour concrete into the forms to create the new wall and sidewalk for approximately half of Meetinghouse Pond. The concrete supplier came with a concrete pump truck so that they could park. From a single spot they could reach all of the area that was ready for the concrete. The pump truck is a sight to behold. As you can see from the photo, the cement delivery truck pulled up to the pump truck and aimed its delivery chute toward the pump truck. The pump truck then takes the concrete and pumps it through a long adjustable arm. The operator can position the chute in any position via a joystick not unlike a video game controller. I guess you could say it's sort of a "guy toy."

As we mentioned last week, the cement was deposited in "lifts," that is, six to 12 inches at a time. Then enough time was let lapse before the next pour to let the concrete start to set up. This way the forms do not need to support the weight of the whole wall of runny concrete. They only need to support the weight of the last lift.

After the concrete set up, the forms were removed. Viola! We now have a portion of new wall and sidewalk. We expect that the remaining portion of the wall will be poured early next week, weather permitting.

HEALTH NOTES

Tips for having a healthy holiday

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

We all know the rules we're supposed to follow during the holidays. You know: keep away from contaminated food, clean hands and other elements of personal hygiene, but probably more important is to keep away from impulse eating. Nobody ever speaks of the chocolate casually picked up walking by a table with sweets or the quick taste of a goodie in the kitchen. Fetching descriptions in menus and supermarket shelves all have allure which if not diet breakers, certainly can put on some casual pounds. The natural conclusion from impulse eating is growing waistlines and eventually the appearance of symptoms of diabetes. It's not always easy to practice forbearance during the holidays and not even usually necessary. But it's important to remember not to carry such habits into the new year. Reports of a 20-something or even younger with coronary artery disease although not common, are showing up in disturbingly larger numbers.

As the holidays approach we like to celebrate by entertaining friends and family, throwing parties and preparing feasts. From the buffet table to the office party, food moves center stage throughout the holiday season. So, in order to avoid a dyspeptic December, keep food safe by using the following good sense food safety practices for holiday meals:

• Clean: Wash hands and food-contact surfaces often. Bacteria can spread throughout the kitchen and get onto cutting boards, knives, sponges and counter tops.

• Separate and don't cross-contaminate — avoid allowing bacteria to spread from one food product to another; especially true for raw meat, poultry and seafood. Keep such foods and their juices away from ready-to-eat foods.

• Cook to proper temperatures. Foods are properly cooked when heated for a long enough time and at a high (>160 f) temperature to kill the harmful bacteria that cause food borne illnesses.

• Chill: Refrigerate promptly. Refrigerating foods quickly keeps most harmful bacteria from growing and multiplying. Refrigerators should be set at 40 F and the freezer at 0 F. Accuracy of the settings should be checked occasionally with a thermometer.

• Friends, family or at the mall: Holidays are also the time we meet more people. Remember how germs are transmitted. Illnesses like the flu and colds are caused by viruses that infect the nose, throat and lungs. Flu and colds usually spread from person to person when an infected person coughs or sneezes. Take care to:

• Clean your hands often. When available, wash your hands — with soap and warm water — then rub your hands vigorously together and scrub all surfaces. Wash for 15 to 20 seconds. The soap combined with the scrubbing action helps dislodge and remove germs.

• When soap and water are not available, use alcohol-based disposable hand wipes or gel sanitizers found in most supermarkets and drugstores. If using a gel, rub it into your hands until they are dry. The gel doesn't need water to work; alcohol in the gel kills germs that cause colds and the flu.

• Cough or sneeze into a tissue and then throw it away. Cover your cough or sneeze if you do not have a tissue. Then, clean your hands, and do so every time you cough or sneeze.

• Avoid close contact & stay home if you're sick

• Avoid touching your eyes, nose, or mouth. Germs are often spread when a person touches something contaminated with germs, then touches their eyes, nose or mouth. Germs can live for a long time (some can live for 2 hours or more) on surfaces like doorknobs, desks and tables.

• ractice other good health habits. Be physically active, manage your stress, drink plenty of fluids, and eat nutritious food. Practicing healthy habits will help you stay healthy during flu season and all year long.

Participate in all decisions about your general health and its treatment. You are in charge, so have a healthy happy holiday.

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE SMULLEN

So far this month we've had typical New England weather, sometimes warm, sometimes nippy, and a good old northeaster with much rain and terrific wind — everything but ice and snow to which I for one no longer look forward. However, I know there are skaters and skiers who do.

Our luncheons have been well attended, but there is always room for more. They are served every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday except for holidays and extreme weather. If you do not drive, the CEA will provide transportation. Just call 781-383-9112 a day or two ahead to make a reservation. We have several local chefs who graciously cook meals for us. We are so fortunate and cannot thank them enough.

The Thursday before Halloween the seniors celebrated with the party. Several came in costume, and a good time was enjoyed by all. Prizes for costumes were awarded to Pat Sargent, Audrey Poe, Rosemarie Engel-Conn, Tilly Nardo, and Aylsa Goodrich.

At one of the seminars Carol Rossick from the Mass. Commission for the Hard of Hearing spoke. She knows well what it means to not be able to hear, as she has been deaf since birth. She cited communication strategies for people with hearing loss and what family members and friends can do to improve communication with the hard of hearing.

At another session Elena Dekkers, MD, spoke concerning the role of the hospitalist. He is well acquainted with patients' problems and is in touch with the hospital patient's PCP and any specialists who are needed.

Last week Peg McDonough of the SHINE program paid a visit. This is the time of year when changes are made in medical insurance programs. Ms. McDonough pointed out changes in Medicare – what it does and does not cover. She also spoke about Medigap insurance and HMO's. She explained the differences in brand name and generic medications. If you need to make a change in your insurance plan, make sure it is done by Dec. 31. If you are a senior and need help with your plan, call to make an appointment with Carol Barrett at 781-383-9112.

A wish to everyone for a happy Thanksgiving with family and friends.

Your call is important to us

FOR THE RECORD

GREGORY MATHIS

Remember the good old days, when you could pick up the phone and talk to a real person on the other end and get an answer to your question or have someone listen to your complaint or problem?

These days, it's rare to get someone to even answer a phone, especially since we have the ability to screen calls with caller ID. We spend so much of our time communicating by leaving voicemail messages or sending e-mails, which hardly ever gets you a timely response to your question or concern.

That's particularly troublesome in our business, because the caller on the other end may have a great tip for a news story or could be trying to inform us about a building engulfed in flames or a bad car accident at a busy intersection.

Often, though, we get calls that have nothing to do with the editorial functions of the newspapers and websites. In this age of specialization, we have many different departments, sometimes in different buildings in different parts of the state that handle the various aspects of the business. Gone are the days you could call the publisher or the editor-in-chief to clear up every issue from home delivery of the newspaper to ad rates.

Our names and phone numbers are prominently displayed in the newspaper and on the website, so it makes sense to go to the "Contact Us" information and start with the name and number at the top and work your way down until you get someone to help you.

It sounds good in theory, but it could lead to getting transferred numerous times and still not having a real person to speak with on the other end of the line.

It's not that we don't want to help the customer, but truthfully we don't know many of the answers to your questions about advertising, circulation, or printing press-related issues.

Our area of expertise is news. We welcome calls about events coming up in the community, a possible news story you'd like to see done, a big fire in the center of town. We even welcome calls pointing out factual errors or typos in stories.

On the other hand ...

We can't tell you why you're getting more newsprint on your hands now compared to last year or even last week, although it is a very good question.

We're not exactly sure why you didn't get your newspaper in the mail or why it was thrown in your driveway and has now jammed and ruined your snow blower.

What we can tell you is the sticky ad on the front page has to go there because some machine in the press room stamps it in that spot automatically, even if it is covering an award-winning photograph. Beyond that, we can't offer any other answer.

Unfortunately we can't help you get your yard sale announced (although that season is now over) or we can't write up an obituary, as those areas are now handled through our advertising department.

And we certainly cannot address the complaints made to editors and reporters about too many inserts or advertisements in the newspaper or too many annoying ads on the websites. After all, we are a business and those ads and inserts allow us to stay in business.

At any rate, your call is important to us regardless of the issue.

We may not have answers to all of your questions and concerns, but bear with us and we'll do our best to connect you to the people in our company who do.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

Citizen petitions fail

Lots of discussion, little support

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Citizens brought forward the last two articles on the special Town Meeting warrant Nov. 15.

Despite the inherent support required in bringing forward a citizen petition — 100 signatures are necessary to get an article on the warrant — neither article was able to attain the needed majorities for approval.

One article proposed a zoning change that would allow a Route 3A business to build an indoor pool on residentially zoned land. The other sought more oversight for the water department, especially when it came to expenditures.

In both cases, Town Meeting raised questions that may have convinced other voters that the ideas presented were not ready for prime time.

The last article on the warrant concerned the water department and a need for more oversight by selectmen. The written language of the motion for the article was not available and had to be read aloud.

The purpose of the initial article was to have selectmen pursue decision-making authority over the Water Commissioners' charge and control of the water department, especially regarding expenses. Michael Ronzoni of Reservoir Road, one of the proponents of the petition, said the water users in the town were not getting what they paid for.

"We have the highest rates of water on the South Shore, if not in Massachusetts and what is coming out of our taps is substandard. Our high rates are due to the mismanagement of the department and the lack of oversight and accountability," Ronzoni said.

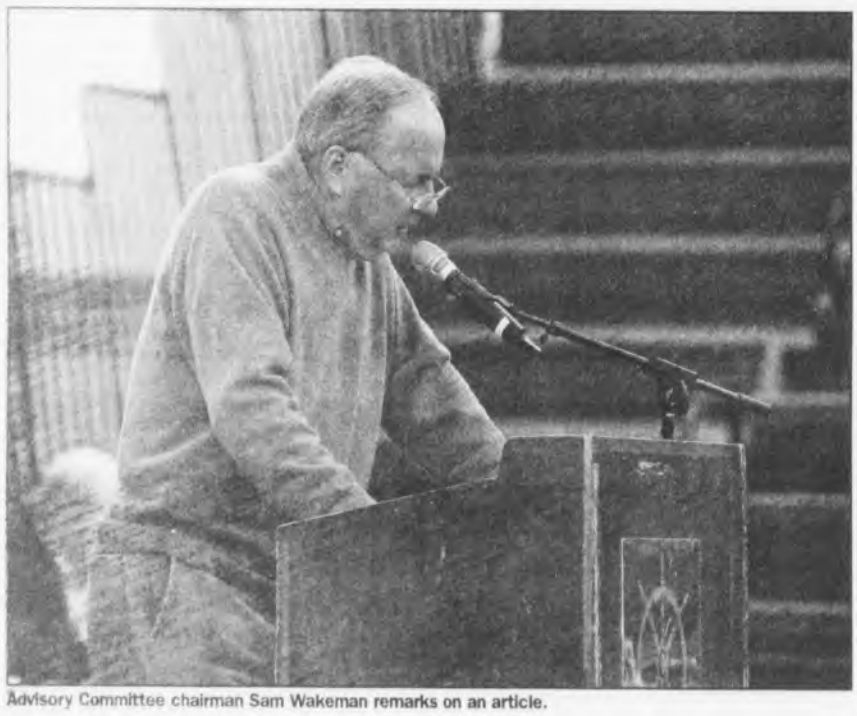
The motion proposed three things: requesting selectmen to draft appropriate instructions, rules and regulations to limit — to the extent legally permissible — the water commission's and water department's control and authority, especially when it came to expenses, to consider the findings of the water audit in these rules and regulations; and to come back to annual Town Meeting in March to further address the water department's structure and oversight.

The majority of the speakers on this article felt the timing was not right for something like this to be implemented.

"At this point it makes no sense. We have a detailed audit coming out in a few weeks," said Sam Wakeman, chairman of the Advisory Committee.

Leonora Jenkins of Jerusalem Road said the situation reminded her of one six years ago when the schools were in dire financial straits. At that time, two citizens petitions were passed amending the town bylaws to make a presentation of a finance report from the director of finance a monthly occurrence.

"We should demand enforcement of the bylaw that was passed five years ago," Jenkins said.



Peter Whittemore of Elm Court said he agreed with the petitioners' intent and wanted to see increased oversight over the water commission.

"There are ongoing contract negotiations that I consider totally off the reservation (for a water department)," Whittemore said, adding he wanted to be sure the water commissioners did not overstep their bounds.

Police Chief Mark Deluca watches the special Town Meeting proceedings with Lt. Bill Quigley, Detective Garrett Hunt and Sgt. Jeff Treanor.

Advisory Committee chairman Sam Wakeman remarks on an article.

Andrew Willard of Stockbridge Street said the language of the motion was significantly different than the language in the warrant article and, for that reason, he was not in support of it.

The article was defeated by a majority vote.

Zoning amendment falls

Scituate Racquet Club would like to build a six-lane indoor Olympic-size swimming pool as part of its complex. The club, which is located on the Route 3A Cohasset-Scituate border, owns land in Cohasset that is zoned residential and therefore under current zoning, a commercial pool cannot be built there.

An amendment to the zoning bylaws submitted through a citizens petition would have allowed commercial and membership sports and recreational facilities in a residential district by special permit. While it didn't seem like anyone had an issue with the building of a swimming pool in this area, residents did express concern about what was possible in other areas as a result of this zoning change, in spite of the argument that there would be a special permit process before the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Some mentioned the Roy Estate mansion, also known as "The Oaks," on the harbor and 25 Ripley Road as an example of properties where a membership facility could come in if the article passed.

"This seems like a wide sweeping change to zoning. There has to be a narrower approach to getting this done," said David McMorris of Doane Street.

However, Bob Sturdy of Jerusalem Road, a former longtime member of the Planning Board, believed the article was appropriate.

"(The zoning board of appeals) is a pretty tight group (when it comes to special permits) and even that doesn't limit an appeal process," Sturdy said, adding the only alternative would be to do a narrower approach and that could be tantamount to spot zoning. "A special permit process is not a slam dunk by an stretch of the imagination."

Mike Milanoski of South Main Street proposed an amendment to get more specific to the project area. Instead of creating a special permit opportunity in all residential districts, he proposed creating a special permit for just the residential district where the pool would be located (the town has three residential designations).

The amendment failed to get majority support and shortly after the main motion was defeated.

Septic assistance turned down

Too many questions about state-run program

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Moderator Dan Evans moves through the town's business.

Help for those with failing septic systems was not in the cards at special Town Meeting Nov. 15, as voters turned down a Board of Health proposal to join a state-run betterment program that allows communities to loan money to property owners for sewer improvements so the expense can be paid back over time, with interest.

The program could have provided assistance to those not on the town sewer or hooking into the town sewer in Little Harbor, with the only cost to the people taking on the loans, but some town officials questioned the program's impact on the town's debt service obligation.

The Community Septic Management Program is a state-run program that provides towns loans through a state revolving fund at zero percent interest. Through an application process, the town then re-loans the money out to homeowners at a 2 percent interest rate.

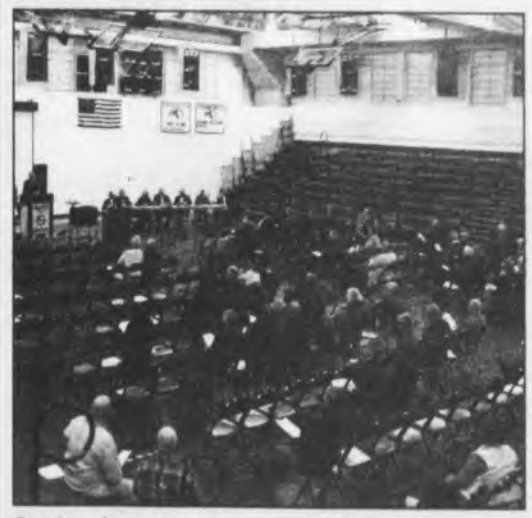
The loans can be used for the repair, replacement or upgrade of a failed on-site system. On-site sewage disposal system options include conventional septic systems (Title 5), innovative/alternative systems and connections to an existing sewer, if available. The homeowners then pay back the loan over 20 years, and the loan is transferable if the property is sold.

The homeowner receiving the betterment loans undertakes the primary repayment obligation. A municipal lien is placed on a property if the participating homeowner defaults.

Peggy Chapman, chair of the Board of Health, said the program did not change any town taxes and could assist up to 10 or 15 residents a year. The state would loan the town up to $3 million.

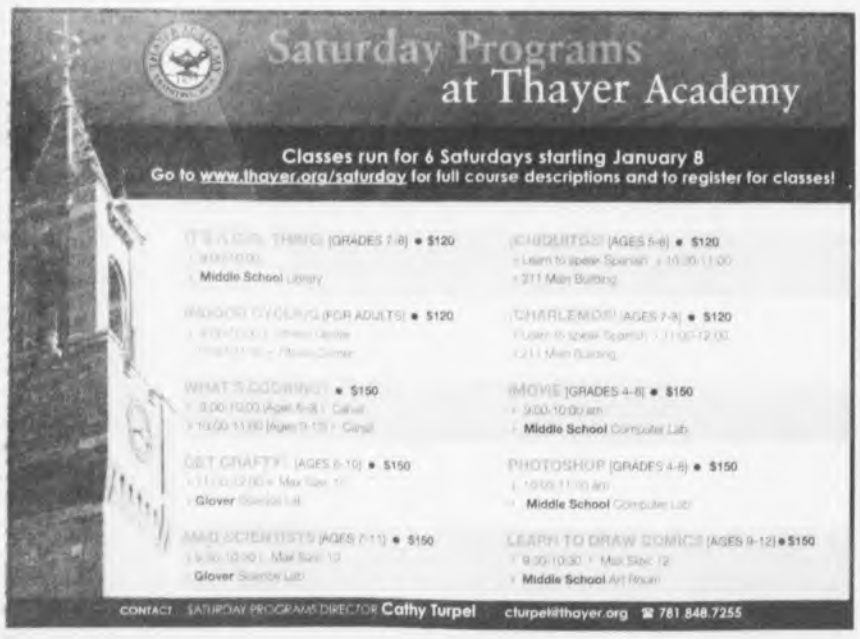
The Board of Health would run the program, but the state provides a $15,000 grant to start the program. Other municipalities contract out to a consultant to administer the program. Pembroke and Hanson have been part of the program for several years.

However, the Advisory Committee recommended indefinite postponement of the article.



"While conceptually we support this program, we don't know the impact of adding a $3 million debt to the town … or exactly how this will be managed," said Sam Wakeman, chair of the Advisory Committee.

Steve Gaumer, chair of the Capital Budget Committee, said this article should have come before his board for review because it results in debt being incurred by the town.



"We get in trouble here if we don't follow process. We end up with issues like Cook Estate and the water department," said Jack Keniley of the Capital Budget Committee.

Wakeman said he seriously questioned the town taking on additional debt at this time until all the issues are vetted.

Andrew Willard of Stockbridge Street said the town should at the very least have assurances that the program will break even on expenses.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

No appetite for new taxes

Road agreed.

"We're trying to encourage local business. I oppose any increase in taxes these days," he said. "(With the meals tax), we're punishing one particular segment of entrepreneurs who are trying to make a living."

Leonora Jenkins questioned the argument that the taxes were merely pennies, roughly 37 cents on a $50 bill, and the annual amount of revenue the town was anticipating receiving from the tax.

"(The town) is expecting to get $100,000 out of your pockets (from this tax)," Jenkins said. "Meanwhile, we have not heard about cutting the budget or doing things more efficiently."

One restaurateur spoke against the tax. Joe Campbell, manager of Atlantica, said his business is already feeling the impact of increased taxes and bills. His water bills have doubled since 2003 and, if the local option meals tax passed, it would have meant a 40 percent increase in sales tax over the last 15 months.

"There isn't a lot of margin in the restaurant business," Campbell said.

The discussion on the rooms occupancy tax was more of the same. Cohasset has two hotels, the Cohasset Harbor Inn and the Red Lion Inn. If approved, a 6 percent tax would have been added to hotel room charges, which was estimated to bring in more than $60,000 a year.

Again, Fitzsimmons said the tax would drive people away from Cohasset.

"An additional tax will deter people from staying in our hotels," he said.

Campbell, who also manages the Cohasset Harbor Inn, said the inn is struggling and losing money every year, but the hotel helps local business.

"People stay in the hotel, go to the shops, eat in our restaurants," he said. "With this tax, we lose that small competitive edge we have on local towns."

Aaron Sawchuk of Beechwood Street said it is primarily Cohasset residents' friends and family who stay in the hotels.

"I don't think its right to ask them to pay more than their proportional share," he said.

Wayne Sawchuk said if this passed, hotels would be subject to an 11.7 percent tax.

"That's the largest state tax imaginable," he said.

Agnes McCann of Doane Street put her argument in a broader context.

"If you don't want to tax individual businesses because that's not fair, please vote for the next override," she said.

Town meeting notes

Water audit coming

The independent audit of the water department is nearing an end. Advisory Committee chairman Sam Wakeman told Town Meeting that the audit has taken longer than anticipated because of the lack of records, invoices and copies of contracts in the town archives. Much of the information needed by the auditors had to be requested from the vendors, he said.

He expected the audit to be complete within the next few weeks.

"To say what has been found or recommended at this point would be irresponsible," Wakeman said.

In a phone interview, Wakeman said there appears to have been a serious misclassification of operating expenses into capital items.

"We'll get to the bottom of it and will get it corrected," Wakeman said, adding while some questioned the need for the audit over the summer, he 100 percent believes now it was the right thing to do.

Amendments to the fiscal 2011 budget

Some adjustments to the current fiscal year budget were required to ensure a balanced budget come the spring. In particular, the town never addressed how it would pay the water department for fire prevention fees, approximately $247,000.

Article 1 addressed this amendment by adding $247,000 to the fire department budget. Multiple accounts will be used to address this new line item. A total of $100,000 will be transferred from free cash generated from a surplus in the fiscal 2010 school budget. Another $100,000 will be transferred from several general operating accounts ($10,000 from town manager general expenses, $20,000 from DPW other appropriations, $60,000 from health insurance general expenses and $10,000 from property and liability general expenses).

In addition, Town Meeting voted to reduce the water department's debt service budget by $53,000.

Town Meeting voters approved the amendments to the budget unanimously.

Police cruiser approved

Town Meeting approved the purchase of a new marked police cruiser at a cost of $31,000. It was the only capital item being requested. Capital Budget Committee chairman Steve Gaumer said the capital budget committee had established a protocol a few years ago to fund the purchase of a new police vehicle once a year. The reasoning was after four years as a front-line cruiser, the maintenance cost skyrockets, making it more economical to purchase a new car.

The retiring cruiser will be repurposed within the town.

The article passed with the required two-thirds majority vote.

Water plant upgrade

Town Meeting approved a $13,000 capital investment for the water treatment plant. Primarily a safety upgrade, the funding will pay for the installation of "day tank" that will only allow a day worth's of chemical to enter the system at any one time.

A resident questioned whether there was a need to do the project right now.

Water Commission chairman Chris Seebeck said it could be delayed, but because it was a safety concern he would rather it be done now. If the water department finished the year in the black, the surplus will go toward paying down capital that has not yet been bonded, Seebeck said.

The capital investment of $13,000 will translate to a 20-cent increase to water users bill each quarter.

The article got its required two-thirds approval vote.

Town Meeting gave selectmen the authority to enter into an easement on the property at 110 Beach St. During redevelopment of the property, a storm drain that leads to inner Little Harbor was found, and as part of the order of conditions the Conservation Commission proposed a rain garden be installed on the property near the storm drain. The cost to build the rain garden was assumed by the property owners and the town will assume the rain garden and storm drain maintenance going forward.

The easement will be drafted with Town Counsel. The property owners are gifting the property and easement to the town. The article passed with the required two-thirds majority vote.

Tax collector's demand fee

Those who don't pay their taxes on time will face a steeper penalty now.

A Town Meeting vote raised the tax collector's demand fee from $5 to $30.

The demand fee is the charge imposed on taxpayers when the tax collector issues a demand for payment of delinquent taxes. The demand fee has held steady at $5 for a number of years.

At Town Meeting, the proposed increase was from $5 to $15, but Roy Fitzsimmons of Doane Street offered an amendment to raise it to $50.

"This is a penalty for not paying taxes. We should make it a penalty to encourage people to pay their taxes on time," Fitzsimmons said.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said raising the fee to $50 was illegal. The statute allows the fee to be raised to $30 at a maximum.

Fitzsimmons changed his amendment accordingly to reflect the $30.

A voice vote on whether to take a vote on the amendment was taken twice at the request of Town Moderator Dan Evans, but he could not clearly hear what side won out. Evans requested a hand count be taken, and the count was 78 in favor of the amendment and 41 opposed.

The vote on whether to approve the article as amended passed with only a handful of opposed.

Proclamation for Bill Griffin

Town Meeting approved a proclamation for former Town Manager Bill Griffin. The proclamation thanked Griffin for his 5 1/2 years of service to the Town of Cohasset. Town Meeting approved the proclamation and the current selectmen, as well as past selectmen, signed the proclamation. Town Meeting gave Griffin a round of applause.

Griffin had planned to attend Town Meeting in case questions arose, but was not able to come after all.

BOYS SOCCER

A fantastic run

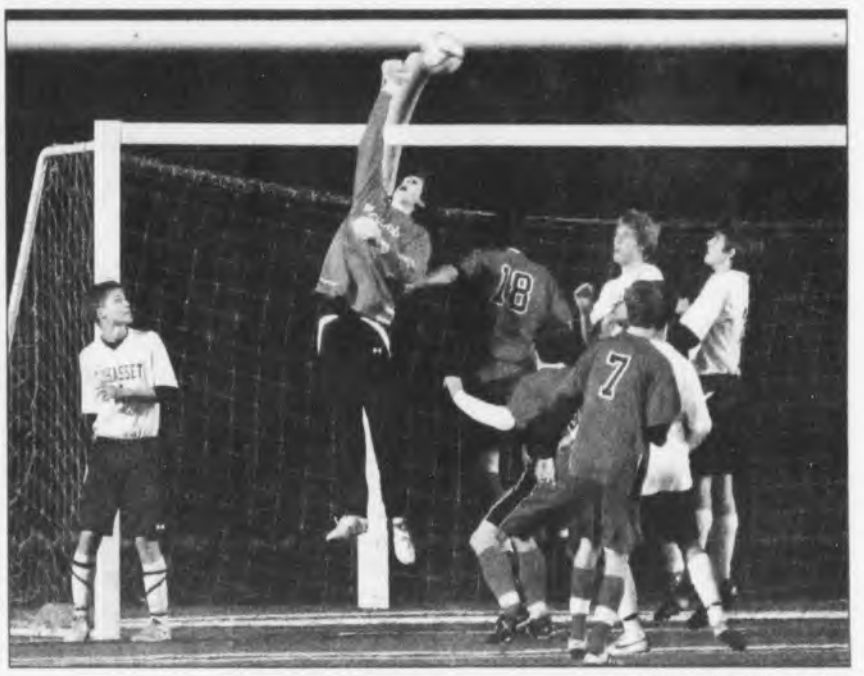
Cohasset boys soccer coach Jim Willis knew his team was beating the odds with two straight 1-0 penalty-kick wins on the way to the MIAA Div. 3 South Sectional Final.



All along, and during the season as well, Willis has talked about how scoring goals was something his team needed to do.

Monday night, the scoring drought caught up with them in a 1-0 loss (regulation) to Dover-Sherborn in the Final at Taunton High School, giving Dover-Sherborn's boys and girls a Finals sweep.

"We just didn't finish our chances," Willis said. "To go three tournament games against teams like Bourne, Cardinal Spellman and Dover-Sherborn without scoring will burn you sooner or later. Five minutes in it hits the post. That was tough."

Cohasset, who controlled the pace in the early going, especially the first 15 minutes, with long passes and a shoot-the-ball mentality had some

GIRLS SOCCER

Total commitment pays off

For the Cohasset girls soccer team, this was a season that could have been a disaster.

Instead, it turned out to be something much more with a trip to the MIAA Div. 3 South Sectional Tournament that included a win at No. 1 seeded and previously unbeaten Nantucket before falling to Carver 5-0 in the quarterfinals.

"I don't want to sound pessimistic at all but when you begin a season not knowing what to expect it can seem a bit overwhelming," said Cohasset coach Deb Beal. "Before we even stepped foot on the field in August I could not stop thinking about what we had lost. In the past two seasons we had virtually lost experience at every position on the field. Then to top that off I had 4-5 key players decide not to return."

Beal's worries eased quickly.

"So "Day One" was looming and it was intimidating. On that first day as the smiles and "hi, how was your summer" wore off and the training began I quickly realized that all my concerns could easily be addressed and solved with a little hard work," she said. "The girls came back in great shape and that makes the battle that much easier."

The personnel losses gave Beal things to think about.

"One of the biggest decisions we had to make was who was going to play defense and how were we going to plan for this," Beal explained. "Offensively I was secure in the sense that we had some returning starters with a great track record of scoring and the ability to take their past experiences and help the younger athletes figure out the style of play. Another area of concern that surfaced was how was our midfield going to play out. Players from last year needed to be jostled around a little bit to secure spots on the field. Our goalkeeping was a big question also."

A plan was not too long in coming.

"A few scrimmages and some more training and we developed a game plan, fastened our seat belts and just went with it," Beal said. "Fortunately the South Shore League was pretty equal across the board with the exception of East Bridgewater and Norwell who clearly stuck out as our leaders. Looking at the scores from the season they were all over the board and most teams had similar records."

Beal said there was a bit of a drop in the middle of the season, but it didn't last long.

"Partway through the season we hit a slump that could have ruined us and
